

PACATA HIBERNIA;
OR,
A HISTORY
OF THE
WARS IN IRELAND,
DURING THE
REIGN OF QUEEN ELIZABETH.

---

Taken from the original Chronicles.

---

Illustrated with Portraits of QUEEN ELIZABETH and the EARL of TOTNESS; and Fac Similes of all the ORIGINAL MAPS and PLANS.

---

VOL. II.

---

FIRST PUBLISHED IN LONDON, 1633.

---

Dublin,
REPRINTED BY THE HIBERNIA-PRESS COMPANY,
No. 1, TEMPLE-LANE
1810.

9H.55 ✓ X

2380.

The judge began the 17th day of October 1871 and ended the 1st of January following an Army of three Regiments of Horse and did Campaign in a Regiment of Horse Commanded to resist the Siege of Rouille. Many months he was the first Tower, by the Lord Duke and part of the Regt. for the 14. December 1691.

CHAP. X.

Intelligence of the Spanish invasion. Two thousand Foote sent to the Lord President. The Spanish Fleete discovered at Sea by Captaine Loue, whereof the Lord President advertised the Lord Deputy. The Lord President makes a Iourney to the Lord Deputy. The Lord Deputy and the Lord President meete at Leighlyn Sir Charles Wilmot advertiseth the Lord President of the discovery of the Spanish fleete, at the mouth of the Haven of Corke. The Spaniards land at Kinsale. A Proclamation made in Kinsale by Don Iuan de Aquila, to give contentment to the Inhabitants. A list of the Captaines in the Spanish Army. Don Iuan his Certificate into Spaine after his landing at Kinsale.

THE President addressed himselfe forthwith to attend his Lordship, but was suddainely stopped by a double occasion. First Sir Francis Barkley being at Galway with one thousand Foote, and fiftie Horse of the Mounster forces, sent him certaine word, that a Spanish ship was landed at Sleigo, which brought assured newes that sixe thousand men were assembled in Spaine ready to bee imbarqued, and with the first wind to come for Ireland, which caused him to recall the said Sir Francis Barkley againe into Mounster, and Sir Charles Wilmot from Kerry, and to take order for the two thousand supplyes, that were now landed out of England; and before he could fully determine these affaires, there arrived one Captaine Thomas Loue at Corke Haven, in the West of Ireland, who sent him word by Letter dated the thirteenth of September, that hee had beene upon the Coast of Spaine in a small man of warre, and had discryed fve and fourtie saile of the Spanish fleete at Sea, to the north of Capefinister, standing to the Northward, by which hee conjectured, that they shaped their course for Ireland; whereupon the President sent a speedy dispatch to the Lord Deputie, being then at Kilkenny, certifying his Lordship, by what suddaine occurrents hee was diverted from his intended journey, where receiving notice thereof (having for a short time reposed himselfe there) returned towards Dublin: These rumors being now noysed throughout all Ireland, every man was in daily expectation of the Spanish fleete, and no sooner could there a ship appeare upon the Coast, but presently it was supposed to be a Spaniard; but there none appeared before the seventeenth of the same Moneth, which the Lord President perceiving, and that the winds still were contrary, and the weather very stormy and tempestuous, remembring how earnestly the Deputie solicited his Company, for causes very important, appoynting Sir Charles Wilmot Governour of Corke; and having set all things in good order as the time would permit; notwithstanding the indisposition of his body being very much distempered, at that time with long and weary journies, made towards the Deputie, and through weaknesse not able to passe beyond Leighlin, there hee stayed, advertising the Lord Deputie (who was then at Rheban) of his being there, which was the nineteenth of September: His Lordship being very glad of his comming, when hee least expected his Company repayred unto him; after congratulations, his Lordship consulted with the President, about such services as hee thought most necessary at that time, in which consultation they spent some houres; and that night they went to Kilkenny, both of them being lodged by the Earle of Ormond in this house. The morrow being the twentieth of that moneth of September, towards night, the Soveraigne of Kinsale sent a Messenger to Sir Charles Wilmot, then in Corke, with Letters importing that there was a fleete of five and fourtie ships discovered from the old head of Kinsale, and that they were past the river of Kinsale, bearing towards the harbour of Corke; the Inhabitants likewise at Corke Harbour, brought him word that the said fleete was discovered afore that Havens mouth, and ready as they thought to put into it: Sir Charles incontinently dispatched a Horseman with Letters to the President who came unto him the three and twentieth, and also sendeth for all the forces of the Province, and Gentlemen of the Countrey, to repaire unto him. The Spaniards being close at the Havens mouth, the wind suddainely scanted, whereupon they tacked about, and made for Kinsale. Within the Towne Captaine William Saxeys Company lay then in garison; but because the Towne was of small strength, unable to withstand so powerfull an Enemy, order was given to Sir Charles Wilmot that they should quit the same, and retraite to Corke. Vpon the three and twentieth of this instant, the Enemy landed their forces in the haven of Kinsale, and marched with five and twentie Colours towards the Towne; upon their approach the Townsmen not being able to make resistance (if they had beene willing thereunto) set open their Gates, and permitted them, without impeachment or contradiction to enter the Towne: The Sovereaigne with his white rod in his hand, going to billet, and cease them in severall houses, more ready then if they had beene the Queenes forces.

To encourage them to persevere, to banish feare, and to winne their loue by gentle and mild vsage, Don Iuan de Aquila, the Spanish Generall, promised this which insueth, published the same, and confirmed it with his hand and Seale, which is thus Englished.

A Proclamation made in Kinsale by Don Iuan de Aquila, to giue contentment to the Inhabitants of Kinsale.

WEe Don Iuan de Aquila, Generall of the Armie. to Philip King of Spaine; by these presents doe promise, that all the Inhabitants of the Towne of Kinsale, shall receiue no injury by any of our retinew, but rather shall bee vsed as our brethren and friends, and that it shall bee lawfull for any of the Inhabitants that list to transport, without any molestation in body or goods, and as much as shall remaine, likewise without any hurt.

Don Iuan de Aquila.

For testimony, that the forces which the said Spanish Generall, were no lesse, but rather more then is reported ; I thought it not impertinent for the Readers better satisfaction, to set downe the names of all the Commanders, Officers, and Captaines that landed with him at Kinsale, and afterward.

The names of the Spanish Commanders and Captaines.

Don Iuan de Aquila Maestro del Campo Generall.

Don francisco de Padilla maestro del Campo,

Antonio Centeno maestro del Campo.

Capitan Don Pedro Morijon.

Captaine Francisco de Pinuoll.

Captaine Pedro Munnez de Xaer.

Captaine Miguel Caxa de Cuellar.

Captaine Andres Leal.

Captaine Don Luis de Vela.

Captaine Don Gomez de Vargas.

Captaine Don Pedro Zuazo.

Captaine Saint Vincente.

Captaine Don Gasper de Guevarra.

Captaine Diego Gonzales Sigler.

Captaine Marcos de Porras.

Captaine Cascarro.

Captaine Don Philipppo de Camonde.

Captaine Pedro de Chauves.

Captaine Don Diego de Vierzina.

Captaine Luis de Carrera.

Captaine Francisco de Muniosa.

Captaine Pedro Enriques de Tejada.

Captaine Don Christouall de Ayala.

Captaine Iuan Ymonez de Carata.

Captaine Alonso de Zaramelle.

Captaine Don Pedro de O Campo.

Captaine Luis Diaz de Navarra.

Captaine Alonso de Motina.

Captaine Diego Palomeque.

Captaine Maldonado.

Captaine Iosepho Escobar.

Captaine Antonio de Tufo Italiano.

Captaine Orlando Italiano.

Captaine Christouall de Cardenosa.

Captaine Y quartel Maestro Miguel Briena.

Captaine Diego de La Villa.

Captaine Hernando Borragan.

Captaine De O Campo.

Captaine Francisco Ruiz de Vellasco.

Captaine Pedro de Saavedra.

Captaine Graneros.

Captaine Andreas de Arve.

Captaine Albornoz.

Captaine Martin Ruyz Sarjento Mayor.

Captaine Luis de Aquila Sarjento Mayor.

Pedro Lopes de Soto Veador Y Contador de la infanteria.

Iuan Ocho a Devasterra Contador de La Artilleria.

Diego Ruyz de Salazar Pagador.

After that Don Iuan was landed and settled in the Towne of Kinsale; by shipping which returned, hee sent into Spaine a relation of his present estate, which is as followeth, translated out of the Originall under his owne hand.

A Discourse of the estate wherein Don Iuan de Aquila doth remaine, with the appointment of such things as hee advertiseth to be needfull for his succour, and good effect of his voyage; translated out of a Spanish discourse.

ON the first of October hee arrived at the Haven of Kinsale, and the day following, Don Iuan landed all his Souldiers; whereof framing two squadrons, hee marched towards the said Towne, out of which there issued fiftie Foote and fourtie Horse, who leaving the place free, went towards the Towne of Corke; the persons of better sort going with them, with all their goods; whereupon there were presently sent in two Companies, and the day following entered all the rest of the Armie, and lodged there, to the end to shelter the Troopes and Munitions under covert, although with great straightnesse, the place contayning not aboue two hundred houses.

The seat and foundation of Kinsale is in a side of a River, invironed in hils, and without any kind of defence, in so much as Don Iuan is of the mind, if the enemy should come (to quarter himselfe neere his front) to try his fortune, because otherwise hee should not bee able to make good the place.

There were disembarked two Field-Pieces, and two Demie-Cannons, leaving the rest of the Artillerie unlanded, not having Munition sufficient for so much Artillery, for that the Powder and Match which remains is little, and the greater quantitie came wett, as well as not to be encombred with so much Artillery, without Horses to draw it, since that with the next succors may be sent munition enough.

There is in the middle of the Haven of Quinsale, a certaine (almost an) Iland, on the which it seemeth good to Don Iuan to haue a Fort made, to secure and defend the Haven; yet is there no convenient place to do it: for on the part that lookes towards the place, an Arme of the Sea divides it from the land, continued somewhat upwards into the land, without having Pinnaces, Boats, or other means to crosse it: and for that the Towne Quinsale is of so great a Seat, and open in so many parts, and so weake, that it is needful to haue halfe the Troupes in guard at least, whensoever they should bee forced to draw out to some good effect, which notwithstanding would not bee in good securitie, the place (almost an island) not having sufficient water, nor is there any place of those adjacent, that yeeldeth means to fortifie it, so that to is necessary to go elsewhere for it, having here nothing to make Cisterns nor Pinnases for a passage, or to bring bavins and faggots, the river being somewhat farther upwards into the land.

He sent to tell Don Diego Borchero, that because the way remayned so ill, hee should assist him before hee went, in causing to be disimbarqued the Bisquet, and afterwards, that all the boats should make three or foure voyages for bavins or gabions, whereof he had great need; the River, as is aforesaid, being somewhat farre aboue, hee answered that he could not attend to this, or disimbarque the Biskets which came in the hulke, which were there, but to returne presently, and so with great haste caused the munitions to bee landed, which they left upon the shore, without account or reason; the Accounter, the Steward of the Artillery remayning, which would not undertake to account for it; and such was the haste, that on the durt and Ooes of the shore they were ill handled, and wet, as if the Enemy had beene already playing with their Artillery on their ships. So soon as Don Iuan had lodged himselfe in the place, hee dispatched to the Earles severall times, advising them of his arrivall; yet in nine dayes that passed until I was dispatched into Spaine, they received no answer: There is from Kinsale to the place where the Earles abide seventie five Leagues; the naturals of the Countrey report the forces of the Earles to bee much lesse then was given out to us, and that the Enemy doth hold them in with forts: The enemies haue drawen together all their Cattell and Corne, and with their Cavellerie breake the Mils, and because wee haue no Horse they presume to come every day up to our Wals, not being able to avoid or hinder it; notwithstanding our sallies against them, insomuch that from without, wee receiue neither flesh nor any other thing, except some few Cowes from the poore people of the place, which they sell the rather unto us, because wee pay them what they demand, yet within few dayes there would bee no flesh had, by reason of the English, who haue engrossed and gathered the Crets together, and burned the houses of the naturals.

Don Iuan doth procure to draw from the Countrey people, by loue and rewards all that he can; yet withall this, findeth no assistance from them, neither dare they declare themselues, and the greater part haue no will, seeing the small forces which haue beene landed, but seeing that there are more, they will bee still comming, and some of them receiue pay, it is very requisit to pay them and arme them; because till now many of them are past to the Enemy: Since the writing of this by Don Iuan de Aquila, there came a spy from Corke, where the Enemy doth joyne together, who saith that the Viceroy had already together more than foure thousand Foote and foure or five hundred Horse, and that the Queene of England had received advertisement of the coming of the Spaniards into Ireland, whereupon were great preparations made for the expulsing them; the Souldiers which were disimbarqued, marched to the number of three thousand and foure hundred; besides those which came in a hulke, now arrived three Leagues from hence, but making a squadron of them, there was a lesse number found, so that it is thought fit to take the first muster with much rigour, taking note of the boyes, and such besides of the rest as are Besognies, who not knowing the use of their Peece, nor how to discharge them, are drawen out to exercise their Armes dayly, many fall sicke, and are already more than one hundred: It is fit that the succour which his Majesty meaneth to send, should be dispatched with speed, because the Enemy may not haue power to engage the places which Don Iuan hath designed to fortifie: It should bee a matter of great importance, and the whole for Horse, by reason of the difference of the Cavallerie, which commeth out of England and that of the Earles, for all that can bee levied in Ireland, or that they haue are small Horses, and the Souldiers are unarmed, which doe only fight with halfe Pikes, and Saddles without stirrops.

Of powder and matches as is aforesaid, there is small store, so that it is necessary to send some good quantitie together with Lead, because there passed but little.

Bisquet and some wine is necessary for the sustenance of our Troopes, because there came not such a quantitie of Bisquet as his Majestie commanded, and was not more than for two Moneths or little more.

It is likewise convenient that there come a great summe of monie, for it imports much to pay well, for want whereof, there rise no disorders, that of friends wee gaine not enemies.

That others may come in the place of the Accounter, and overseer that brought us to the Groyne.

It is convenient to send two Doctors, because there is none in the regiment of Spaniards.

Likewise that an Auditor Generall be sent to serue here, because there is none.

It behooveth also to send Carpenters and Smiths, or Farriers being very necessary.

And that his Majesty bee served, that there might remaine here three or foure ships to giue advise of whatsoever shall succeed, there being none left here at this present.

The next day after Don Iuan was landed, Sir Charles Wilmot sent Captaine Francis Slingsby with his foote Company, and Sir Anthony Cookes Horse, with directions to take the best view hee could of their flecte and forces, who at his coming thither, found them possessed both of the Towne of Kinsale, and of the Castle of Rincorran, neere adjoining unto it; and to bid him welcome, they drew forth a Company or two of Foote, and a skirmish for a little space was entertayned, wherein there were some hurt, but none slaine; Captaine Slingsby having performed his directions returned to Corke.

---

CHAP. XI.

Second Letter from Sir Charles Wilmot of the arrivall of all the Spaniards in Kinsale. Debate in Councell what was meetest for the Lord Deputy to doe. The Lord Deputy assented to the Lord Presidents advise. The Lord Presidents providence. A dispatch into England of the Spaniards arrivall. The Lord Deputy goeth with the Lord President into Mounster. None of the Provincials of Mounster did adhere to the Spaniards at their first landing. The Report of a Master of a Scottish Barque concerning the Strength of the Spaniard. Captaine Flower sent to view Kinsale. Directions given for the burning of the Corne neere Kinsale. A Letter from the Archbishop of Dublin, and Don Iuan de Aquila unto Tyrone and O Donnell. The Lord Deputy and Lord President &c. went to view the Towne of Kinsale. The Lord Deputy with the Army marched towards Kinsale.

AT the instant when Sir Charles Wilmots Letters of the Spaniards arrivall came to Kilkenny, which was upon the three and twentieth of September, as aforementioned; the Lord Deputie, the Earl of Ormond, the Lord President, Sir Richard Wingfielde Marshall of the Army of Ireland, and Sir Robert Gardiner the chiefe Iustice, were in Councell, advising what course was to be taken if the Spaniards should land: but now Sir Charles Wilmot's Letters gaue them cause to advise what should be done, they being landed, & to confirme the same; while they were in Councell, second Letters came from Sir Charles Wilmot, and the Major of Corke, that the Spaniards had quitted the harbour of Corke, and were all at an Anchor in the haven of Kinsale: The question was then, what the Lord Deputy should doe: The Earle of Ormond, the Marshall, and the chiefe Iustice were of opinion, that hee should doe well to hasten to Dublin, and there to assemble his forces together; and whilest they were drawing to a head, to giue orders for supplies, of victuals and munitions to bee sent to Corke; and that the President should presently bee dispatched into the Province, to defend the Citie of Corke, untill the Lord Deputie came to his reliefe, wherein all expedition was to vsed, for the reasons were, that if the Lord Deputie presented himselfe in the Province with small forces, it would encourage the Enemy, and put distrust and feare in the provincials, which were either well affected or neutrals.

The Presidents advise was opposite to theirs, beseeching the Lord Deputy to goe presently into Mounster although hee had no more then his Page with him; for said he, if the Provincials shall see that you turne your backe towards them, the will conceiue it proceeds of want of force, and then undoubtedly a generall revolt will ensue, but when they shall see you personally amongst them, that doubt will be removed; and besides, the Armie (now dispersed) will make more haste after you, then they would doe if you attended their comming to Dublin.

The Lord Deputy inclined to the Presidents Councell, but said he, what should I doe there, not being able to mainetaine the Armie with victuals for the space of a weeke, nor to furnish it with munitions, of both which there is no remaine in the Magazines in Dublin: The President willed him to take no care for those wants, for hee would furnish him, and the whole Armie for two or three moneths, which indeed hee was able to doe, for hee had spared the expence of victuals, not consuming so much as a Bisquet, for more then sixe moneths, giving the Souldiers money, and having beene evermore confident of the Spaniards arrivall, had procured good supplyes of munitions, which were frugally and sparingly issued: The Lord Deputy like unto one that was overjoyed with such unexpected provisions, rose from his Chaire, embraced the President, and said, that if hee had not beene more then provident, that himselfe did not know what to haue done, and that his honour had beene indangered, and ascribed to him what hee well deserved.

In conclusion the foure and twentieth, the Marshall Sir Henry Davers, and Sir Iohn Barkley were dispatched into Linster and to Armaghe, to assemble the Army, and to bring it with all possible expedition into Mounster, and Letters were dispatched to Sir Charles Wilmot to bee well upon his guard, and dispatches sent into England by Captaine Iohn Roberts of the Spaniards arrivall: All things being thus ordered, doubt was made how the Lord Deputy could be conveyed safely to Corke, being attended by no other then his household servants in that dangerous time, which was satisfied by the President, who had then with him there one hundred Horse, and for the furnishing of the Lord Deputies house at Corke, with stufte and vtensils hee undertooke the care. The same day the Lord Deputy and President, Sir Robert Gardiner departed from Kilkenny, and the same night they lodged at Kilkenan the Lord Dunboynes house, the next night at Clonmell, the sixe and twentieth at Glanogher the Lord Roches house, and the next day following they came to Corke.

Now are wee come to siege of Kinsale, a place ordayned, wherein the honour and safetie of Queene Elizabeth, the reputation of the English nation, the cause of Religion, and the Crowne of Ireland must bee by Armes disputed; for upon the successes of this siege, as these great and important consequences depended: And here the malice of Rome and Spaine (if they had prevailed) would not haue ceased, for their purposes did extend it selfe; (Ireland having beene conquered) to make it their bridge to haue invaded England, the conquest and ruine whereof was the maine marke, whereat they aimed.

It was generally expected, that upon the first landing of the Spaniards, that the greatest part of Mounster would haue presently relapsed, and haue declared themselues Spanish; but the President had so well established the Province, by the apprehending of all the Principals which hee mistrusted, and by taking good pledges of the rest; that when the Lord Deputy came to Corke, hee presented unto him all the men of living, and quality in the Province, who stood firme untill the coming of supplyes to Castlehaven, as hereafter you shall heare.

The eight and twentieth the Lord President brought the master of a Scottish barke to the Lord Deputy which came from Lisbon, who confidently reported, that the Spaniards (when they were embarked for Ireland) were sixe thousand strong: And the same day we heard that none of the Irish had repaired to Kinsale (to tender their service to the Spaniards) but onely some dependants of Florence Mac Carties, and that Don Iohn and his Captaines were much grieved that Florence was sent prisoner into England, of whose restraint they understood nothing untill they were arrived : And also wee were advertised, that at Kinsale five and thirtie ships arrived with Don Iohn, and that the rest of his fleete were driven into Baltimore having in them seven hundred Souldiers, and that they brought with them sixteene hundred Saddles, hoping (as they were promised) to find horses in Ireland, and a great surplus of Armes to furnish the Irish; and the Companies with Don Iohn, for the most part were old Souldiers taken from the garisons of Italy and the Terceras, and that there was but a few Besognies amongst them.

The same day Captaine George Flower (Sergeant Major of the Province of Mounster) was sent with certaine Companies to view the Towne of Kinsale, to see what countenance the Enemy did hold, hee no sooner approached the Towne, but the Spaniards sallied, our men beate them into the Towne, and were so eager in pursuit, as they came to the Port, and would haue set fire unto it, if Flower had not drawen them off; in this skirmish wee had some men hurt, and the Enemy both slaine and hurt : Also the same day, certaine Companies were directed to march into Kinaley, to burne and spoyle all the corne in that Countrey, and within five miles of Kinsale, and to command all the Inhabitants in those parts, to bring their Cattle on this side the river of Awneboy and Corke, whereby the Enemy should want reliefe neere unto them.

To hasten the comming of Tyrone and O Donnell the Spanish Arch-bishop of Dublin, and Don Iuan de Aquila wrote unto them as followeth.

A Letter from the Archbishop of Dublin, and Don Iuan de Aquila, unto Tyrone and Odonnell.

Pervenimus in Kinsale, cum classe & exercitu, Regis nostri Philippi; expectamus vestras excellentias qualibet hora, veniant ergo quàm velociter potuerint, portantes equos, quibus maximè indigemus, & jam alia via scripsimus, non dico plura. valete.

Frater Matheus Archiepiscopus Dublinens.

A Qui estamos guardando a vuestras Senorias ilustrissimas Como largamente otra via hemos escritos, A Dios. 12. Octob. 1601.

Don Iuan de Aquila.

Excellentissimis Dominis

Don Oneale and Odonnell.

This day the Lord Deputie, the Lord President and Councell, with divers others went to Kinsale to take a view thereof, and found at their comming thither that the shipping had newly left the harbour, and were under saile for Spaine, so as they saw nothing was further to bee done till the comming of the forces.

The third of October Sir William Fortescu with his Company of Foot, and Sir Beniamin Berry with the Lord deputies came to Corke.

The Marshall (who was sent from Kilkenny to draw Companies out of the Pale) came this day with Sir George Bouchier to Corke, where at that time remained the Lord Deputie, the Lord President, Sir Robert Gardiner, and Sir Nicholas Walsh, Councellors, expecting them and others; Sir Iohn Barkley came that day also.

The Companies came to Corke, that Sir Iohn Barkley had brought with him.

Sir Henrie Davers, who was sent for the Forces about Armaghe, came to Corke with Sir Henry Folliet, captaine Blany and diuers other Captaines.

Master Marshall and Sir Iohn Barkley with some Horse and Foote went to Kinsale, to view a fit place to encampe in.

The Companies that Sir Henry Davers went for, came this day to Corke. Some Horse and Foot sent forth to keepe the Spanyards from Victuals.

Two Frenchmen were voluntarily taken, that ranne away from the Spanyards, who confessed their numbers to be three thousand five hundred, besides those that were not yet come in.

It was resolved to take the field, but no great Ordinance came yet to enable us thereunto.

The weather fell out so rainy, as it was unfit to rise.

The Lord Deputie left Corke, and encamped with the Armie at a place called Owneboy, five miles from Kinsale; the Artillery, Munition, and Victualls which were to come from Dublin was not yet arrived; yet was it thought fit, (being thereof supplied by the Presidents store) to take the field, rather then the Countrie should discover those wants, and so fall away.

---

CHAP. XII.

The Lord President requireth the Townes of Mounster to send Companies of Foot to the Campe. Don Iuan de Aquila his Declaration in answer of a Proclamation published by the Lord Deputy and Councell. The Army encamped at Knockrobyn neere Kynsale. The enemy attempted to disturbe our Quarter, but were repulsed. A skirmish betweene vs and the Spanyard. Captaine Button arrived with Munition and Victuals. A Skirmish in the night, wherein twenty of the Spanyards were slayne. The Army encamped close to Kynsale. A prey of Cowes taken from the Spanyards.

THE Lord President (in his providence) before the Army was ready to march to Kinsale, acquainted the Lo: Deputie, (which hee well approoved) that hee had sent to the Cities and great Townes of Mounster, that every of them, (according to their proportions) should send Companies of Foot from their severall Corporations, to strengthen her Majesties Army, which they accordingly (but with some grudging) did performe. This he did, not for any opinion he had to receiue fruit by their services, but their being in the Campe, was a good Pledge upon the Townes (in these doubtfull times) for their better loyalties, the Lord Deputie not being able to spare any Companies to secure them.

The Lord Deputie and Councill, before the Armie marched from Corke, doubting (as they had good cause) that the Priests would leaue no practises unattempted, that might animate or confirme the Irish in their Rebellion, thought it necessary to giue notice to the world, how uniust the pretended causes were, that the Irish had taken Armes against their true annoynted Soveraigne; and also how unjustly the same was maintained by the Pope and the King of Spaine, which by Proclamation was divulged in the Citie of Corke; In answeare whereof Don Iuan de Aquila (assoone as it came to his eares) did likewise Proclaime this Declaration, or Apologie in Kinsale, and dispersed Copies thereof into sundry places, the tenour whereof ensueth.

Don Iuan de Aquila *his Declaration in answere
of a Proclamation published by the Lord Deputie and Councell, translated out of the Latine.*

DOn Iuan de Aquila, Generall of the Warre, and the Catholique King of Spaines chiefe Commander in Gods warre, which is made in Ireland for defence of the Faith. To all the Irish Catholiques living in Kinsale, the Citie of Corke, and in all other Villages, Cities and Castles, wisheth health in him who is the true happinesse. There is come unto our eares a Proclamation, or certaine Libell made in the Citie of Corke, in the Name of the Deputie; which because it containeth many untruths, and such things as offend the eares of honest men, lest they may leade and seduce the mindes of simple men into errours, and turne them from the truth, I am compelled to shew their falsehood, to lay open the trueth, and in fewe words to signifie the pretence and intention of our most Excellent King Philip, in this Warre, which is with the Apostolique Authoritie, to be administred by us: and (to speake the truth) I could very easily retort vpon them those reproaches which they object to us, and make them lose the pleasure which they haue taken in ill speaking, by hearing of the like; Notwithstanding, we will not (like unto weake and unarmed women) goe to reproachings: but setting these things aside, answer to those that are objected with sound truth and Christian modestie,

First of all, yee faine that wee would leade away the pretended Subjects of the Queene of England from their obedience, to bring them under our yoke, which is a very untruth; for wee endeavour not to perswade any body, that hee should deny due obedience (according to the word of God) to his Prince: But yee know well that for many yeares since, Elizabeth was deprived of her kingdome, and all her Subjects absolved from their fidelity by the Pope, unto whom, hee that raigneth in the heavens, the King of Kings, hath committed all power, that hee should roote up, destroy, plant, and build in such sort, that hee may punish temporall Kings (if it shall be good for the spirituall building) even to their deposing, which thing hath beene done in the kingdomes of England and Ireland, by many Popes, viz. by Pius quintus, Gregory the thirteenth, and now by Clement the eighth as it is well knowen. Whose Bulls are extant amongst us; I speake to Catholikes, not to froward Heretikes, (who haue fallen from the faith of the Romane Church) seeing they are blind Leaders of the blind, and such as know not the grounds of the truth, it is no marvell that they doe also disagree from us in this thing: But our brethren the Catholikes, walking in the purenesse of the faith, and yeelding to the Catholike Church (which is the very Pillar of the truth) will easily understand all those things: Therefore it remayneth that the Irish (which adhere to us) doe worke with us nothing that is against Gods Lawes, or their due obedience, nay that which they doe is according to Gods word, and the obedience which they owe the Pope.

Secondly, yee affirme that wee Spaniards goe about to winne the Irish with allurements, and fained flatteries (which is a thing farre from our nature) and that wee doe it but for a while; that after wee haue drawen the minds of simple men unto us, wee might afterwards (exercising our cruelty towards them) shew our bloody nature: O the immortall God! who doth not wonder at your bitter and unexpressible cruelty, and your boldnesse shewed in these words: For who is it that doth not know the great cruelty which you English haue exercised, and cease not to exercise towards the miserable Irish: You I say goe about to take from their soules the Catholike faith which their fathers held, in which consists eternall life; truely you are farre more cruell then Beares and Lyons, which take away the temporall life, for you woud deprive them of the eternall and spirituall life. Who is it that hath demolished all the temporalities of this most flourishing kingdome except the English? looke upon this and bee ashamed: whereas on the other side wee commiserating the condition of the Catholikes here, haue left our most sweet and happy Countrey Spaine, that is replenished with all good things; and being stirred with their cryes, which pierce the heavens, having reached to the eares of the Pope, and our King Philip: They haue (being moved with pitie) at last resolved to send unto you Souldiers, Silver, Gold, and Armes with a most liberall hand, not to the end they might (according as they faine) exercise cruelty towards you, O Irish Catholikes, but that you may bee happily reduced (being snatched out of the jawes of the divell, and free from their tyranny) unto your owne pristine ingenuitie, and that you may freely professe the Catholike faith : Therefore my most beloved, seeing that which you haue so many yeares before desired and begged for, with prayers and teares ; and that now, even now, the Pope Christs Vicar on earth, doth command you to take Armes for the defence of your faith : I admonish, exhort, and beseech you all ; all I say unto whom these Letters shall come ; that as soone as possibly you can, you come to us with your friends and weapons ; whosoever shall doe this, shall find us prepared, and wee will communicate unto them, those things which wee possesse : And whosoever shall (despising our wholesome councell) doe otherwise, and remaine in the obedience of the English, wee will persecute him as an Heretike, and a hatefull Enemy of the Church even unto death.

The Army rose and marched within halfe a mile of Kinsale, where they encamped under a hill (having not meanes to entrench) called Knock Robbin. Capitaine Morgan came out of England, and Iolly the Master Gunner from Waterford, whither some shipping was come from Dublin, with part of the provisions, but enforced to stay there, the wind being Southerly ; some few shot offered to disquiet the Campe, but were soone beaten backe with very little disturbance.

The Army lay still there, many places viewed to sit downe fitly before the Towne, but the Artillery not yet come, no place was agreed upon.

An other offer made by the Enemy to disturbe the Campe that night, much greater then the former; but being readily answered, were soone repelled without hurt on our side.

Wee lay still there expecting the Provisions, some slight skirmishes in viewing of the Towne: Sir Iohn Barkley was this night appointed to giue an Allarme to the Towne, who beat in all the guards (without the Towne) into their trenches.

This night one thousand of the Spanyards, (or as some that came from them say, fiftene hundred) were come to the top of the Hill neere the Campe, to cut off some of the Scouts or Guards, or to attempt somewhat upon that Quarter; but being discovered by a partie of ours, (not much exceeding two hundred that were of purpose sent out to lye betweene the Towne and our Campe, commaunded by Sir Iohn Barkley, who had with him Captaine Morris) they set upon them, killed foure dead in the place, divers hurt, tooke some Armes, and other good spoyle, and beat them backe to the Towne; without losse of any one of our men, and not aboue three hurt.

Cormocke Mac Dermond, chiefe Lord of a Countrey called Muskery, comming with his Countrey rising out, to shew them to the Lord Deputie, was in his returne directed to march hard by the Spaniards trenches, which they had made upon the Hill without the Towne for their guards, which hee was willed to doe, the rather that the Spaniards might see the Irish serue on our sides. For this purpose were good seconds appoynted, yet out of sight of the Enemies: The Irish at the first went on well, & beat the Spaniards from their ground to the Towneward, but according to their custome soone fell off; by which meanes a Horseman (called Courcy) of the Lord Presidents, who had charged two Spaniards upon some advantage, was ingaged, and unhorsed before hee espyed himselfe in danger; which Sir William Godolphin seeing, who had the command of the Lord Deputies Troupe, charged one way upon their whole Numbers, and Captaine Henry Barkley, Cornet of the same Troupe, an other way at the same instant, and (notwithstanding their many Shott) draue them out of their Trenches, rescuing the Horseman and horse; and to the marvell of all the beholders, (considering the multitude of shot made at them, even upon the edge of the trench) came off without hurt, saue onely one horse killed, and one man slightly shot: of the enemies were killed foure, left dead in the place, and divers scene caried off, besides many other hurt.

Captaine Thomas Button, who had the wafting of the victualls with Munition from Dublin with the Queenes Pinnace, the Moone, arrived at Corke, and came to the Lord Deputie at the Campe, signifying the rest of the Shipping was comming from Dublin, that had layen at Waterford: He was that night sent away to bring his Ship about into the Harbour of Kinsale, and with Captaine Wards ship, which was directed to accompany him, whom wee were inforced to make use of before to guard that Victuall and Munition in Oyster Haven, which wee had brought with us from Corke, they were willed to trie if they could annoy the Castle of Rincorran, seated close upon the Harbour, and possessed by the Spanyard. But after they had spent many shott upon the Castle, and found they did them little hurt, their Ordnance being but small, they lay still onely to keepe the Harbour, that neither the Castle nor the Towne might be relieved by water, which was the chiefe cause of their sending thither, and which Captaine Thomas Button, notwithstanding many attempts made by the Spanyards and Natiues, very valiantly to his high commendations performed.

Wee had Newes of the shipping that came after Captaine Button from Waterford, that they were put into the Harbour at Corke, who presently had direction to worke about to another Creak, called Oyster Haven, lying betweene Corke and Kinsale, from whence they might more commodiously unlade their Artillery and provisions, for the speedy use of the Army.

Wee resolved to rise and lye before the Towne ; but the shipping being not yet come about with the Artillery, and other necessaries, that day was spent in dispatching into England, and making all things fit to remooue. This night Captaine Blaynie, and Captaine Flower were sent out with five hundred Foote upon Discoverie that the Spanyards were drawne out of the Towne, and so lay readie for them, if they had come towards our Quarter, but they came not on.

The Army was ready to rise, but the weather falling out very fowle, direction was given to dislodge : foure naturall Spaniards came this day from the Enemy, choosing rather to put themselves upon the mercy of the State, then to liue under the tyrannie of their owne Commanders, who the next day were sent to Corke. This night Sir Iohn Barkley went out with some three hundred Foote, having with him Captaine Flower, Captaine Morris, and Captaine Bostock, out of these were chosen sixtie Pikes and Targets, to be the better undiscovered, who fell into their trenches, beate them to the Towne, and fell into the Gate with them, they killed and hurt aboue twentie of the Spaniards, betweene the Inner and the owter Gate, and returned having but three hurt.

The Army dislodged early, and encamped on a hill on the North side before Kinsale called the Spittle, somewhat more then musket shot from the Towne, and there intrenched strongly: when we sate downe, wee discovered that the Spaniards had gotten a prey of two or three hundred Cowes, and many sheepe, which were (in an Iland as it seemed) upon the Southside of the Towne beyond the water, which wee could not come at, but by sending eight or nine miles about, where there was a necke of Land to goe into it; Captaine Taffe being sent with Horse and Foot, used such expedition in that businesse, as hee attayned the place before night, and by hote skirmish recovered the prey, saue onely some two hundred Cowes that the Spaniards had killed, although they were under the guard of a Castle, called Castle Ny Parke, which the Spaniards had manned to defend those Cattle.

---

CHAP. XIII.

The Castle of Rincorran guarded by the Spaniards, besieged; and the Spaniards repulsed. The Castle of Rincorran battered by the Lord President. A remarkeable skirmish betweene us and the Spaniards that attempted to releue Rincorran. The Lord Awdley, Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn, and Sir Garret Harvy hurt. A Spanish Commander taken prisoner. The Enemy demanded a parley, but the Lord President refused to treat with the Messenger. The Commander parlied, but his offers were not accepted. The Enemy endeavoured to make an escape, wherein many were slaine and taken prisoners. Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn sent from the Lord Deputy with direction to the Lord President. The reasons that induced the Lord President to receiue the Spaniards that were in Rincorran to mercy. The agreement betweene the Lord President, and the Spanish Commander that was in Rincorran.

WEe attended all that day for the landing of the Artillery, and perfected the intrenchment about the Armie, which was left unperfected the day before through the extreame fowlenesse of the weather; and at night Sir Iohn Barkley, Sir William Godolphin, and Captaine Bodly were sent to view the most commodious place to plant the Artillery, for the battering of the Castle of Rincorran, which was situated upon the River of Kinsale, something more then a quarter of a mile from the Towne, very convenient to forbid our shipping to ride neere the same, wherein Don Iohn de Aquila the Spanish Generall, had placed a Captaine with one hundred and fiftie Souldiers, whom hee promised to relecue if they were assayled, or bring them off in boats.

The two Culverings were landed, and all meanes vsed to mount them, but it could not bee done till the next day, so ill was every thing fitted, by reason there had beene no use of them of a long time.

These two Peeces were mounted, and all things put in a readinesse to batter the next day, the Spaniards in the Towne discovering our purpose, did that night assay to relecue the Castle by Boats, and were valiantly repelled by Captaine Button, with shot out of his ship.

The two Culverings began to play upon the Castle of Rincorran, but within two or three shot the cariage of the better Culvering brake, and about two of the clock in the afternoone, the other received a flawe, and by that meanes made unserviceable, so all that could bee done that day, was to mount the whole Culvering upon her cariage.

The same day they gaue an Alarme to our Campe, drawing Artillery out of the Towne, and with it played into our Campe, kild two neere the Lord Deputies tent with a Demy Cannon shot, and through the next tent to it, brake two Hogsheads of the Lord Deputies beere, and every shot that was made fell still in the Lord Deputies quarter neere his owne tent. Don Iuan de Aquila perceiving the Castle would be distressed, attempted to releue it by Boats, but Sir Richard Percy beate them off, who had the command of the Lord Presidents regiment, that this night was appointed to guard.

The Culvering in the morning began to play, and about nine of the clock the Demy Culvering was mounted, which after a few shot brake her Axel-tree; before three she was remounted, and by that time a Cannon likewise planted, and all the three Peeces without intermission played: The Lord President misliking the manner of the making of the battery, not being constantly made upon one place, but upon the Spikes of the Castle, requested the Lord Deputie to leaue that service to his care, whereunto he easily assented

To shew that hee was well experienced in the profession of a cannonier, wherein he had beene (by reason of his employments) long practised, he performed the office of a Master-gunner, making some shot, and that the Artillery might play as well by night as day, himselfe did take and score out his ground-markes, and with his Quadrant tooke the true levell, so as the want of day-light was no hinderance; but in doing thereof he fairely escaped two Musket shott: for as he was standing at the Breech of a Cannon busie about his worke, the one lighted upon the muzzle of the Peece, the other upon the Carriage close to the Trunnions: While wee were busie attending the Battery, five hundred of the principall men drew out of Kinsale, with shew to goe to relieue Rincorran by land, toward a guard wee kept betweene Rincorran and the Towne, leaving a great grosse for the seconds under the walles, and under that colour to gaine a safe passage for their Boates thither; whereupon out of the Regiments (being then in Armes in the Campe) divers broken Companies drew that way, amongst which Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn sent Captaine Roe his Lieutenant Colonell, and Sir Arthur Savages Lieutenant with one hundred men, and seeing them likely to draw on a round Skirmish, tooke thirtie shott of his owne Company, and went up to them, where hee found Captaine Roe, and Carbery, (Lieutenant to Captaine Thomas Butler) skirmishing with Shot, the Enemy being hard by them with some two hundred men, and another grosse neere towards the

Towne to second them. The Lord Audley who drew some of his Regiment out of the Campe, was then coming up; assoone as Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn came where the skirmish was, hee saw the Enemies drawing up to giue a charge, comming close with their Pikes, whom they presently encountered, and beat them back towards their seconds, and made them retreat apace; Notwithstanding they played upon them with their small shott out of every house in that quarter of the Towne, being full of Towers and Castles.

In this Charge, Sir Oliver received on his Target and Body divers thrusts with the Pike, whereof one gaue him a very small hurt in the thigh; he killed a Leader, and one other with his owne hands. The Lord Audley coming up to the charge was shot through the thigh, Sir Garret Harvie hurt in the hand, and his horse killed under him, Capitaine Butlers Lieutenant was slaine, and foure other, Sir Arthur Savages Lieutenant shot through the Body, and thirtie other hurt; the Enemy left ten or eleuen dead in the place, besides those that were hurt, which in all likelihood were many, by reason of the neernesse of the shot; and as one reporteth, (that came the next day from Kinsale, and had bin in the Ghesthouse amongst them) 70 were brought thither hurt, whereof eight dyed that night: In this skirmish was taken prisoner Iuan Hortensio de Contreras, that had been Sergeant Major of the forces in Brittany, and divers very good Armes, and Rapiers gotten from the Spaniards.

All this while the three Peeces played upon the Castle, untill sixe of the clock at night, at which time they in the Castle sounded the Drum, and prayed admission of parley, which the Lord President, (whom the Lord Deputie had left there, himselfe returning to take care of the Campe) accepted, there came with their Drum an Irish man borne in Corke, who prayed in the name of the rest, that they might bee licensed to depart to Kinsale with their Armes, bag and baggage; this being denyed by the Lord President (who would not conclude with any, but the Commander of the place) hee returned the Messenger, willing him to tell the Commander that no other but himselfe should bee heard, and that hee had no commission to grant them any other composition then to yeeld to her Majesties mercy: Then immediately they sent the Drum againe, and with him a Serjeant called Pedro de Herodiay cuacola whom the Lord President refused to speake withall, upon whose returne the Commander himselfe called Bartholomeo Paez de Clavijo an Alfero, came to the Lord President, but not agreeing upon the conditions, for hee still insisted to depart with their Armes to Kinsale (being put safe into the Castle) the battery began afresh, and the Defendants bestowed thicker vollies of shot then at any time before; at length about two of the clock, when they found the weake estate the Castle was growen into by furie of the battery, they sounded againe their Drumme for an other parley, which not being accepted, many of them endeavoured to escape under the Rocke close to the water side, which being espied by us our men ran presently close to the Castle wals, and if the Lord President had not forbidden them (although the breach was not sufficiently assaultable) they would have entered the house of those who attempted to escape, there were three and twentie Spaniards taken; and of this Countrey birth a great multitude of Churles, women and children, there was likewise slaine of the Spaniards towards thirtie; all this while the Enemy shot not a shot, but as men amazed lay still; of the Irish there was not a man taken that bare weapon, all of them being good Guids escaped, onely one Dermond Mac Cartie, by them called Don Dermutio was taken, who was then a pensioner to the King of Spaine, and heretofore a servant to Florence Mac Cartie.

A good while before day, the Lord Deputie sent Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn to the President, to signifie his pleasure unto him; which was if they would render themselues, hee should accept of their offer, excepting the Irish; not long after Sir Oliver Saint Iohn was departed (that no error might bee committed;) towards the morning the Lord President went to the Lord Deputie, to make relation of that nights proceeding, and upon deliberation, it was thought convenient, if the Spaniards would quit their Armes and render the place, with promise of life onely to bee sent into Spaine, that they should bee received to mercy, the consideration whereof grew upon these reasons, the one because in forcing a breach it was likely many good men should bee lost, and also to intice others that are in Kinsale to leaue the place (wherein they felt misery) by the example of this mercifull dealing with those of Rincorran, but especially because expedition in the taking of this Castle had many important consequences.

About one houre after day, the Commander sent word to the Lord President that hee would render the place, and quit all their Armes, so as they might be sent to Kinsale, which being refused, hee entreated onely that himselfe might hold his armes, and bee sent to Kinsale, which also being denyed, hee resolutely determined to bury himselfe in the Castle, and not to yeeld: his Company seeing his obstinacie, did threaten him to cast him out of the breach, so as they might be received to mercy; in the end it was concluded that all his people should be disarmed in the house, which was done by Captaine Roger Harvie, Captaine of the Guards that night, and himselfe to weare his sword untill hee came to the President, and then render it unto him, which being performed upon his knees, they were brought prisoners into the Campe, and from thence immediately sent unto Corke.

The last of October, the President received a gracious Letter from her Majestie, all written with her owne hand, it was short, but yet therein is liuely expressed in what a thankefull sort his service was accepted, the true Copie whereof ensueth.

---

CHAPTER XIV.

Her Majesties Letter to the Lord President. A supply of Munition and victuals. A resolution in Councell that Forces should be sent to encounter O Donnell. The Lord President of a contrary opinion, and his reasons. The reasons why this service was imposed upon the Lord President. The Lord President marcheth towards O Donnell. O Donnell lodgeth neere the Holy Crosse, and the strength of his quarter. O Donnell by the meanes of a great Frost, passed over the Mountaine of Shewophelim, whereby he escaped from fighting with the Lord President. O Donnells hasty march. The principall men that were in O Donnells Army. The principall men in Tyrones Armie.

Her Maiesties Letter unto the Lo. President.

MY faithfull Gorge, if ever more service of worth were performed in shorter space, than you haue done, Wee are deceived; among many eye-witnesses, Wee haue received the fruit thereof, and bid you faithfully credit, that what so Witt, Courage, or Care may doe, Wee truely finde, they

haue beene all truly acted in all your Charge, and for the same beleue, that it shall neither bee unre-membered, nor unrewarded: And in meane while beleue, my Helpe nor Prayers shall never faile you.

Your Sovereigne that best regards you,

ELIZ. R.

The second of November the Ordnance was drawne from Rincorran to the Campe.

The third, the Spanish Sergeant Major which had been taken prisoner upon the last of October, and the Alferes, which rendred himself upon the condition of life at Rincorran, obtained licence to write to Don Iuan, and one of our Drummes was sent to carry their Letters.

The fifth, foure Barques with Munitions and Victuals from Dublin, arrived in the Haven of Kinsale.

The sixth, upon certaine knowledge that Tyrone and O Donnell were drawing towards Mounster, the trenches of the Campe were made deeper and higher.

The seventh, the Lord Deputie having Intelligence that Odonnell with a great part of the Northern forces was advanced neere unto the Province, to joyne with the Spanyards, and that Tyrone was but a few dayes journeyes short of him, it was debated in Councell, whether it were necessary that Forces should be sent towards him, to divert his intention: It was agreed by the greater part, that two or three Regiments of Foot, and some Horse should bee employed in that service. The President was of a contrary opinion, alledging for instance, that Tyrone, at his late being in Mounster, at whose returne the Earle of Ormond having good Especials, and very desirous to fight with him, yet could never haue sight of him, or of any of his company; and the reasons (sayd he) are very apparant, for they are sure to haue the Countrey to friend, to giue them howerly intelligence of our lodging and marches, and they are so light-footed, as if they once get the start of us, be it never so little, wee shall hardly or never overtake them. Notwithstanding these reasons, it was concluded that Forces should be sent; and for so much as the Countrey would be more willing to giue assistance to the Lord President, then to any other; as also because hee was best acquainted with the passages, and places of advantage, to giue Odonnell impediment: Hee was commaunded with his owne Regiment, and Sir Charles Wilmots, which were in List two thousand one hundred and fiftie, (but not by pole aboue one thousand, and three hundred and fiftie Horse in List, which were by pole two hundred and fiftie) to undertake the Service; and for his better strength Sir Christopher

Saint-Laurence (who with his Regiment was coming into Mounster, and was to meet him upon the way) should joyne with him, and also the Rising out of the Countrey. The President in Obedience, though without hope to meete with an Enemy, that hath no will to hazard his Troupes in fight, (for so hee conceived of Odonnell) the seventh of November left the Campe, and never ceased travelling untill with long and weary Marches hee came to Ardmaile in the Countie of Tipperary. Odonnell with his sharking Troupes, lodging not farre from the Holy Crosse, their Campes not being distant the one from the other aboute foure miles: But the Countrey stood so partially affected to the Traytors, as by no promise of reward, or other satisfaction could they bee induced to drawe any draught upon them: by reason whereof, (but with great disadvantage) no probable attempt of good successe could bee made upon them, being lodged (as they were) in a strong Fastnesse of Bogg and Wood, which was on every quarter plashed: For avoyding of confusion, I must aske some pardon of the Reader, to continue the Discourse of the Presidents Iourney, untill I speake any more of the siege at Kinsale: Odonnell on the other side fearing our forces, (which were increased by a Regiment of Foot, and some Horse, which Sir Christopher Saint-Laurence brought with him, durst not enter farther into the Countrey, because hee could not avoyd us, and at that time hee and no other way to passe; for the Mountaine of Slewphelim (which in Summer time is a good ground to passe over) was by reason of great raines, so wett and boggye, as that no Carriage or Horse could passe it.

This Mountaine is in the county of Typperarie, towards the Shenan, and from thence to come into the county of Limerick, the passage is through a straight, neere to the Abbey of Ownhy, which Abbey, from the place where Odonnell incamped in Omaghers Countrey, is at the least twentie Irish miles, having (as wee thought by lodging where wee did) prevented his passage, there hapned a great frost, the like whereof hath beene seldome scene in Ireland, and the Enemy being desirous to avoid us, taking the advantage of the time, rose in the night and marched over the Mountaine aforesaid; whereof as soone as wee were advertised, wee likewise rose from Cassell, whither wee were drawen (mistrusting that they would take the advantage of the frost) fower houres before day, in hope to crosse him before hee should passe the Abbey of Ownhy, supposing that it had not beene possible for him to haue marched farther (with his cariage) without resting: The next morning by eleaven of the clock wee were hard by the Abbey, but then wee understood that Odonnell made no stay there, but hastned to a house of the Countesse of Kildares called Crome, twelue miles from the Abby of Ownhy, so as his march from Omaghers Countrey to Crome (by the way which hee tooke) without any rest was aboue two and thirtie Irish miles, the greatest march with cariage (whereof hee left much upon the way) that hath beene heard of: To overtake him wee marched the same day from Cashell to Kilmallock, more then twentie Irish miles, but our labour was lost: The morning following, Odonnell with all his forces rose from Crome, and lodged that night in the straight of Conneloghe, where hee rested a few dayes to refresh his tired and surbated Troopes: The President seeing that this lightfooted Generall could not bee overtaken, thought it meet to hasten to the Campe at Kinsale to prevent his comming thither, wherein wee vused such expedition, as (if he had done his uttermost) we were sure to be there before him, or inforce him to fight with us, for wee tooke the next direct way, and he for his safety (to avoid us) marched a farther way about through Dowalla, and Muskry, which was very troublesome to passe with Horse and Baggage: the time of our returne to the Campe was the fiue and twentieth of the same Moneth: In our retreat towards Kinsale, betweene Kilmallock and Moyallo, we overtooke the Earle of Clanricard (with his Regiment) marching towards the Campe, and also betweene Moyallo and Corke, wee met with the Earle of Thomond, who was sent by the Lord Deputy with his Troope of Horse to follow the President.

There came into Mounster with Odonnell, these principall Gentlemen of Vlster and Connaght, viz.

Orwrke, Mac Swiny ne Doa, Odogherty, Oboyle, the two Mac Donoghes, Mac Dermond, Okellie, Obirne, O Conner Roes two sonnes, Odonnels two brothers, Donnell O Conner Sligoes brother, the two Oflares, William Burke brother to Redmond, and Hughe Mostian, besides of Mounster men, the Lord of Lixnaw, Iohn fits Thomas, brother to the counterfeited Earle of Desmond, the Knight of the Valley, Dermond moyle Mac Cartie, brother to Florence, and many others: his whole number consisted neere unto foure thousand Foote and three hundred Horse; this was related unto the President by one Iames Welsh, who was with Odonnell, when he fled the incountering of the Presidents forces; hee also affirmed that Tyrone had in his Armie, Mac Genis, Mac Guire, Mac Maghon, Randell Mac Lorly, Oneale, and all the chiefes of Vlster with their forces.

---

CHAP. XV.

A part of Don Dermutio his Examination concerning a practise for the taking or killing of the Lord President. A Sally made by the enemy in Kinsale. A Spanish Captaine slaine. Master Hopton dyed of a hurt. The Earle of Thomond landed at Castlehaven with supplies of Horse and Foot. Supplies of Horse and Foot landed at Waterford. The Queenes Fleet, and supplies of Foot with munitions, &c. arrived at Corke. Castle Ny Parke attempted to be taken by us, but the Enterprize fayled. A Councell of Warre called by the Lord Deputie.

THE dangerous hazard which the President was in, in this journey I may not omit to relate, as well for the perill hee ranne, as for his temper; in not seeming to see that which hee perfectly knew, and despising it; for Dermond Mac Cartie called by the Spaniards Don Dermutio, taken as you haue heard at the siege of Rincorran, (being examined by the Councell) confessed to them, that Cormuck Mac Dermond Lord of Muskery, had intelligence with Don Iohn, and certaine presents had beene mutually given and received, and that the said Cormuck had undertaken, and faithfully promised, to deliver up the President to Don Iohn aliue or dead; the President was himselfe present at this examination, which notwithstanding, hee tooke the said Cormuck, and ten Horsemen his Followers along with him; rode with him, eate and dranke with him, and many times had private conference with him; not seeming to take notice of any treacherous intent; besides his Army consisting of three thousand or thereabouts, what with Countrey risings out, and under Captaines in pay, two thousand of these were of Irish birth, no lesse affected to the Rebels then to themselues; and I can well assure the Reader upon good grounds, that if our forces had received any disaster, they would all haue turned Turkes, and cut the throats of their owne Commanders.

The eighth, certaine Ships to the number of thirteene, were discovered, passing by Kinsale to the Westward, but afterward it prooved to bee the Supplyes sent out of ENGLAND with the Earle of Thomond.

The Spanyard by that time had gotten knowledge of the departure of a good part of our Forces, and thereupon supposing us to be much weakened, (as it cannot be denyed but we were) and inferior to them in the Towne in bodies of men, they drew out (about noone) the most part of their Forces, and anon after sent some threescore Shott and Pike to the foot of the hill close by our Campe, leaving their Trenches very well lyned for their seconds: Some of ours were presently drawn out to entertaine the skirmish with those that came up, and another strong party was sent out towards Rincorran, who from the Bushie hill played in flanke upon their trenches, and beate them from the same; so as they that were first sent out close to our Campe, being beaten backe by our shot, and thinking to find the seconds they left behind them, were disappoynted by the quitting of their trenches, and by that meanes driven to follow the rest to the succour of the Towne; our men following them with much furie, hurt and killed divers, amongst whom they brought off the body of a Sergeant, and possessed the enemies trenches, the which the Enemy (being re-enforced) made many attempts to regaine, but were repulsed and beaten backe into the Towne; we heard by divers that Don Iohn committed the Sergeant Major (who commanded then in chiefe) presently after the fight, and threatned to take off his head, commended highly the valor of our men, and cryed shame upon the cowardise of his owne, who he said had beene the terror of all nations, but now had lost that reputation, and he gaue straight commandement upon paine of death (which hee caused to be set upon the Towne gates) that from thenceforth no man should come off from any service, untill hee should be fetcht off by his Officer, though his powder were spent or his Peece broken, but make good his place with his sword; Captaine Soto, one of their best Commanders was that day slaine, for whom they made very great moane, and some twentie more besides were hurt, which could not but bee many; on our side onely some ten hurt and three killed; among whom Master Hopton a Gentleman of the Lord Deputies, was sore hurt, and since dyed thereof: If this skirmish had not bin readily and resolutely answered on our part, the Spaniards had then discovered the smalnesse of our numbers, and would no doubt haue so plyed us with continuall sallies, as wee should hardly haue beene able to continue the siege.

The same day wee had Newes of the Earle of Thomonds landing at Castlehaven, with one hundred horse, and one thousand foot of Supplies out of England in thirteene Ships, which by violence of foule weather had beene driven to the westernmost part of Ireland, and with great difficultie recovered Castlehaven aforesaid, from whence the fifth day following hee came with Horse and Foot to the Campe at Kinsale; The next day being the eleventh, wee were advertised that Sir Anthonie Cooke, and Patrick Arthur were landed at Waterford with two thousand foot, and some horse.

The twelfth, Sir Richard Levison, Admirall, and Sir Amias Preston, Vice-Admirall of the Queenes Fleet for Ireland, with ten Shippes of Warre, arrived at Corke with two thousand Foot, besides Munitions, Cannoniers, Carpenters, Wheele-wrights, Smithes, &c. presently the Lord Deputie sent them direction to come for Kinsale.

The thirteenth, nothing was done either by us or the enemy.

The Queenes Ships with much difficultie recovered the harbour of Kinsale, the Admirall Sir Richard Levison, and the Vice-Admirall Sir Amias Preston, came to the Lord Deputies Campe: That day and the next day, the two thousand Land-forces were put on shoare, and before that wee had certaine newes of the arrivall of the other Forces from Barstable, and Bristoll, at Waterford, and Castlehaven: but they were not then come to the Campe, nor in many dayes after.

The Lord Deputie comming from aboard the Ships, a great shott was made at him from the Towne, from whence they might discerne him in the head of a Troupe, and yet missed him very little.

Some of the Queenes Ships (having direction) began to play upon a Castle in the Iland, called Castle Ny Parke, held fit next to bee taken, to invest the Towne on that side; they brake off some part of the top, but finding that they did it no greater hurt, they left shooting, and the rather because that day and the two next prooved so extreame stormie and foule, as the Ordnance could not bee landed, nor any thing else well done ; yet out of an extraordinary desire to effect somewhat, the seventeenth being the most happy day of her Majesties Coronation, which wee meant to haue solemnized with some extraordinary Adventure, if the weather would haue suffered us to looke abroad : wee sent at night when the storme was somewhat appeased, the Sergeant Major, and Captaine Bodly, with some foure hundred Foot to discover the ground of Castle Ny Parke, and to see whether it might be carried with the Pickaxe, which was accordingly attempted ; but the Engine wee had gotten to defend our men while they were at worke, being not so strong as it should haue beene, they within the Castle hauing store of very great stones on the top, tumbled them downe so fast as brake it, so as they returned with the losse of two men, and proceeded no further in that course.

The same day, the Lord Deputie called a Councell of warre, wherein it was propounded, that now that her Majestie had plentifully furnished us with men, munition, and victuals, we were to consider of our owne strength, and the best way either to attempt the Towne or to continue the siege, we were also to consider of the force of the Enemy within Kinsale, and what aides they were like to haue out of the Countrey, and of all other commodities, or incommodities that were to happen on either side : The conclusion and resolution was, that wee should invest the Towne with all celerity, to keepe it short of reliefe, and before the making of a breach to breake their houses, that they might find no safetie in them, and thereby to bee exposed to the like incommoditie of cold and raine as wee felt in the Campe; in doing whereof it was conceived that many would bee slaine, and in danger the destroying their magazines of powder and victuals; for if presently we should make a breach and attempt it by assault, there was no difference, betweene a weake place (stored with bodies of men) and a strong fortified Towne; besides the Enemy had ground sufficient (if a breach were made) to cast up new earth workes, which would put us to more toyle and losse of men then an old stone wall; and (in the opinion of all the chieftest of the Armie) it was concluded, that wee could not doe the Enemy a greater pleasure, or unto our selues a greater disadvantage, then to seeke to carie it by a breach, before the forces in the Towne, either by sword or sicknesse were weakned.

---

CHAP. XVI.

The Earle of Thomond with his supplyes came to the Campe. Castle ny Parke rendred by the Spaniards. A Spanish Captaine wounded whereof he dyed. A braue Act of a private Souldier. Approaches made neerer to the Towne. The Lord President with the Earles of Thomond and Clanricard returned to the Campe. A sally made by the Spaniards.

THE Earle of Thomond also with one thousand Foote, and one hupdred Horse (having beene by force of weather driven farre to the Westward, and with much difficultie had recovered Castle-haven) came thence by Sea to the port of Kinsale : The Lord Deputie to refresh his men and horses, sent them to Corke, for in their healths they were impaired ; and that evening some Spaniards fled from Kinsale, and voluntarily came to our Campe.

A Demy Cannon was unshipped assoone as it was calme, and placed on this side the water, which played most part of that day upon that Castle, and brake many places, but made no breach that was assaultable : In the night they of the Towne attempted to relecue the Castle by boat, but were repelled by Captaine Tolkern, and Captaine Ward, who lay with their Pinnaces betweene the Iland and the Towne.

The Demy Cannon played againe, and a Cannon then landed and placed by it (with some Ordnance also out of the Ship) though they served to small purpose ; about noone one hundred men were sent with Captaine Yorke and Captaine Smith, to view if the breach were assaultable, and though they found it was not, yet the Spanyards within being no longer able to endure the fury of the shot, hung out a signe for parley, (upon the first shew of our men) and yeelded themselues and the Castle upon promise of their liues onely ; which being accepted, they brought them presently to the Campe, being in number seventene : Before the Castle was yeelded, the Spanyards in the Towne made divers shot at Captaine Tolkernes Pinnace, with a piece of Ordnance which they mounted a day or two before close to the gate of the Towne, but did no hurt at all unto her; the Pinnace warping neerer to the other side under the hill, and at last rode safely without danger of the shott: The same day a Platforme was made upon a ground of advantage, (not farre from the Campe) that commanded one part of the Towne, that under the favour thereof wee might the better make our neerer Approaches, which at that time wee could hardly haue done, by reason of the great extreame frost, and a Demy-Cannon mounted vpon it, with which some shot was made at the Towne, and a Sentinell taken anon after affirmed, that the first Piece shot off went through the house that Don Iohn was in, and did otherwise great hurt.

An other Cannon was brought up, and planted by the Demy-cannon, which the night before was brought from the Ship, and this day the Lord Deputie went over into the Iland, to view how from thence the Towne might be best annoyed and invested.

Also the Prisoners which were taken at Castle Parke, were sent to Corke, with direction to the Major, to send them, and all the former Prisoners into England, the Sergeant Major, and the Commanders of Rincorran, and Castle Ny Parke excepted; and this day a great number of Irish women and children were put out of Kinsale, to try their fortunes in the Countrey.

Foure other Peeces were planted by the Cannon and Demy Cannon, which altogether played into the Towne; one of those shott killed foure men in the Market place, and strucke off a Captaines leg, called Don Iohn de Saint-Iohn, who is since dead of the hurt.

That Evening one Iames Grace, an Irishman, ran out of Kinsale, assuring the Lo: Deputie that Don Iohn at his landing was five thousand men, and that hee was yet three thousand strong; that he had four Peeces of Ordnance well mounted; that the Irish which were with him were so much affrighted with our Artillery, as Don Iohn had much to doe to hold them, whose departure, (if it should happen) would be a great want unto him, for by them hee received ease and comfort; and that Don Iohns house where hee lodged, had been shot through with a great shot.

The sixe Peeces began againe about ten a clocke to batter upon the Towne, and so continued till night, in which time, and in all mens judgments, as by report of the Prisoners wee tooke, they did great hurt to the Towne. This day, while the Lord Deputie, the Marshall, and the Sergeant Major were viewing the ground where the approaches were intended, a private Souldier of Sir Francis Barkleyes, in the face of the Guards, attempting to steale, (as hee had done divers times before) a Spanish Sentinell, who was seconded with foure that hee saw not, fought with them all five, whereof one of them was the Sergeant Major, whom he had almost taken, and when he had found he could doe no good upon them all, hee came off without other hurt, then the cutting of his hand a little with the breaking of a thrust, which one of them made at him, and hurt the Sergeant Major. The Lord Deputie this night began to make his approaches neerer the towne, and for that purpose caused some 1000 Foot to be drawne out by Sir Iohn Barkley, Sir Benjamin Berry, and Captaine Bodley, who continued the worke all night, and although the ground were extreame hard, (by reason of the frost) and the night very light, yet they brought the worke to very good perfection; the Enemy played all the night upon them with great Volleyes, but hurt but three men neither in the Trenches, nor in divers Sallies they made, in the one whereof a Squadron of our new men beat them backe to the gates: In the Euening his Lordship sent direction to Sir Richard Levison to land three Culverings this night, and to plant them in the Iland, about Castle Ny Parke, that from thence they might likewise make Battery upon the Towne, and Sir Richard drewe in the Admirall, and Vice-Admirall betweene the Towne and the Iland, from whence they did great hurt in the Towne the next day.

All the Artillery still played; but because the shot from the ships did but little hurt, (saue onely upon the base Towne) the Lord Deputie gaue direction to make very few shot, except it were at the high Towne. In the afternoone, the Lord President, the Earles of Thomond, and Clanricard, Sir Thomas Burke, and divers others returned to the Campe, Odonnell with his force being stollen by them; This night direction was given to haue a Plat-forme made for the Artillery, upon the trench which was made on Monday night; somewhat after midnight the Spaniards made a sudden salley, with purpose to force that trench, but were quickly repelled by Sir Francis Barkley, who commanded there that night.

The Companies that went with the Lord President returned, and with them two other Regiments of the Earle of Clanricards, and Sir Christopher Saint-Lawrence: the Regiments were that night quartered by themselves, upon the West side of Kinsale to invest the Towne, and keepe the Spaniards and Odonnell from joyning. This night the three Culverings from the Iland were planted on the poynt of the hil, neere the water, on this side behind the last trenches: This morning the Spaniards played with a Demy

Cannon (from the Towne) upon the Admirall, which was twice shot, and the Viceadmirall once; they riding both close by the Towne, and shot being made from those ships, they dismounted the Spaniards Peece within, and hurt their chiefe Gunner, so as it played no more.

Betimes in the morning those three Peeces from the poynt of the Hill, neere the water played upon the Towne, doing great hurt, by reason they were so neere planted, but because the day fell out extreame windy and rainy, they were enforced to leaue, and spent the rest of the day in drawing downe some other Peeces, that were planted upon the first plat-forme.

---

CHAP. XVII.

The Towne of Kinsale summoned, and Don Iuan his Answer. The Spaniards beaten out of their trenches. The Marshall went to view the Towne, to discover a fit place to batter. A skirmish entertayned for the viewing of the breach. An intrenchment made on the West side of the Towne. A bold attempt of a Sergeant of ours, wherein he was slaine. A Souldier slaine standing betweene the Lord Deputy and Lord President. The great sally made by the Enemy with a furious charge, both upon the plat-forme where the battery was placed, and upon a new entrenchment on the West side of the towne; the Enemy repulsed and beaten. The Enemy gained our entrenchment on the West side of the towne. The entrenchment recovered from the Enemy. The losse on the Enemies part, and on our part.

IN the morning a Trumpeter was sent to summon Kinsale, who was not suffered to enter into the Towne, but receiving his answer at the Gate, viz. that they held the Towne first for Christ, and next for the King of Spaine, & so would defend it, Contra tutti inimici: upon his returne with this answer, the Lord Deputie gaue direction to beginne the battery with all the Artillery, who continued in shooting upon the Gate till towards night, and brake a great part threof, during the time the Ordnance played; Sir Christopher Saint-Lawrence drew out from the other Campe some Foote, and gaue upon the Spaniards trenches, which they possessed (with great numbers;) at the other end of the Towne being enforced to goe thereunto, through the furie of the shot, which they could not endure in that part of the Towne, where the Ordnance played, at his first giving upon them, hee beate them out of the trenches following them to the very Gate of the Towne, and killed some of them returning, without losse on our side saue onely some hurt.

All the Artillery still played, and brake downe most part of the Gate, and some part of a new worke made before the Gate.

The Marshall taking some fiftie shot, went to the wall of the Towne to view, which was the best place to make a breach, and found the wall close to the Gate on the right hand to bee the fittest; after he had taken view, and made a slight skirmish with the Spaniards, hee returned without any losse, saving some three hurt, and caused the Artillery to beate upon that place, who played upon it (without any intermission) and brake downe before night, a very great part of the wall, which the Enemy attempted to make up in the night, but were beaten from it by our Guards, who played upon them most part of the night: A Spaniard ran away this day from Kinsale, who reported to the Lord Deputie, that our Artillery had killed divers Captaines in the Towne, besides private Souldiers.

Resolved in Councell (and by the Councell of warre) that some Foote should be drawn out of the Campe to giue the Spaniards a bravadoe, and to view whether the breach was assaultable, and to cause the Spaniards to shew themselues, that our Artillery might the better play upon them; whereupon two thousand Foote commanded by Sir Iohn Barkley and Captaine Blaynie were presently put in Armes, and drawn neere the wals of the Towne, who entertayned a very hot skirmish with the Spaniards, that had lodged themselues in a trench close to the breach without the Towne; during the continuance of this skirmish, our Artillery played upon those that shewed themselues, either on the breach or in the trench, and killed many of them, besides such as were killed and hurt by our small shot; after an houres fight (or thereabouts) when full view was taken, in what manner the breach was, and found not to bee assaultable, our men were drawn off with little or no hurt on our side, saving some three hurt, and Captaine Guests horse killed under him, who before killed two or three with his owne hands: This night the Marshall, Sir John Barkley, Captaine Blaynie, and Captaine Bodly (the Lord Deputie leaving the President in the Campe, being almost all night present) drew out five and twentie of every Company, and intrenched themselves on a Hill, on the West side of the Towne, within lesse then halfe Callivers shot of the same, and cast up a small fort, to lodge some Foote to serue as seconds for the Artillery (that was to be planted) not farre from it; our men being at worke, the Spaniards about midnight began to play upon them from the wals, and from a trench, they possessed close to the West gate, and so continued very hotly till the morning; our men (that guarded the Pioners) playing likewise upon them, and divers hurt and killed on either side.

Our men continued still in that worke, and brought the same before night to very good perfection, though the Spanyards (from their high Castles, and other places of the Towne) sought to annoy them what they could. While our men were thus at worke, a Sergeant of Captaine Blaynies drew out some seven or eight shott, and suddenly fell into a trench (that the Spaniards possessed) close to the towne, wherein were some nine or ten Spaniards, of which the Sergeant killed two with his owne hands, and the rest every man one; Not being contented therewith, he attempted to giue upon another Trench possessed by the Spanyards some good distance from it; but in going on, the Sergeant was shott through the body, and his company in bringing him off had two hurt, and returned without any more losse.

The same day the Lord Deputie, and the Lord President came to see the new Worke, and as they were discoursing very neere together, a Musket shot from the Towne passed betweene them, and brake the backe bone of a Souldier that stood close by them, whereof hee dyed.

This night the Trenches where the Cannon was planted, being manned with the Lord Deputies Company, (commanded by Captaine James Blunt) Sir Thomas Burkes, commaunded by his Lieutenant, Sir Benjamin Berries, commanded by his Lieutenant, Captaine Rotheram himselfe, and Captaine Hobbie, Captaine Muses commanded by his Lieutenant, and Captaine Roger Harvie commanding in chiefe, being Captaine of the Watch: in a fort on the West neere the Towne betweene the two Campes, that was made the morning before, being manned by Captaine Flower, with Sir Arthur Savages Company, Sir Iohn Dowdalls Company, Captaine Dillon, Captaine Spencer, Captaine Mastersons Lieutenant, and Sir William Warrens Lieutenant, with certaine Squadrons out of the Earle of Thomonds Quarter, who stood in guard without the Trenches: The Enemie sallyed about eight of the clocke in the night (being extreame darke and raynie) with about two thousand men, and first gaue slightly towards the new Trenches upon the West side, and presently after with a great grosse upon the trench of the Cannon, continuing their resolution to force it with exceeding fury, having brought with them tooles of divers sorts, to pull downe the Gabions and Trenches, and Spikes to cloy the Artillery: The Allarme being taken in the Camp, the Marshall with Sir Iohn Barkley, and Sir William Fortescue, Sir Francis Rush, and Captaine Roe, with some five or sixe hundred sallyed presently towards the Cannon for their seconds, and Sir Benjamin Berry fell out with some hundred directly towards the Port of the Towne next to the Campe, to whose seconds the Lord Deputie sent Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn: Vpon the arrivall of the Marshall with his Forces the enemy brake, and our men did execution upon them; Sir Benjamin Berry fell directly upon the Enemies seconds, whom he presently charged and brake, killed many of them, and tooke the Commander of that body, being an ancient Captaine of chiefe account with the enemy. At the same time the enemy gaue upon our new Trenches, and continued the attempt a long time with great fury, till Captaine Flower sallying out, and beating backe part of their forces, the enemy entred before his returne, and were possessed of the Trenches, in which time Sir William Godolphin gaue many charges, for the seconding of our men, which continued fight in the field untill the Earle of Clanricard, (being sent for their second) with Captaine Shipwith, Captaine Slingsby, Captaine Clare, Captaine Boise, and Captaine Thomas Burke, with some sixtie men, for the rest of his Regiment was not advanced, so farre charged a grosse of the Enemies without the fort, brake them, and did execution upon them towards the Towne, and returning entered the fort againe (which the Enemy abandoned) with little resistance, and made it good till hee was releevd: In this sally the Enemy left behind them aboue sixscore dead bodies, besides such as were killed neere the Towne, and wee tooke nine prisoners, of whom there was a Captaine, a Sergeant, and a Drum; but since wee heard out of the Towne that they lost dead aboue two hundred of their best men, and two Captaines, and two Alfeeroes, and the Sergeant Major, being the second Commander to Don Iohn, and Don Carloes Carty, and aboue two hundred hurt; of our part were hurt Captaine Flower, Captaine Shipwith (slightly in the face) the Earle of Clanricards Lieutenant, Captaine Dillon killed, Captaine Spencer, Captaine Flowers Lieutenant, and some five and twentie private Souldiers; the Enemy at the Cannon, cloyed a Demy Culvering, which being a little crased was left without the fort, but the next morning it was made serviceable againe. There were some of them killed upon the Cannon, and upon the powder, and the trenches (in some places) filled with their dead bodies, and in that attempt (of the Cannon onely) seventy two dead bodies (were left in the place) of the best men the Spaniards had, whereof many of them were found with Spikes and Hammers, to cloy the Cannon: The Captaines, Officers, and Souldiers that defended the Cannon acquitted themselues singularly well.

CHAP. XVIII.

A supply of Spaniards landed at Castle-haven. A Councell of warre held. Good service done by a Scottish man. Odonnell joyned with the Spaniards at Castle-haven. All the Irish in the West of Mounster, and some of the English race, revolted and adhered to the Spaniards. Sundry Castles rendred by the Irish into the Spaniards hands. Divers of the Irish had Companies in pay given them by Don Iuan. The Castle of Carigfoile taken and the Ward murdered. Tyrones Army discovered neere to our Campe.

INtelligence sent to the Lord Deputie, that sixe Spanish ships were put into Castle-haven, and that sixe more were sent with them from the Groyne, but in comming were severed by tempest, and no certaintie what is become of them; in these were said to bee two thousand Spaniards, come with great store of Ordnance and munition, and that two thousand more were comming presently after.

A confirmation of the Spaniards being at Castle-haven, and that they were landed, whereupon it was resolved in Councell, that our Campe should be strengthened, and the Artillery better intrenched and guarded, and to leaue battering: the other Campe to rise and sit downe close by the Towne, betweene the North and the West gate, adding one Regiment more to it, and all the Horse to be drawen into our Campe; a Drum was sent to Don Iohn, to offer him to bury his dead bodies, which hee tooke thankfully, praying that we would bury them, and that hee would doe the like for any of ours, if they hapned in his power. And this day Sir Charles Wilmot with his Regiment, was commanded for the better strengthning of the Earle of Thomonds quarter, to rise out of the Lord Deputies Campe and lodge there. Sir Richard Levison, with a good part of the Fleete with towing got out of the harbour, to seeke the Spanish fleete at Castlehaven, to take them if hee could, or otherwise to distresse them as much as hee might.

A Scottishman that had some eightie of those Spaniards aboard, put into Kinsale harbour in the morning, and getting a boat, acquainted Sir Amias Preston (the Viceadmirall) therewith, and put them into his hands; whereupon the said Scottishman, and foure of the chiefe Spaniards (being Officers) were brought to the Lord Deputy, and examined before his Lordship, the Lord President, and divers others of the Councell, their examinations were sent into England; the Ships were heard to be in fight that day. This day our Ordnance was drawen from the old platformes into our Campe, the better to intend the service of the Field, and to place them more commodiously towards the West side of the Towne, if wee should see cause. Newes came this Evening, that Odonnell was joyned with the Spaniards landed at Castle-haven, and that Tirone with his Force was very neere vs.

The same day, the Ditches and Trenches of the Lord Deputies Campe, and the Earle of Thomonds

Quarter, were cast deeper and higher, and it was resolved, that two small Forts should bee rayzed betweene the Earle of Thomonds Quarter, and the water side, so that the Towne might bee wholly invested, to forbid any accesse to or from it.

Vntill this time none of the Provincials of Mounster, that had beene either protected or pardoned, relapsed; but now upon the comming of these seconds to Castlehaven, Sir Finnin Odriscall, and all the Odriscalls, Sir Owen Mac Carties sonnes, and almost all the Carties in Carbrie, Donnell Osulevan Beare, Osulevans Mores eldest son, Donnell Mac Cartie, the Earle of Clan-Cares base sonne, with all the Carties of Desmond, Iohn O Conner Kerry, the Knight of Kerry, all the protected and pardoned men in Kerry and Desmond, and all else from Kinsale and Limericke westwards, joyned with Odonnell and the Spaniards; whereat little wonder is to bee made, considering what power Religion and Gold hath in the hearts of men; both which the Spaniards brought with them into Ireland. The supplies of Spaniards were but seven hundred, but more were promised to follow; which mooved the wavering Irish to conceiue, that now the time was come for their deliverance from the English Government; whereupon they cast themselues into the Spaniards armes, and for testimonie of their truths, Donogh Odrischall delivered unto them his Castle at Castlehaven, which commanded the Harbour, Sir Finnin

Odrischall, (who never in the course of his whole life had beene tainted with the least spot of disloyaltie) rendred unto them his Castle of Donneshed at Baltimore, and his Castle of Donnelong, in the Iland of Inisherkan, betweene which Castles all entrances into that Haven was debarred ; and Donnell Osulevan surrendred unto them his strong Castle of Dunboy, which absolutely commaunds Beare Haven ; these three Harbours, beeing without all exception the best in the West of Mounster : For the guard of those places Don Iohn assigned, that one hundred of the late supplies should remaine at Castle-haven, with a Magazine of Victualls and Munition, and eight Peeces of Ordnance ; unto Donneshed and Donnelong hee sent one hundred Foot, fiftie for each of the Castles, and two Peeces of Artillerie ; and unto Dunboy hee also sent one hundred Foot, and ten great Peeces : And to confirme these revolters by liberality unto his Master the King of Spaine, hee bestowed upon Donnell Osulevan two hundred foote in the Kings pay, unto Donoghe Moyle Mac Cartie, sonne to Sir Owen Mac Cartie Reughe one hundred, upon Finin Mac Cartie his brother one hundred and twentie, and upon Phelim Mac Cartie one hundred, and to Odonevan one hundred ; in all sixe hundred and twentie in the Kings entertainment, and upon others hee bestowed certaine summes of money. About this time also (not many dayes after this defection) Iohn O Conner Kerry, found the meanes to betray the Castle of Carrigfoyle which was his, and then guarded for her Majestie by a Sergeant, and twelue Souldiers of Captaine Saxies company.

The other Campe strengthned their trenches, and a resolution to make two small forts beyond the Campe Westward, wholly to invest the Towne, the forts and the Campe one to flancke another.

The Artillery was planted in severall places of the Campe, for the best defence thereof, and a fort almost made neere the Towne, a slight skirmish towards night, wherein Sir Francis Barklies Ancient, and some other were hurt: In the evening the rebels Horse were descried about two miles off, and (after supper) all the Army drawen into Armes, upon notice (given us by the skout) that the rebels were discovered.

---

---

CHAP. XIX.

A briefe report of the good service done by Sir Richard Levison, upon the Spanish fleete at Castle-haven. A Letter from Don Iuan de Aquila to Tyrone and Odonnell. A Letter from Don Iuan to Captaine Iuan de Albornes y Andrada. A Letter from Odonnell Osulevan Beare to the King of Spaine.

THIS night late, Sir Richard Levison returned into the harbour of Kinsale, and the next day came to the Lord Deputie, unto whom hee imparted, that the sixth day, with the Warrespit, the Defiance, the Swiftsure, the Marlin, one Merchant, and a Carvill, he arrived at Castle-haven about ten of the clock in the forenoone, before foure a clock the same day, one ship of the Enemy was suncke, the Spanish Admirall with nine foote water in hold droue to the shore upon the rocks, the Viceadmirall with two others droue likewise a ground, most of the Spaniards quitting their ships; the seventh of December the wind being extreamey at South-east, hee rode still at Castle-haven, the night following, with wind at West South-west, hee warped out with the ships, the eighth at night hee returned as aforesaid.

Since wee are informed by the Lord Coursie, that they are all sunck but one ship, and great harme done both to their provisions and men.

The Spaniards after their comming to Castle-haven, understanding the Queenes fleete was at Kinsale, expecting their comming thither, to make themselues as strong as they could, landed five Peeces of Ordnance which they planted close by the water side for the securing the harbour; but Sir Richard Levison did so ply the shipping, that hee suncke and driue a shore as is related, and having effected as much as might be done by Sea, was willing to haue left the harbour and returne to Kinsale; but the wind being contrary, hee was not able to get forth, but was forced to ride foure and twentie houres within the play of those five Peeces of Ordnance, and received in that time aboue three hundred shot, through Hulke, Mast and Tackle being by no industry able to avoid it, untill some calmer weather came, where by the helpe of some warpes layed forth by their boats, not without great danger and some losse, hee came to set saile and returned for Kinsale. All the shot were made particularly at his ship, except some few at a Pinnace of the Queenes, wherein Captaine Flemming was Commander.

All the time spent upon the nine ten and eleaven, was in erecting the two forts formerly resolved upon, also in casting up of trenches, betweene the Earle of Thomonds quarter, and the said forts, being more then thirtie score in length, and making of trenches neere to the Lord Deputies Campe: The Spaniards as well to interrupt, as to view our workes, made certaine light sallies, but they were easily beaten backe without any hurt on our side.

The twelfth, the Enemy sallied againe, but altogether fruitlesse.

The thirteenth, the weather fell out to be extreame fowle and stormy; and because of Tyrones drawing neere with all his forces, it was thought meet, not to attempt any thing of great moment, more then the removing of some Peeces of Ordnance, to a new plat-forme made on the West side of the Towne close unto it, to play upon the Castles, which might most hinder our workes, when wee should resolve to make a breach.

The fourteenth fowle weather, wherein nothing was performed.

The fifteenth, our Artillery on the West side of the Towne did much annoy the enemy, in breaking downe the houses, wherein many were slaine.

The sixteenth, the Ordnance played into the Towne, as the day before.

The seventeenth, fowle and stormy weather; nevertheless at night the Enemy sallied, and brake downe a new platforme which wee had made.

The eighteenth the Cannon (as in former dayes) played into the Towne, and annoyed the Enemy very much: And the same day, a Letter was intercepted, written from Don Iohn to Tyrone and Odonnell, which is here inserted: And also a Letter to Captaine Iuan de Albornoz y Andrada, both which were thus translated.

A Letter from Don Iuan de Aquila, to Tyrone and Odonnell.

I Was confident your Excellencies would haue come upon Don Richardo his going unto you, because hee had order from you to say that upon the Spanyards joyning with you, (from Castle-haven) you would doe

mee that favour : I beseech you so to doe, with as much celeritie, and as well furnished as you possibly may : for I doe assure you, the enemies are wearied, and but few, and that they cannot furnish (with Guards) the third part of their Trenches, which shall little availe them, their first fury resisted, all is ended. In what manner your Excellencies will come on, is better known to you there, then unto me here ; I will giue them enough to doe this way, being ever attending to giue the blow in all that I can, and with some good resolution, that your Excellencies fighting as you are accustomed, I hope in God the victorie shal be ours, for that the cause is his : I doe as much desire the victory for the interest which your Excellencies haue in it, as for my owne : There is nothing now to be done, but that you would bring up your Troupes, come well appoynted, and in close Order, and being once mingled with the enemies, their Forts will doe them as much harme as us. I salute Don Ricardo, the Lord preserue your Excellencies. From Kinsale the 28. of December. 1601.

Though you are not well prepared, yet I beseech your Excellencies to hasten towards the enemy, for it imports much : I thinke it needfull to bee all at once on horseback : the greater haste you make, it is so much the better.

Don Iuan de Aquila.

A Letter from Don Iuan to Captaine Iuan de Albornos y Andrada

I Was extreame glad of your Letter, and of the health of your person; when Don Ricardo went, hee brought for resolution, that when the Earles had met with the Spanyards, they would come; the ill passage for Messengers is the cause that you haue had no Letters from me: Hasten their comming, they know there (better then wee doe) the wayes and the newes: I am ever in readinesse; the enemies are few, and wearied, and by good resolution (from thence) their Trenches shall not availe them, nor can they maintaine so much ground as they lodge in: I will giue them their handsfull from the Towne, and their first furie resisted all is ended. Commend mee to Don Ricardo, and to Captaine Rius de Velasco, to whom I write not, because the Messenger should not carry too great a Pacquet. I haue written to the Earles to hasten hither before the enemies haue bettered their Quarter, it would profit much, and wee being once mingled with them, their Forts will doe them as much hurt as vs: From Kinsale the eight and twentieth of December. 1601.

Don Iuan de Aquila.

The nineteenth by reason of stormie and foule weather, nothing on either side was performed; but the same day Donnell Osulevan Beare, in thankfulnessse to the King of Spaine, and to endeare himselfe the more into his favour, wrote unto him this ensuing Letter, the originall was in Irish, and thus translated: but the Reader may understand, that it was long afterward before it came to the Lord Presidents hands, yet here inserted in regard of the date thereof.

A Letter from Donnell Osulevan Beare unto the King of Spaine.

IT hath beene ever, most mighty and renowned Prince, and most gracious Catholike King, from time to time, manifestly proved by daily experience among vs the Irish, that there is nothing worketh more forcibly in our hearts, to winne, and to draw our loue and affection, then naturall inclination to our Progeny and Ofspring, and the memoriall of the friendship, which sticketh still in our minds; chiefly the same being renewed, cherished and kept in use by mutuall affection, and by shewing like friendship to vs also; Wee the meere Irish long sithence deriving our roote and originall, from the famous and most noble race of the Spaniards: Viz. from Milecius sonne to Bile, sonne to Breogwin, and from Lwighe, sonne to Lythy, sonne to Breogwin, by the testimony of our old ancient bookes of antiquities, our Petigrees, our Histories, and our Cronicles: Though there were no other matter, wee came not as naturall branches of the famous tree, whereof we grew, but beare a hearty loue, and a naturall affection, and intire inclination of our hearts and minds, to our ancient most loving kinsfolkes, and the most noble race whereof wee descended: Besides this (my Sovereigne) such is the abundance of your goodnesse, and the bounty or greatnesse of your liberality, now euery way undeserved of our parts, as tokens of loue and affection by your Majestie shewed unto vs, that it is not fit nor seemely for vs, but to bestow our persons, our men, and our goods, in the service of a Prince, that dealeth so graciously with vs, that sendeth forces of men, great treasure, victuals and munition for our aide, against our Enemies, that seeke to overwhelme and extinguish the Catholike faith diabolically, put to death our Chiefetaines tyrannously, coveting our Lands and Livings unlawfully: For the foresaid considerations, and for many other commendable causes me moving: I bequeath, and offer in humblenesse of mind, and with all my heart, my owne person with all my forces, perpetually to serue your Majestie, not only in Ireland, but in any other place, where it shall please your Highnesse: I commit also my Wife, my Children, my Mannors, Townes, Countrey, and Lands, and my Haven of Dunboy, called Biara-haven (next under God) to the protection, keeping and defence, or Commericke of your Majestie, to be and remaine in your hands, and at your disposition: Also at your pleasure bee it (my Liege Lord) to send defence and strong keeping of the haven of Dunboy, first for your selfe (my Sovereigne) to receiue your ships; and for mee also as your loving servant, so that the Queene

of Englands ships may not possesse the same before you, while I follow the warres in your Highnesse behalfe: I pray Almighty God, to giue your Majestie along life, health of body and soule, with increase of grace and prosperity: So I betake you to the keeping of God: From the Campe neere Kinsale the nine and twentieth of December, 1601, Stilo Novo.

Your most dutifull loving Servant

Donnell Osulevan Beare.

This morning being faire, the Ordnance played oftner, and brake downe a good part of the wall; and to the end wee might proceed the more roundly, (if Tyrones force came not the sooner upon us) another great Trench was made beneath the Platforme; to hinder which, the Enemies made very many shott, but all would not serue: for by the next morning that worke was brought to good perfection, though the night fell out stormie, with great abundance of thunder and lightning, to the wonder of all men, considering the season of the yeare. This night came certaine Intelligence, that Tyrone would be the next night within a mile and halfe of us.

CHAP. XX.

Tyrone with his Armie approached within view of our Campe, but could not bee provoked to fight. The enemy sallyed out of the towne. The Irish Army as before present themselves. The Enemy from the towne make another sally. Intelligence of the Enemies designes brought to Captaine Taffe.

TOwards night Tyrone shewed himselfe with the most part of his Horse and Foot, upon a hill betweene our campe and Corke, about a mile from us, and on the other side of the hill encamped that night, where hee had a Fastnesse of wood and water.

Two Regiments of our Foot, and some Horse being drawn out of our Campe, made towards them; and when they saw our men resolved to goe forwards, they fell backe towards the place where they encamped. This night the Spanyards sallyed againe, and gaue upon a new Trench made a little beneath our Campe, but were the sooner repelled, because that night wee kept very strong Guards, and every man was in a readinesse to bee in Armes, by reason of Tyrones being so neere unto us.

Tyrones Horse and Foot kept still in sight in the place where they shewed themselves the day before, and many Intelligences affirmed unto us, that they had a purpose to force our Campes. That night some of their Horse, and five hundred of their Foot were discovered searching out a good way to the Towne, which was not made knowen unto us untill the next day. The Spanyards sallyed this night hotly, and gaue upon a Trench, so as a Sergeant that had the guard thereof, quit it: But Sir Christopher Saint-Laurence comming to his second, beat them backe before they did any great hurt.

Our Artillery still played upon the Towne, (as it had done all that while) that they might see wee went on with our businesse, as if we cared not for Tyrones comming; but it was withall carried on in such a fashion, as wee had no meaning to make a Breach, because we thought it not fit to offer to enter, and so put all in a hazard, untill wee might better discover what Tyrone meant to doe, whose strength was assured to bee very great, and wee found by Letters of Don Iohns (which wee had newly intercepted) that hee had advised Tyrone to set upon our Campes, telling him that it could not bee chosen, but our men were much decayed by the winters siege, and so that wee could hardly be able to mainetaine so much ground (as wee had taken) when our strength was greater, if we were well put too, on the one side by them, and on the other side by him, which hee would not faile for his part to doe soundly.

Tyrone accompanied with Odonnell, Orwrke, Mac Guire, Mac Maghon, Randell Mac Sorly, Redmond Burke, O Conner Sligoes brothers, and Captaine Tirrell; with the choise force, and in effect all the Rebels of Ireland being drawn into Mounster, and joyned with Spaniards that landed at Castle-haven, who brought to Tyrones Campe sixe Ensignes of Spaniards, and the greatest part of the Irish of Mounster, who being revolted, were joyned with them; and entertayned into the Kings pay in severall Companies, and under their owne Lords, resolved to releue the Towne of Kinsale, and to that purpose sate downe the one and twentieth of December, a mile and a halfe from the Towne, betweene the English Campe and Corke, and on that side of the Army, kept from them all passages and meanes for forage, the other side, over the River of Ownybuoy, being wholly at their disposition, by reason of the generall revolt of those parts, it seemed they were drawn so farre by the importunity of Don Iuan de Aquila, as wee perceived by some of his Letters intercepted, wherein hee did intimate his owne necessitie, their promise to succour him, and the facility of the Enterprise; our Armie being weake in numbers, and tired (as hee termed us) with assurance from himselfe, that whensoever hee should advance to our Quarter, he would giue the blow soundly from the Towne, during the aboad of the Rebels in that place, wee had continuall intelligence of their purpose to giue Alarmes from their party, and sallies from the Towne, but to little other effect then to weary our men, by keeping them continually in Armes; the weather being extreame tempestuous, cold and wet; on the three and twentieth of December, late in the night, Captaine Taffe enformed the Lord Deputie, that one of the Rebels sent him word (and confirmed it by a solemne oath) to the bearer, that the resolution of the Rebels was either that night, or betweene that and the next, to enterprize their uttermost for the releefe of the Towne, with some particulars, in what sort they intended to giue upon our Campe. The intelligence which Captaine Taffe had was upon this occasion.

---

---

CHAP. XXI.

The means whereby Captaine Taffe had his Intelligence. The Battell of Kinsale, wherein the Rebels were overthrown. The Lord President directed by the Lord Deputie to guard the Campe, against any attempt to be made by the Spaniards. A glorious Victorie. An old Irish Prophetie proved true. Two sallies made by the Spaniards.

TVesday the two and twentieth of December, Brian Mac Hugh Oge Mac Maghon, a principall Commander in the Irish Army, whose eldest sonne Brian had many yeares before been a Page in ENGLAND with the Lord President, sent a Boy unto Captaine William Taffe, praying him to speake unto the Lord President to bestow upon him a bottle of Aquavitæ, which the President for old acquaintance sent unto him; the next night being the three and twentieth, by the same Messenger hee sent him a Letter, praying him to recommend his Loue vnto

the President, thanks for his Aquavitæ, and to wish him the next night following to stand well upon his Guard, for himselfe was at the Councell, wherein it was resolved, that on the night aforesaid, (towards the breake of day) the Lord Deputies Campe would bee assaulted, both by Tyrones Armie, (which lay at their backes) and by the Spanyards from the Towne, who upon the first Allarme would bee in a readinesse to salley: Whereupon the Lord Deputie gaue order to strengthen the ordinary Guards, to put the rest of the Armie in a readinesse, but not into Armes, that about the falling of the Moone, the Regiment volant, (commanded by Sir Henrie Power, and appoynted onley to answeere the first occasion, without doing any other duties) should draw out beyond the West part of the Campe, and there to stand in Armes, not farre from the maine guard of Horse: A little before the breake of the day, the Lord President went to the Lord Deputies house, and as they two and the Marshall were in Councell, one of the Lord Presidents horsemen came to the doore, and calling upon him said, My Lord, it is time to arme, for the enemy is neere unto the Campe; and immediately Sir Richard Greame, who had the guard of Horse that night, sent word to the Lord Deputie, that the Scouts had discovered the Rebells Matches in great numbers; whereupon the Lord Deputie caused the Armie to draw presently into Armes, sent a Corporall of the field, to cause the like to be done in the Earle of Thomonds quarter, and that from thence they should draw out three hundred choise men, between that quarter and the Fort, built upon the West hill, neere a Barricado made (crosse a high way) to stop the Enemies suddaine passage in the night, and himselfe accompanied with the President, and the Marshall advanced forwards towards the scout, and having given direction to Sir Henry Davers (who commanded the Horse under the Marshall) for the ordering of the Troopes, sent the Marshall to take view of the Enemy, who brought him word, that Horse and Foote of theirs were advanced; whereupon the Lord Deputie with Sir Oliver Lambert rid to view a peece of ground, between that and the Towne, which had on the back of it a Trenchie, drawen from the Earle of Thomonds quarter to the West fort: on the front a boggish Glyn, and passable with Horse onely at one ford, which before hee had intrenched: the ground whereupon the Enemy must haue drawen in grosse, to force the passage, was flankerd from the Earles quarter by the Cannon; it was resolved to make that ground good, being of greater advantage for Horse and Foote, both to bee imbattled, and to fight: upon view whereof the Lord Deputie sent the Marshall word, that on that place he was resolved to giue the Enemy battaile, and sent the Sergeant Major (Sir Iohn Barkley) to draw out Sir Henry Folliots, and Sir Oliver Saint-Iohns Regiments to that place: O Campo (that commanded all the Spaniards that came last out of Spaine) desired Tyrone that hee might imbattle his men, and presently giue on, to joyne that way with Don Iuan, for their purpose was at that time, by that meanes to haue put into the Towne all the Spaniards with Tirrell, and eight hundred of their chiefe men, and the next night from the Towne, and their Army to haue forced both our quarters, of the successe whereof they were so confident, that they reckoned us already theirs, and were in contention, whose prisoners the Lord Deputie should bee, and whose the President, and so of the rest: But Tyrone (discovering the Marshall, and Sir Henry Davers to bee advanced with all the Horse, and Sir Henry Powers squadron of Foote) retired beyond a ford at the foote of that hill, with purpose (as he fained) till his whole Army were drawen more close; instantly the Marshall sent the Lord Deputie word by Sir Francis Rush, that the Enemy retired in some disorder; whereupon the Lord Deputie came up unto him, and gaue order that all the Foote should follow; when we were advanced to the Ford (but our Foote not wholly come to us) the Enemy drew off in three great bodies of foot, and all their horse in the reare: The Lord Deputie asked of some that understood the Countrey, whether beyond that ford, there were neere any ground of strength for the Enemy to make advantage of; but being answered that there was none, but a faire Champion, he drew after the Enemy, and then desired the Lord President to returne from thence, and secure the Campe, and attend the sallies of Don Iuan, which hee did, with whom the Lord Deputie sent the Earle of Thomonds Horse, Sir Anthony Cookes, and Sir Oliver Lamberts, and only tooke with him betweene three or foure hundred Horse, and under twelue hundred Foote, but being drawen out some mile farther, we might perceiue the Enemy to stand firme, upon a ground of very good advantage for them, having a bog betweene us, and a deepe ford to passe, and in all appearance with a resolution to fight: the Marshall being advanced with the Horse neere unto the Ford, sent unto the Lord Deputie, that hee perceived the Enemy in some disorder; and that if hee would giue him leaue to charge, hee hoped to giue a very good account of it; the Lord Deputie left it to his discretion, to doe as he should find present occasion, out of the disposition of the Enemy; whereupon the Earle of Clanrickard that was with the Marshall, importuned him exceedingly to fight, and the Lord Deputie sent to draw up the Foote (with all expedition) close together, who marched as fast as it was possible for them to keepe their orders; the Marshall assoone as a wing of the Foote of the Vaunt-guard was come up unto him, and Sir Henry Power with his Regiment drawen over the Ford, advanced with some hundred Horse, accompanied with the Earle of Clanrickard, and gaue occasion of skirmish upon the bog side, with some hundred hargubisheers; the Enemy thereupon put out some of their loose shot from their battle, and entertayned the fight: their three battalions standing firme on the other side of the bog, at the first our shot were put close to the Horse, but with a second they beat the Enemies loose shot into their battle; and withall the Marshall, with the Earle of Clanrickard, and Sir Richard Greame, offered a charge on a battle of one thousand Foote, and finding them to stand firme, wheeled a little about: by this time Sir William Godolphin with the Lord Deputies Horse, and Captaine Mynshall with the Lord Presidents Horse, (who were appointed to keepe still in grosse, to answer all accidents) was come up, and Sir Iohn Barkley, with two of our three bodies of Foote: whereupon the Marshall with the Earle of Clanrickard, vnited themselues with Sir Henry Davers, Captaine Taffe and Captaine Fleming, charged againe the Horse, and the reare of the same battle, who presently thereupon, both Horse and Foote fell into disorder and brake.

All this while the Vantgard of the Enemies in which was Terrill, and all the Spaniards, stood firme upon a bog on the right hand, unto whom, within Calievers shot the Lord Deputie had drawen up our Reare upon a little hill, and willed them to stand firme, till they received direction from him: but perceiving the grosse drawing betweene our men that were following the execution, and the other Bodies of foot, he drew up that squadron, (commanded by Captaine Roe) to charge them in Flanck; whereupon they presently drew off, and in a great grosse marched to the top of the next hill, and there (for a little time) made a stand; the Reare of the Enemy being in their retreat, the Van went off with few slaine, but with the losse of many of their Armes, their Battell (being the greatest Body) was put all to the sword, and not aboue some sixtie escaped: The Vant-guard who went last off, were broken on the top of the hill; the Irish for the most part quit the Spanyards, who making a stand, were broken by the Lord Deputies Troopes, and most of them killed, O Campo the chiefe Commaunder taken prisoner by the Cornet, Iohn Pykman, two Captaines 7. Alferoes, and 40. Souldiers taken prisoners by such as followed the execution, which continued a mile & a halfe, and left there, onely tyred with killing: There were of the Irish rebels twelue hundred dead bodies left in the place, and as we heard from themselues, about eight hundred hurt, whereof many of them dyed that night: they lost aboue two thousand Armes, their Powder, Drummes, and nine Ensignes, which was more than ever they had together before; of Captaines, (besides other men of marke) foureteene were slaine, and on our side onely Sir Richard Greames Cornett was killed, Sir Henry Davers hurt with a sword slightly, Sir William Godolphin a little rased on the thigh with a Halbert, Captaine Crofts the Scout-Master with a shot in the backe, and not aboue five or sixe common Souldiers hurt, many of our horses killed, and more hurt: The Earle of Clanricard had many faire escapes, being shot through his Garments, and no man did bloody his sword more than his Lordship did that day, and would not suffer any man to take any of the Irish prisoners, but bade them kill the Rebels. After the Retreit was sounded, the Lord Deputie did giue the Order of Knighthood to the Earle of Clanricard, in the field in the midst of the dead bodies, and returning backe to the Campe, drew out the whole Armie, and gaue God thanks for this Victorie with their prayers; At the ending whereof, and a volley of shott for joy discharged, Don Iuan (who was attentive to heare of the Spaniards approach) hearing the volley, and conceiving that his Ayds were in fight with us, made a salley out of the Towne; but when hee perceived the Spanish Colours to be carried by Englishmen in triumph, he made a speedy retreit. The Enemies Armie, as Alonso de o Campo doth assure us, was six thousand Foote, and fivie hundred Horse; there were some of the Irish taken Prisoners, that offered great ransomes, but presently upon their bringing to the Campe, they were hanged.

Although no man is lesse credulous than myselfe is of idle Prophecies, the most whereof are coyned after things are done, yet I make bold to relate this which succeeds, for long time before the thing I speake of was brought to light: myselfe was an eye witnesse when it was reported; in concealing it I should wrong the trueth, which makes mee bold to remember it: Many times I did heare the Earle of Thomond tell the Lord President, that in an old Booke of Irish prophesies which hee had seene, it was reported, that towards the latter dayes there should bee a battell fought betweene the English and the Irish, in a place which the Booke nameth, neere unto Kinsale. The Earle of Thomond comming out of England, and landing first at Castlehaven, and after at Kinsale, as aforesaid: in the time of the siege, myselfe and divers others, heard him again report the Prophesie to the President, and named the place where (according to the Prophesie) the field should bee fought: the day whereupon the victorie was obtained, the Lord President and the Earle rode out to see the dead bodies of the vanquished, and the President asked some that were there present, by what name that ground was called; they not knowing to what end hee did demand it, told him the true name thereof, which was the same which the Earle so often before had reported to the President. I beseech the reader to believe mee, for I deliver nothing but trueth: but as one Swallow makes no Summer, so shall not this one true Prophesie increase my credulitie in old Predictions of that kinde.

The five and twentieth in the afternoone the Spaniards made a sally, but they were enforced to retreat into the Towne; at nine in the night they sallyed againe to hinder our workes in the Trenches, the skirmish continued two houres, in the end they were repulsed : on our side the Ensignes of Captaine Roper and Captaine Ghest were hurt; what harme they received, we know not.

The sixe and twentieth in the night they gaue againe upon our Trenches, and enforced a Lieutenant, (with his Guard) to quit them; and from thence they went to a little Fort of ours on the west side of the Towne: but there they found so good resistance, as they were enforced to retreat with the losse of foure men slaine, and eight hurt.

The seven and twentieth nothing was done, and that whole day was (by the Lord Deputie, the Lord President, and the rest of the Councell then in the Campe) spent in making of Dispatches into ENGLAND.

---

CHAPTER XXII.

Zubiaur arrived at Castlehaven, and immediately returned. ODonnell, Redmond Burke, &c. imbarqued for Spaine. The names of such of the Irish as fled into Spaine. The losse which the Rebells had in passing through Mounster, after the battell of Kinsale.

THE eight and twentieth, intelligence was brought to the Lord President, who related it to the Lord Deputy, that Pedro Zubiaur, who was (as is said) a

A horizontal ruler with markings every 5 units, labeled from 5 to 85. The markings are: 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, 55, 60, 65, 70, 75, 80, 85.

Scale of no fault

great Commander in the Spanish fleete that came to Kinsale, was lately landed at Castlehaven, and hearing of Tyrone's overthrow, hee made no stay but set sail for Spaine, carrying with him O Donnell, Redmond Burke, Hugh Mostian, with others of their traine, whose names I will omit; but for the better satisfaction of the Reader I thinke it meet, to set downe the names of sundry other Mounster men, who not long after fled into Spaine, whose names ensue.

A List of the Names of such of the Irish as have shipped themselves for Spaine out of Mounster, besides divers others which attended these, and whose names are not knowen, all which set saile since December, 1601.

From Castlehaven in December, 1601.

Odonnell.

Redmond Burke. } and their traine.
Hugh Mostian. }

In a Pinnace of advice that brought the Kings Letters, which were intercepted by the President in February, 1601.

Osulevan Beares sonnes, and with him one Trant of Dingle.

Donnell, Sonne to Sir Finnin Odrischall.

From Ardea in a Patache the seventh of Iune, 1602.

Donoghe, Bastard Brother to Florence Mac Cartie.
Donoghe Mac Maghon Obrien Mac Enaspicke.
Brian Okelly.

From Kinsale with Don Iuan de Aquila, in March, 1601.

Teg Mac Donnell ne Contie.
William Mac Shane, the Seneschals Sonne of Imo- killie.

Dermond Mac Conoghor Odrischall of Castle-haven, together with his Brother and Sonnes.

Thomas Omoroghoe alias Thomas Keughe Mac
Edmond of Muskry.

Richard Meaghe, Sonne and Heire to Iames
Meaghe of Kinsale.

Dominicke White of Kinsale, a Carpenters Sonne.

Melaghlen Moore of Kinsale, borne in Connaght.

Conoghor Omonowe of Kinsale, and there borne.

Edmond Mac Shane of Kinsale.

Dermond Mac Shane of Kinsale.

Donoghe Deasoghe of Kinsale.

Andrew Butler a kerne borne at Galway.

William Butler a kerne

} Brothers

Maghan Mac Donogh Olery under Barry Oge.

Dermond Mac Owen.

David fits Garret Barry, and his wife and children dwelling at Rincorran.

Garrot Barry
Nicholas Barry
Iohn Barry
David oge Barry

} sonnes to David fits Garrot
 } aforesaid.

William Hartilige of Rincorran.

Iohn Hartilige, son to William aforesaid.

Dermond oge Osulevan of Rincorran.

Dermond Ogriffien of Rincorran.

Iohn Mac Donell Kedie

of Rincorran,

Dermond Mac Donell Kedie, } Brothers.

Maurice Roch fits Iohn of Ellin-finchtowne in Kinalcy, } Brothers.

Iohn fits Iohn Roche.

Conoghor Mag Donogh of Rathmore in Kinaley.

Donogh Gowe, a Connaght man, dwelling at Rathmore in Kinaley.

Hugo Ohellie, a Connaght man.

Donogh Moel mac Enessis, Dermond
Moel mac Carties man,

Owen mac Donogh mac Finnin Cartie of Curowrane,

Donel oge Mac Donel Carty, brother to Don Carlos slaine at Kinsale.

Finnin oge Cartie, an other brother to Don Carlos.

} Brothers.

Conogher o Cullenan of Rathmore in Kinalley.

Donell Ogriffien of the same.

William mac Cormock, a Connaght man.

Dermod mac Shane, a Connaght man.

Edmond Olavien,
William Mac Ricard, } all Connaght men.
Cormocke Olanahie,

Dermond Deaserghie, a Connaght man.

Dermond Olongie of Muskry.

Richard Cogan fits Philip of Barnehelly in Kerrywherie.

Finin Mac Donoghe Cartie, a Cosen to Don Carlos.

Dermond Mac Finin Cartie, of Skeaghe in Carbry.

Donnell Mac Finin Cartie of the same.

Donnell Mac Teg Cartie of the same.

David Skemnehan of Rincorran.

Iohn Mac Dermond Mac Shane, a Connaght man.

Cormocke the Lord Presidents Footeman, of the Birnes in Leinster.

William Mac Shane of Rathmore, in the County of Limerick.

Donnell Mac Shane O Cullenan of Rathmore in Kinaley.

Iohn Oge Olenssie, a Connaght man.

Teg Welsh, alias Teg Brenaghe.

Cormocke Mac Donoghe ne Mroen }
Oriardane. }
Dermond Mac Donoghe ne Mroen } of Muskry, Oriardane. } brothers.
Owen Mac Donoghe ne Mroen }
Oriardane. }

Donnell Mac Shane Oriardane of Muskry.

Iohn Feild fits Maurice of Tracten Abbie.

John Roe Mac William, of the County of Limericke.

Donnell O Sissuane of Kinsale.

Teg O Sissuane, Sonne to Donnell aforesaid.

Hugo Lacy.

Walter Ley of Kilkenny.

Richard Stacboll.

One Master Fits Iames
a Pensioner.

} These came out of Spaine with Don Iuan, and returned with him.

From Ardea with Connor Odrischall and Archer, the seventh of Iuly, 1602.

Conner Odrischall, eldest Sonne to Sir Finin Odrischall.

Iames Archer Iesuite.

Collie Mac Swine Mac Edmond, of the Mac Swines of Carbry, his Sonne was hanged at Donboy in Iune, 1602.

Cormocke Mac Donoghe, vic' Donnell Rabaghe one of the Carties.

Donoghe Mac Conner, of Castlehaven, and owner of it.

Donnell Mac Connor, vic' Dermond
Odrischall.

} brothers.

Mac Con Mac Iffie Odrischall.

Teg Mac Iffie Odrischall.

Morriertaghe Mac Iffie Odrischall.

} Brothers.

Dermond Mac Conner of Kilcoe, } of the Carties,

Dermond Oge of the same,

} brothers.

Shane Mac Dermond Iholonghane of Bantrie.

Shane Mac Gillicuddie Iholoughane of Beare.

Teg Oge ne Mockloghe. } of the Carties,
Owen Mac Teg ne Mockloghe. } brothers.

Finnin mac Browne of the Odrischals.

Conner Omaghon of Lemcon, one of the Omaghons of Ivagh.

One of the sonnes of Gilliduff of Cleere, and one of the Odrischals.

Dermond Oge mac Dermond Odrischall.

Conner mac Finnin Roe of Bonnanie in Bantrie.

Tirlogh sonne to Teg Reugh mac Maghon of Thomond, who slew his Father when Donboy was besieged, his lands her Majestie hath given to the Earle of Thomonds brother.

Dowaltagh mac Morogh Icorromanie, foster-brother to Odonnell.

Elline ny Donogh, late wife to Dermond Moel mac Cartie, brother to Florence.

Finnin Kearigh of the Fioll, one of the Carties.

Dermond mac Shannaganie, a Rimer.

Gilliduff, a Thomond man.

Two Souldiers of Thomond which served Conner Odrischall.

David mac Shane of the Dingle, servant to Iames Archer the Iesuite.

Shane mac Dermond, vic' Donogh Oge o Cullenan, Archers boy.

Conner Oge Odrischall, heire to Conner Sir Finnins sonne, nine yeares of age.

Thomas, son and heire to the Knight of the Valley, 14 yeares old.

Donnell Omaghon, a Marriner that came in company with Owen mac Eggan.

Fiue Frenchmen that were taken by Teg Reughe, when they tooke the Ship and Merchant of Gallway.

The nine and twentieth, the Lord Deputy, and the Lord President (from sundry persons, and divers wayes) were advertised, that Tyrone in passing the broad water, lost many of his Carriages, and one hundred and fortie of his men drowned; those which tooke their way through Connolough, (for they brake into many parts) had also losse of men and Carriages in the river of May, and the like at the Abbey of Ownhy in Omulrians Countrey; so as they lost of all sorts aboue two hundred: The Footmen wearied in the flight, (to goe the lighter) cast away their Armes, and their hurt men (carried upon weake and tyred garrans) were by their fellowes left upon the way, where they dyed; their tyred horses were slaine by their Masters, and the Countrey Inhabitants (for spoyles sake) upon advantages would not spare to take some of their heads, but not in that proportion as they might haue done, if they had beene sound Subjects. Lastly, it was reported, (but how true it is I am somewhat doubtfull) that Tyrone himselfe, and Mac Mahon were both hurt in the battell, and carryed away on Litters. To conclude, never men were more dismayed with extremitie of feare, than these light-footed Traytors were.

CHAP. XXIII.

A Parley desired by Don Iuan, and granted by the Lord Deputie. Don Iuan his Propositions, with their Answeres, and his Reply. The Reasons which mooved the Lord Deputie and Councell to yeeld to a Composition. The Articles of the Composition.

THE last of December Don Iuan offered a parley, sending the Drum Major out of the Towne, with a sealed Letter to the Lord Deputie, by an Alfeeres, by which he required (as by the Copie thereof conveyed in the dispatch by Sir Richard Morison into England may appeare) that some Gentleman of speciall trust and sufficiencie, might bee sent into the Towne from his Lordship to conferre with him, whom he would acquaint with such conditions as hee then stood upon; which being granted by his Lordship, Sir William Godolphin was employed in that negotiation; which in what sort it was carried, because it importeth much, in respect of many particularities of speciall moment to bee considered; it is thought necessary it should bee here more largely delivered, his first conference with Sir William Godolphin tendeth to this: That having found the Lord Deputie (whom he termeth the Viceroy) although a sharpe and powerfull Opposito, yet an honourable Enemy, and the Irish not onely weake and barbarous, but (as hee feared) perfidious friends, hee was so farre in his affection reconciled to the one, and distasted with the other, as did invite him to make an overture of such a composition, as might bee safe and profitable for the State of England, with lesse prejudice to the Crowne of Spaine, by delivering into the Viceroyes power the Towne of Kinsale, with all other places in Ireland, held by the Spanish, so as they might depart upon honourable termes, fitting such men of warre, as are not by necessitie enforced to receiue conditions, but willingly enduced for just respects, to disengage themselues, and to relinquish a people, by whom their King and Master had beene so notoriously abused, if not betrayed: That if the Viceroy liked to entertaine further parly touching this poynt, he would first be pleased to understand them rightly, and to make his propositions such, as might bee sutable to men thoroughly resolved, rather to bury themselues aliue, and to endure a thousand deaths, then that to giue way to one Article of accord, that should tast of basenes or dishonour, being so confident of their present strength, and the Royall second of Spaine, that they should make no doubt of yeelding good account of themselues, and their interest in this kingdome: But that a just disdaine, and spleene conceived against the nation, dissuaded them from being further engaged for it, then of force they must: Sir William Godolphin being commanded by the Lord Deputie onely to receiue Don Iuans propositions and demands, having made his Lordship and Councell this relation, was by them returned with the Answer following. That howbeit the Lord Deputie having lately defeated their succours, did so well understand his owne strength and their weaknesse, as made him nothing doubt of forcing them within a very short time, whom hee did know to bee pressed with irresistible difficulties, how much soever they laboured to cover and conceale the same: Yet knowing that her sacred Majestie, out of her gracious and mercifull disposition, would esteeme the glory of her victory to be blemished by a voluntary effusion, and an obstinate expence of Christian blood, was content to entertaine this offer of agreement, so as it might bee concluded under such honourable articles of her Highnesse, as the advantage shee had against them gaue reason to demand, being the same, which are sent with this dispatch Signed by Don Iuan, the leaving of his Treasure, Munition, Artillery, and the Queenes naturall Subjects to her disposition onely excepted: All which poynts he did peremptorily refuse, with constant asseveration, that both hee and all his would rather endure the last of misery, then bee found guilty of so fowle a treason, against the honour of his Prince, and the reputation of his profession, though hee should find himselfe unable to subsist, much more now, when he might not only hope to sustaine the burthen of the warre for a time, but with patience and constancie in the end to overcome it: That hee tooke it so ill, to be understood in having Articles of that nature propounded unto him, as were they but once againe remembred in the capitulation, the Viceroy should from henceforth use the advantage of his sword, and not the benefit of his former offers; adding that the

Viceroy might rather thinke to haue made a good and profitable purchase, for the crowne of England, if with expence of two hundred thousand Duckets, hee had procured Don Iuan to quit his interest and footing, but in Baltimore, to say nothing of Kinsale, Castlehaven, and Beerehaven ; for (said hee) suppose that all we (with the rest of our places here) had perished, yet would that Pen-Insula (being strong in its owne nature) bettered by our art and industry, provided (as it is) of victuals, munition, and of good Artillery, preserue unto the King of Spaine, a safe and commodious port for the arrivall of his fleete, and bee able to maintaine it selfe against a land Army of ten thousand, untill Spaine (being so deeply engaged) did in honour releue them, which would draw on a more powerfull invasion then the first, being undertaken upon false grounds, at the instance of a base and barbarous people, who in discovering their weaknesse, and want of power, haue armed the King my master to rely upon his owne strength, being tied in honour to releue his people that are ingaged, and to cancell the memory of our former disaster: But this was spoken (said he) in case the Viceroy were able to force this Towne, as I assure my selfe hee cannot, having upon mine honour within these wals, at this instant aboue two thousand fighting men, that are stroug and able, besides those which having beene sicke and hurt, recover daily: The greatest part of these composed of old Souldiers, which fall not but by the sword, and those that were new, being now both trayned to their Armes, and growen acquainted with the Climat, are more able to endure then at the first; our meanes are good as it hath beene, any time these two moneths, such as the Spaniards can well away withall, and thereof to suffice us for three moneths more; we lodge in good warme houses, haue store of munition, and (which is best of all) stand well assured that our succours will be shortly here; to be plaine, wee preserue our men, and reserue our strength the best wee may, hoping to front you in a breach, which if our hearts faile us not, wee haue hands and breasts enough to stop against treble your forces; though I will giue the Viceroy this right, that his men are passing good, but spent and tired out with misery of a winter siege, which hee hath obstinately mainetained beyond my expectation, but with such caution, and upon so good guard, as having nicely watched all advantages; I could never fasten a salley yet upon him, but with losse to my selfe, wherein I must acknowledge my hopes deceived, that grounding on some error in his approaches, promised my selfe the defeat of at least one thousand men at one blow; but when we meet on the breach, I am confident (upon reason) to lay fise hundred of your best men on the earth, and rest hopefull that the losse of those will make a great hole in an Army, that hath already suffered so much extreamity; but to conclude our busines, the King my master sent me to assist the Condees Oneale and Odonnell, presuming on their promise that I should haue joyned with them, within few dayes of the arrivall of his forces ; I expected long in vaine, sustayned the Viceroyes Armes, saw them drawen to the greatest head they could possible make, lodged within two miles of Kinsale, reenforced with certaine Companies of Spaniards, every houre promising to releue us, and being joyned together to force your Campes, saw them at last broken with a handfull of men, blowen asunder into divers parts of the world ; Odonnell into Spaine, Oneale to the furthest part of the North, so as now I find no such Condees in rerum Natura (for those were the very words hee vsed) as I came to joyne withall ; and therefore haue moved this accord the rather to disengage the King my master, from assisting a people so unable in themselues, that the whole burthen of the warre must lye upon him, and so perfidious, as perhaps might bee enduced in requitall of his favour, at last to betray him.

Vpon relation made by Sir William Godolphin to the Lord Deputie and Councell of these offers of Don Iuan, which at severall Conferences had been brought to such heads, as by the Articles betweene them is more particularly specified, it was thought good (for divers important reasons) to proceed roundly to the agreement : for whereas in the Propositions by him made, there was not any thing that admitted exceptions on our part, but onely that hee required to carry with him his Ordnance, Munition and Treasure, that being no way prejudiciall to the maine scope, or drift of our Treatie, which chiefly respected the common good, and safetie of the Kingdome, deserved not almost to bee thought upon. Besides that, the Treasure being at first but one hundred thousand Duckets, with foure moneths payment of so many men, and other necessary deductions, could not bee but very neere wasted, and that little remainder more fit for a prey to the poore Souldiers, (after this tedious travell) then for a clause in the Composition. Furthermore how needfull it was to embrace this accord, may clearely bee seene by whosoever considereth the state of our Armie, almost utterly tyred, how full of danger and difficultie it was to attempt a Breach, defended by so many hands; how long time it might haue cost us (if wee had lodged in the Breach) before wee could haue carried the Towne, being full of strong Castles; how her Majesties Ships, and others being in the Harbour, should haue been forced speedily to forsake us for want of victualls; how our selues were not provided for aboue six dayes at the time of this parley; that wee had neither Munition, nor Artillerie, but for one Battery, in one place at once, five of our Peeces being before crazed: And finally, that if wee had missed of our purpose, the whole Countrey had been hazarded: Furthermore, that which seemed of greatest consequence to enduce his Lordship to this agreement, was, that the Spanyards in Baltemore, Castlehaven, and Beerehaven, by vertue of this Contract, were likewise to surrender those places, and depart the Countrey, which how hard a matter it would haue prooved, and how long and dangerous a war it would haue drawn on, to root them out, they being strongly fortified, and well stored with victuals, Munition and Artillery, may easily bee conjectured, for that of necessitie the Armie (for some space) must haue rested, and in the end haue been constrained after a new supply of necessaries, (to her Majesties intolerable charges) to transport themselves thither by Sea, the way by land being unpassable, in which time their Succours out of Spaine, in all likelihood would haue been come unto them; the King being so farre engaged in his Honour to second his enterprise, and wee barred of that prosecution of the Rebels, which now by this Agreement wee may wholly intend.

For which considerations, the Lo: Deputie and Councell thought it in their wisdomes meet, to condescend to more indifferent conditions, which beeing propounded and agreed upon by Don Iuan, these Articles ensuing were signed and sealed on both parts.

The Articles of Composition betweene the Lord Deputie and Councell, and Don Iuan de Aquila.

Mountjoy.

In the Towne of Kinsale in the Kingdome of Ireland, the second day of the Moneth of January, 1601, betweene the Noble Lords the Lord Mountjoy, Lord Deputie, and Generall in the Kingdome of Ireland, and Don Iuan de

Aquila, Captaine and Campmaster Generall, and Governour of the Armie of his Majestie the King of Spaine, the said Lord Deputie being encamped, and besieging the said towne and the said Don Iuan within it, for just respects, and to avoyd shedding of blood, these Conditions following were made betweene the said Lords Generalls, and their Campes, with the Articles that follow.

First, That the said Don Iuan de Aquila shall quit the places which hee holds in this Kingdome, as well of the Towne of Kinsale, as those which are held by the Souldiers under his command, in Castlehaven, Baltimore, and the Castle of Beere-haven, and other parts, to the said Lord Deputie, or to whom he shall appoynt, giving him safe transportation (and sufficient) for the said people, of ships and victualls, with the which the said Don Iuan with them may go for Spaine, if he can at one time, if not in two shippings.

Item, That the Souldiers at this present being under the command of Don Iuan in this Kingdome, shall not beare Armes against her Majestie the Queene of England, wheresoever supplyes shall come from Spaine, till the said Souldiers be unshipped in some of the Ports of Spaine, being dispatched (as soone as may be) by the Lord Deputy, as he promiseth upon his Faith and Honour.

Item, For the accomplishing whereof, the Lord Deputie offereth to giue free pasport to the said Don Iuan and his Army, as well Spaniards as other nations whatsoever, that are under his command, and that hee may depart with all the things hee hath, Armes, Munitions, Money, Ensignes displayed, Artillery, and other whatsoever provisions of warre, and any kind of stuffe, as well that which is in Castlehaven, as Kinsale and other parts.

Item, That they shall haue ships and victuals, sufficient for their money, according and at the prices which here they use to giue, that all the people and the said things, may bee shipped (if it be possible) at one time, if not at two, and that to bee within the time aboue named.

Item, That if by contrary winds, or by any other occasions, there shall arriue at any Port of these kingdomes of Ireland, or England, any ships of these (in which the said men goe) they bee intreated as friends, and may ride safely in the Harbour, and bee victualled for their money, and haue moreover things which they shall need, to furnish them to their voyage.

Item, During the time that they shall stay for shipping, victuals shall be given to Don Iuans people, at just and reasonable rates.

Item, That of both parts shall be cessation of Armes, and security that no wrong be offered any one.

Item, That the ships (in which they shall goe for Spaine) may passe safely, by any other ships whatsoever, of her Majesties the Queene of England; and so shall they of the said Queene, and her Subjects by those that shall goe from hence, and the said ships being arrived in Spaine, shall returne assoone as they haue unshipped their men, without any impediment given them by his Majestie, or any other person in his name, but rather they shall shew them favour, and helpe them (if they need any thing;) and for security of this, they shall giue into the Lord Deputies hands, three Captaines such as hee shall choose.

For the securitie of the performance of the Articles, Don Iuan offereth that he wil confirme, and sweare to accomplish this agreement: And likewise some of the Captaines of his Charge shall sweare and confirme the same in a severall writing.

Item, that hee in person shall abide in this Kingdome, where the Lord Deputie shall appoynt, (till the last shipping) upon his Lordships word: And if it happen that his people be shipped all at once, the said Don Iuan shall goe in the same Fleet, without any impediment given him: But rather the Lord Deputy shall giue a good ship, in which hee may goe; and if his said men be sent in two shippings, then he shall goe in the last.

And in like sort the said Lord Deputie shall sweare and confirme, and giue his word in the behalfe of her Majestie the Queene and his owne, to keepe and accomplish this agreement, and joyntly the Lord President, the Lo. Marshall of the Campe, and the other of the Councell of State, and the Earles of Thomond and Clanricard, shall sweare and confirme the same in a severall writing.

I doe promise and sweare to accomplish and keepe these Articles of Agreement, and promise the same likewise on the behalfe of his Majestie Catholique, the King my Master.

George Carew.

Thomond.

Don Iuan de Aguila.

Clanricard.

Richard Wingfield.

Robert Gardiner.

George Bouchier.

Richard Levison.

---

---

CHAP. XXIV.

The names of the Hostages delivered by Don Iuan. Don Iuan his demand of victuals for the transportation of his men. The victuals which was delivered to Don Iuan, and their rates. The number of Spaniards which were transported out of Ireland. The Lord Deputie brake up his siege and returned to Corke. Captaine Harvies Commission for his government.

THE day the Articles were Signed, Don Iuan dined with the Lord Deputie, and the next day after, the Lord President (having Sir Richard Levison and Sir William Godolphin in his company) was sent into the Towne of Kinsale, where he dyned with Don Iuan to treat with him, about such shipping and victuals as hee would demand, for the transportation of his men, and at what rates, for the which ready money was to bee payd : And also to demand of him, the three Captaines which the Lord Deputie had made choise of, which were Don Pedro Morijon, Captaine Pedro cuaco, and Captaine Diego Gonzales Sigler, to remaine Pledges untill the returne of the ships: The demands hee made of victuals, and tonnage for the victualling and transporting of three thousand and two hundred men (remayning in Kinsale, Castlehaven, Baltimore, and Danboy, whereof two thousand and sixe hundred in Kinsale, and sixe hundred at the places aforesaid) were as followeth.

First his demands was sixe weekes victuals, in forme following.

For every weeke foure dayes flesh, three dayes fish.

For every flesh day, bread foure and twenty ownces for a man, and sixe of Beefe.

For every fish day, foure and twenty ounces of Bread, sixe ounces of fish, and one ounce of Butter.

For every hundred men, one Pipe of wine, besides water.

For shipping for every three men, two Tuns, and hee to giue fourtie shillings le Tun, and his men to bee landed at the first Port they can touch in Spaine.

For the expediting of these demands, the Lord Deputie gaue present direction to all the Ports within the Province, for the taking up of shipping, and warrant to Allen Apsley (the Commissary for the victuals in Mounster) to issue out of the Queenes store, according to the demands made : These quantities of victuals ensuing, for the which hee should receiue money of Don Iuan, whereby the Magazine might bee supplied.

Towards the accomplishing whereof, the Commissary of the victuals delivered this ensuing proportion, viz.

Bisquet	186052 li.	2067	4	8
Butter	6304	157	12	3
Flesh	47394	789	18	00
Fish	18339	305	13	00
Ryce	1235	30	17	6
Summa tot.		3351	5	5

Which being with all possible convenience dispatcht, haste was made for their Embarquing at two sundry times : There was shipped at Kinsale, (the care whereof was committed to Captaine Francis Slingsbye) 2070: at Baltimore, and at Castlehaven by Captaine Roger

Harvie 415, in all 3025, besides Captaines, inferior Officers, Priests, and religious men, and a great Company of Irish.

The fourth of Ianuary a Spanish ship appeared by the old Head of Kinsale, hovering before the Harbor mouth. The Lord Deputie having concluded the Composition with Don Iohn, for the rendring of the Towne of Kinsale, sent a Boat with some men in her to let them know that Don Iohn and hee were good friends, and therefore hee might safely come in without any danger, (in which Boat was one Thomas Foster, a Nephew to Sir Anthony Cooke) which message as-soone as it was delivered, the Captaine of the ship tooke in all the men, hoysed sayle, and stood away with all speed for Spaine. This might seeme to be an action performed with no good approbation, in putting those men into their power; but whether it be justifiable or no, the successe prooved it to bee of very great consequence: for though the newes of the defeat of the Irish Armie were come into Spaine by O Donnell, and those with him, yet Don Iohn stood firme in Kinsale without danger to be much pressed by the Deputy, soliciting new forces, hoping thereby to repaire their former losses, to reunite their dispersed Companies, and to overthrow the English forces, being much spent and sore weakened by their Winter siege: Before the arrivall of O Donnell Seconds were in preparing, and after his arrivall both increased, and much hastened, as may appeare by the Letters intercepted, which came out of Spaine to Don Iohn, when hee was at Corke, both from the King of Spaine, the Duke of Lerma, the Secretary Ibarra, and others: But when they understood by those men, that Don Iohn had compounded for the rendering of Kinsale, and for their returning into Spaine, it then put them to a stand for their proceedings, and at last concluded to giue over the attempt, finding so little assistance either in the power or courage of the Irish: And if this had not fallen out thus, and that those seconds had come and landed in Ireland, it might haue beene much doubted, or rather positiuely beleaved the contrary, that those Spanyards would not haue been bound by Don Iohns Articles, but haue taken their best opportunitie of their force and power, in kindling a new flame, and making that Kingdome againe in as desperate an estate as ever heretofore it hath been, if not worse.

These things being thus ordered, and no cause appearing of longer stay in the Campe, the ninth of Ianuary the Lord Deputy rose, and the same day he rode to Corke, having in his company Don Iuan de Aguila, and many of the Spanish Captaines, the grosse of his companies being left in Kinsale. The Lord Deputie lodged in the Bishop of Corkes house, Don Iuan in the Citie, and the President at Shandon Castle. The day following the Captaines received directions to repayre to sundry Towns in Mounster appointed for their Garrisons; And the same day Cap-tainie Roger Harvie, and Captaine George Flower were dispatched with certaine Companies to goe by Sea, to receiue the Castles of Castle-haven, Donneshed, and Donnelong at Baltimore, and Dunboy at Beerehaven in the West, all which were then in the possession of the Spanyards. Also the sayd Captaine Harvie had a Commission graunted unto him, for the government of all the Countreyes betweene Rosse in Carbery, and the Bay of Bantrey, as followeth.

A Commission from the Lord Deputie and Councell unto Captaine Roger Harvy, for the government of Carbry.

Mountjoye.

WEe greete you well: Whereas wee haue thought it very expedient for the furtherance of her Majesties service, and the drawing and settling the Inhabitants of the Westerne parts, of the Province of Mounster (which lately revolted) into her Majesties allegiance againe, which in regard that divers the Rebels which were vnited to Tyrone, and the Spaniards, upon the overthrow given them, made escape, and are drawen to Baltimore, Castlehaven, and those other Westerne parts: For the better prosecution, cutting off, and apprehension of those, and of all other Rebels, Traytors, Fellons, and other capitall Offenders, by all the best and speediest meanes that may be: Wee haue thought it good, in regard of the great knowledge and experience, wee haue had and found in your faith and valour, and in respect of the speciall trust, confidence, and sufficiencie, wee repose in you, Wee haue thought it good to grant and commit unto you, (during our pleasure) the command and authority (by the power granted us by her Majestie) over the Castles of Baltimore, and Castlehaven, and the whole Countrey of Carbery, and over all the Countries, territories or places of Collemore, Collibeg, Ivagh, Mounterbarry, Slewghteagibane, Slewghteage, Roe, Cloncahill, Clondermot, Clonloghen, and Coshmore, and over all the other Countries, territories, places by what name or names soever they bee called, from the Towne of Rosse, to the hither parts of the Meares, and bounds of Beere and Bantry, and so in compasse Northwards, to Muskery : And we doe giue you power and authority over the Queenes people and her Subjects, and Inhabitants, in all, or any the said Countries, appoynting and authorising you hereby, to prosecute with fire and sword, all Rebels, Traytors, or other capitall Offenders, and all their Ayders, Releevors, Maintainers, Receivers, and Abettors, or any other Offenders whatsoever that are not amenable to her Majesties Lawes, or haue combined, or adhered themselves, to any her Majesties enemies, or to any now in actuall rebellion against her Highnesse, and to make ceasure of all their goods and chattles to her Majesties use : And for the better effecting of this her Highnesses service, and the speciall trust reposed in you, wee doe hereby giue unto you liberty, to em- ploy, or send among the Enemies, or Rebels (now in action) such Messengers and Espialls, as you shall thinke fit to use, and to write to parley, conferre, or treat with them, or any of them, and to receive Messengers or Letters from them, and to keepe any of them in your company fourteen dayes, to procure the doing of service, or to gaine intelligences from them; and upon assurance and good hopes, that any of the said Rebels will do service to her Majestie; Wee doe hereby authorize you to safe conduct them by warrant under your hand, for the like space of fourteene dayes, so as in the meane time you send them unto us, or to the chiefe Governor of the Province (for the time being) which your safe conduct shall bee duly observed, to all those you grant it unto.

And for the better and speedier cleansing, and purging the Countrey from Rebels, and Malefactors; Wee doe hereby giue, and commit unto you, full power and authority to execute by Marshall Law, all notable and apparent Offenders and Malefactors, that can neither dispend fourtie shillings in Lands per Annum, nor are worth ten pounds in goods, and as for such Rebels and Malefactors, as are not within compasse of Martial Law, them to apprehend and commit to the Sheere Goale, there to remaine and attend their trials by due course of her Majesties common Lawes: And for the better advancement of her Majesties Service, wee do hereby authorise you, to go aboard any Ship, Barque, or other Vessel, that shall bee, or arriue in those parts, and to make search in them for Traytors, Iesuits, Seminaries, Letters, or prohibited wares, and to make stay of them, if just occasion so require, and to presse and take up any the Boats, or Vessels, that are or shall bee within the compasse of your command, and them to send and employ, to such place or places, as her Majesties service shall giue you occasion, or otherwise to use and dispose of them, as you in your discretion shall thinke meetest : And this our authority and Commission to you granted, to haue continuance during the pleasure of us the Lord Deputie; and if wee shall not recall the same during our abroad in this Province, then the same to bee in force during the pleasure of the Lord President, and no longer. And therefore wee doe hereby straightly charge and command all her Majesties Officers, Ministers, and loving Subjects, to be unto you (in the due execution of the premisses) aiding, obedient, and assisting at their uttermost perils; and for such your whole doings herein: These shall bee unto you sufficient warrant and discharge: Giuen under her Majesties privie Signet, at the Campe before Kinsale, the seventh day of Ianuary, 1601.

George Carew.
Richard Wingfield.
George Bouchier.

To our well beloved Captaine, Roger Harvy.

The eleaventh, the Lord President had intelligence from England, that Iames (the late restored Earle of Desmond) was dead, and that eighteene hundred quarters of Oates were sent into Mounster for the releefe of our horses.

---

---

CHAP. XXV.

Don Iuan his request to the Lord Deputie. A resolution in Councell to erect certaine Forts in Mounster. The request of the Inhabitants of Kinsale to the Lord President. Certaine Companies cashiered. A Letter from the Lord President to her Majestie. The Examination of Richard Owen. Richard Owen his Message from Tyrone to the Lord Deputie. Instructions for Captaine George Blunt.

THE fourteenth, Don Iuan wrote to the Lord Deputie, to pray his Lordship, that expedition might be made in taking up of shipping for his transportation, and that his Lordship would commiserate the poore Spanish Prisoners in Corke, who were like to perish for want of food: During the siege there had beene taken at Rincorran, Castle Ny Parke, in sallyes, and in the overthrow of Tyrone, together with some runawaeyes that voluntary came unto us, about two hundred, rather more than lesse, whereof some of them had been sent into ENGLAND. About this time the Lord Deputie and the Lord President went by Boate to an Iland in the River of Corke, called Halbolin, sixe or seven miles from the Citie, which upon view they thought fit to be fortified, being so seated, as that no shipping of any burthen can passe the same, but under the commaund thereof: Whereupon direction was given to Paul Ive (an Ingeneere) to raise a fortification there, and also another at Castle Ny Parke, to command the Haven at Kinsale. Furthermore it was resolved in Councell, that Forts should haue beene erected at Baltimore and Beerehaven, as also Cittadells at Corke, Limrick, and Waterford, to keepe the Citizens in some awe; but none of these workes were performed, saue onely the Forts at Halbolyn and Castle Ny Parke aforesayd.

And the same day the better sort of the Burgesses of Kinsale came to the Lord President, to beseech him to render unto them their Charter, Seale, Mace, and Standard, which some of them, upon the Spaniards arrivall at Kinsale, had delivered unto him (to bee safely kept) untill the Spanish storme was past; which they did not deliver unto him as a Surrender, but to shew and manifest their Dutys: The President acquainted the Lord Deputy with their Petition, and by agreement, the answer (which the President made) was, That before hee had received directions from England, he might not restore their Muniments unto them, for that hee conceived that they were forfeited: But hee would write in their behalfe, and so he did; And not long after he had direction to deliver them, but with this caution, that they should at their owne charges reedifie their walls, and giue helpe of Labourers towards the finishing of Castle Ny Parke, which they promised to performe.

From the fourteenth of Ianuary unto the last of the same, no matter of any consequence hapned, all which time was spent in civill causes, in sending of dispatches into England (as occasions did result) in discharging of Companies which were growen weake, whereof two thousand in List were casheered, in hastning away of the Spaniards, and in setting of Garisons in the East part of Mounster, among other private dispatches, which the Lord President sent into England; hee wrote this Letter unto her Majestie.

A Letter from the Lord President to her Majestie.

SACRED MAIESTIE,

NOW that it hath pleased the omnipotent Director of all things to blesse you with a happie Victorie over the malicious Traytors, and forraine enemies, which endeavoured with all their forces to draw from your Imperiall Crowne, this Realme of Ireland, in the which by your Majesties expresse Commandment, I have been (though farre unworthie) imployed in a Charge, wherein my weaknesse doth too much appeare; yet since out of your Princely favour, your Majestie hath beene pleased to accept of those poore services, which by your Forces I have formerly performed, and with your royall hand, (to my unspeakeable comfort) unto myselfe have witnessed the same, I am emboldened (under the assurance of your gracious Pardon) to present before your gracious eyes, those unworthy Lines, unworthy of your view, as well in regard of him that writes them, as the forme wherein they are written. Since the victorie aforesaid, the face of this Kingdom is strangely altered; The Rebelle, (formerly proud) is now become a dismayed fugitive, the neutrall subject which stood at a gaze, better confirmed, and the Spanyard, (which promised unto himselfe no lesse than a Conquest) is glad to entreat a Composition to depart: This wonderfull worke of God, (for unto him it is wholly to bee ascribed) hath brought this Realme, (so farre out of order) in a fayrer way of reduction than ever I knew it. When your Majestie employed me in this Service, I then feared it was (as I now understand it to bee) a secret punishment from God for my sinnes, for unto myselfe I had propounded that happinesse (which others have) never to be farre distant from the comfort of your royall eyes, which addes fullnesse of joy with admiration to the beholders. Wherefore gracious Sovereaigne, commiserate my exile, and let me your poore servant, (rich in faith and loyaltie unto you) bee partaker of others happinesse, that the remainder of my life therein may be blessed: But if I be not capable of such abundant grace in so great measure, (which my Soule desires) yet let my humble suite thus farre prevaile, that in your Princely favour you will be pleased to giue mee leaue for a few moneths to behold that Majestie which is envyed, but not equalled by any earthly Prince. From your Majesties Citie of Corke the nineteenth of January, 1601.

Your Sacred Majesties
vassall and creature,

GEORGE CAREW.

The fourth of February, one Richard Owen an ancient and inward Servant of Tyrones, came unto Corke, with a message from his Master unto the Lord Deputie; but before I speake of his Negotiation, I thinke it convenient to fall backe to the sixth of Ianuary, at which time hee made meanes to haue accesse unto the President; for (you must understand) hee had been with Don Iohn in Kinsale: The President acquainting the Lord Deputy with it, hee was called before them both, and was examind by them, whereunto hee made an answer as followeth.

He saith hee went out of Ireland with Sir William Stanley, and was employed by him in the rendering of Deventer to Taxis.

Hee left Sir William upon a discontentment (about fower yeares after being then a Lieutenant) because

Sir William did advance the English, and not the Irish to charges, and then put himselfe into the Kings pay as a Pensioner, and there remayned in the Low-countries, and France, until about three yeares since; he came over into Ireland by the way of Scotland, and landed at Dunluce, with purpose to serue Oneale, whose kinsman hee is by his mother, and remayned with Tyrone, untill by him hee was employed to carie his Sonne into Spaine.

Hee had Letters from Tyrone and Odonnell, to the King, and from Tyrone unto Don Iuan Idiaques, the Duke of Lerma, to Fray Gaspar de Cordoua, the King's Confessor, the Secretarie Prado, and to the Secretarie Estevan de ybarra.

The contents of the Letters, were to pray Aides to subsist the warre, according to the promise made by the old King; if the aides were sent for Vlster, then Tyrone required but fower or fiue thousand men, if the King did purpose to send an Army into Mounster, then he should send strongly; because neither Tyrone nor Odonnell could come to helpe them.

Hee saith, that Fray Matheo de Oviedo (the Archbishop of Dublin) out of an ancient knowledge which hee had in this kingdome, having beene before in this Realme, in Iames fits Maurice his rebellion, did solicit the sending of forces hither, and came into the North, purposely to see, and understand the state of the Countrey.

Hee also saith, that Tyrone sent his Sonne into Spaine, to bee there brought up, not being demanded of the King as a Pledge.

Hee saith, that all the Kings Councell were very forward to thrust on the invasion, and for his owne particular, he advised that the Spanish forces should land at Carlingford, and if that Councell did not like them, then hee perswaded that the forces should land at Galway or Sligo.

Hee saith, that Oneales Sonne hath two hundred duckets pension of the King per mensem.

Hee saith, that when the Army came for Ireland, out of a desire to establish religion, and to procure to the Irish Lords some greater government in the Realme, he came voluntary hither, without pay, but protests that hee never wished that the Crowne of Ireland should be taken from the Queene: Hee saith, he never heard of any of Ireland, that by Letters did solicit this invasion, but James Mac Sorley, who (as hee heard) writ to the King; that Florence did write unto the King hee knowes not, but Tyrone did write unto this Examinat, that Florence would bee in Armes with him against her Majestie.

Hee saith, that he thinketh, that if the Spaniards had prevailed in this Enterprise, that their meaning was not to possesse themselves of Ireland, but from hence to haue invaded England, and to haue entertayned the Irish Nation in that enterprise.

Being demanded if the English had beene beaten out of Ireland, what government should haue beene here established, and who should haue governed; hee answered that therein he is wholly ignorant, but when Tyrone did write for aide, he saith (that hee thinketh) that when the English were banished and expelled, that then hee would submit himselfe to bee dealt withall as pleased the King.

Hee saith, that in March next, hee thinketh that supplyes should haue beene sent to Don Iuan, but now hee is of opinion, that never any more will bee sent into Ireland.

Hee saith, that the reason, that now hee desired the Lord President to bring him to the Lord Deputie, was because he was altogether weary to serue with the Irish, and also commanded so to doe by Tyrone after his overthrow.

Hee was commanded by Tyrone (the next morning after the overthrow) to repaire to the Lord Deputie, and to tell his Lordship, that hee was willing and desirous to become a Subject, if hee may bee received, and justly dealt withall; and to redeeme his errors past, hee professed to doe all possible service to her Majestie, but that he would not leaue his Sonne hostage for him.

Hee saith, that hee thinketh upon his conscience, that Odonnell went into Spaine without any advise of Tyrone, and that Redmond Burke and Captaine Mostian went likewise without his consent.

Which done, being sorry, as he protested, of his traytorly life, hee humbly craved her Majesties gracious protection, promising to merit the same with future loyall service; which being graunted, hee departed. Vpon the fourth of this moneth (as afore-sayd) having beene in the meane time with Tyrone, hee made his second addresse to the President, the Lord Deputie then being in Corke, and being called before the Lord Deputie and the President, he delivered unto them a Message from Tyrone, the effect whereof was, that he would be glad to be received into her Majesties mercie, being heartily sorry that hee had given her so just a cause of offence, and likewise grieved in his soule, that hee had been the cause of the effusion of so much blood, the exhausting of her Majesties Treasures, and the ruine of his native Countrey; Neverthelesse this pretended grieve and humilitie was farced with some exorbitant conditions, unmeet for him to demaund from his Sovereigne, (whom hee had highly offended) or for a Monarch to graunt to a vassall: Notwithstanding it was thought good to take hold of the occasion; for although it should not worke the end desired, (which was to settle the Kingdome in tranquillitie) yet a motion onely of submission, proceeding from the capitall Rebelle, would worke in the mindes of the inferiour Traytors, a mistrust of their estates, and seeke by his Example, to sue for grace while there was time, wherein they might hope to obtaine it: Vpon these considerations the Lord Deputie was willing (after hee had shewed his dislike to the Conditions) to embrace the motion; And because that he might be assured to haue a true report returned, Captaine George Blunt (who had been a familiar and inward friend unto Tyrone, when hee was a Subject) was imployed in this businesse; and for his manner of treating with him, hee had these Instructions following, subscribed by the Lord Deputie, and the Lord President.

When you speake with Tyrone, you shall tell him, that you understand that Richard Owen came from him to the Lord Deputie, with Commission from him to tell his Lordship, that hee desired to bee received into the Queenes mercy, if his life might be secured.

Whereupon you finding in him such conformitie (out of your ancient loue, which in former time you bare him) were glad of the alteration, and therefore as his friend did now undertake this long Iourney, to perswade him to those courses which might best answer his dutie to his Prince, and repayre his estate, which in your opinion is desperate.

If you find him desirous to bee received to mercie, you shall giue him hope of it, and promise him furtherance for the effecting of it, upon these conditions: That he shall in token of his penitency, and according to the dutie of a Subject to his Naturall Prince, first under his hand write a letter of submission to the Lord Deputie, humbly craving in the same her Majesties mercy, with promise to redeeme his errours past by his future service; That likewise he shall write a publique Submission to her Majestie, imploring at her hands forgiuenesse of his faults, and likewise promise amendment of his life, with a willing desire to doe her some acceptable service, in recompence of his transgression, in the same protesting to serue her Majestie against all men, either of Ireland, or Forreiners that shall endeavour the disturbance of this Countrey.

That he shall put into her Majesties hands his eldest Sonne, for the assurance of his future loyaltie, and foure principall Gentlemen of his blood, as he formerly promised.

That hee shall at his charge finde workmen to build such Forts in the Countrey of Tyrone, and in such places as the Lord Deputy shall thinke fit.

That he shall permit throughout Tyrone, her Majesties Officers of Iustice, as the Sheriffes and others, to haue free liberty to execute their Offices, as is accustomed in other Provinces and Counties of the Realme, and answer all other duties formerly promised.

That hee shall onely undertake for himselfe, and his Pledges to lye for no more, then those that dwell upon that land onely that is contayned in his Letters Patents, not any way undertaking for the rest of Tyrone, as Tirlogh Brassiloes sonnes, Mac Maghon, O Cane, Mac Guire, Mac Genis, the two Clandeboyes, and all of the East side of Ban. That if any of his neighbours shall continue in rebellion, none of their people shall be harboured in Tyrone, and likewise that none of Tyrone shall (by his consent or knowledge) succour any Rebell, or giue assistance to them; and if any such offender shall happen to be discovered, either by himselfe, or any other her Majesties Officers, upon knowledge thereof, that hee shall doe his best endeavour to prosecute the parties offending, and either take them, whereby they may be tryed by the Lawes of the Realme, or kill them, if they may not otherwise bee had, and shall assist her Majesties Officers, in taking to her use the goods and chattells of the Offenders, and their retinues: That he shall not onely truely pay all her Majesties Rents and Duties from this time forward, due unto her out of Tyrone, but also pay the Arrerages, that for many yeares haue been by him detayned.

That in respect of the great charges that hee hath put her Majestie unto, (although it bee not the thousand part of her disbursements) In nomine pænæ (which in all such great offences is accustomed) towards the victualling of her Majesties Garisons, hee shall pay two thousand Cowes within sixe moneths: That the Countrey of Tyrone may bee limited, and no more by him to be possessed, then is containd in his Letters Pattents: That the territory of Tyrone might bee divided into shieres, and haue Goales as hee hath formerly desired: That hee put at liberty the Sonnes of Shane Oneale; and all other prisoners, English and Irish: These things you shall only propound as from your selfe, yet as conceiving that they will be demanded at his hands, if hee be received, and to draw as large an overture from him, of what hee will agree unto, as you can perswade him, telling him, that the greater assurance he doth giue the estate of his loyaltie, the greater will bee his safetie, for wee shall conster his good meaning, by his free offer thereof, and after wee shall haue the lesse reason to bee jealous of him.

Mountioye.

George Carew.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The King of Spaines Letters intercepted. A Letter from the Duke of Lerma to Don Iuan de Aguila. A Letter from the Duke of Lerma to the Archbishop of Dublin. A Letter from the Secretary Ybarra to Don Iuan de Aguila. A Letter from the Secretary Fragursa to Don Iuan de Aguila. A Letter from the King of Spaine to Don Iuan de Aguila.

ABOUT the tenth of February, <sup>a</sup> Don Iuan de Aguila residing in Corke, whilst his Troopes were preparing to bee imbarqued for Spaine; In this interim, a Spanish Pinnace landed in the Westermost part of the Province, and in her, there was a Messenger sent from the King to Don Iuan de Aguila with a packet of Letters: The President having knowledge thereof, told the Lord Deputie, that if hee had a desire to know the King of Spaines intentions, there was a good occasion offered, the Lord Deputies heart itching to haue the Letters in his hands, prayed the President to intercept them if hee could hansomely doe it; the President undertooke it, and having notice that the next morning the Messenger would come from Kinsale to Corke, and knowing that there was but two wayes by the which hee might passe, called Captaine William Nuce unto him (who commanded his foote Company) to make choise of such men as hee could trust to lie upon those passages, and when they saw such a Spaniard (whom hee had described unto him) to seaze upon him, and as thieues to rob him both of his Letters, horses and money, not to hurt his person,

<sup>a</sup> 1601.

but to leaue him and his Guid bound, that hee might make no swift pursuit after them, and when they had delivered him the Letters to runne away: Captaine Nuce so well followed his instructions, as the Spaniard was taken in a little Wood, and the Letters brought at dinner time; Don Iuan (if I doe not mistake) that very day dyning with him, who instantly caried them to the Lord Deputie, where at good leasure the packets were opened and read, which done the President went to his house, leaving the Letters with the Lord Deputie: the same evening, the Spanish Messenger having beene unbound by passengers, came to Don Iuan de Aguila relating his misfortune, in being robbed not fiae miles from the Towne: Don Iuan de Aguila went immediatly to the Lord Deputie, grievously complayning that the Messenger was robbed by Souldiers (as hee alleaged:) The Lord Deputie seemed no lesse sorry, but (said he) it is a common thing in all Armies to haue debauched Souldiers, but hee thought it to bee rather done by some of the Countrey thieues; but if the fact was committed by Souldiers, it was most like to bee done by some Irish men, who thought it to bee a good purchase (as well as the money) to get the Letters, to shew them unto their friends in rebellion, that they might the better understand in what estate they were in: Don Iuan not being satisfied with this answer, desired the Lord Deputie to enquire of the Lord President, (for of his intercepting of them he had a vehement suspicion) whether hee had any knowledge of the matter, and so they departed. The next morning the Lord Deputy related to the President the complaint, and his answers : Don Iuan eager in the pursuite of his Letters, came to know of the Lord Deputie what the President answered : The Lord Deputie answered him upon his fayth, that hee was sure that the President had them not ; which hee might well doe, for they were in his owne possession : In conclusion, a Proclamation was made, and a reward (in the same promised) for him that could discover the Theeves, and a pardon for their liues graunted that committed the fact, if they would come in and confesse it ; with this Don Iuan rested satisfied : How much the intercepting of these Letters did import her Majesties Service, (not one Spanyard being then imbarcked, but remaining in a Body at Kinsale) may appeare by these ensuing Letters (Englished) taken at that time.

A Letter from the Duke of Lerma, to
Don Iuan de Aguila.

NOt many dayes past I wrote unto you, and now I make answeare to those which I received from you the thirteenth of the last October, assuring you, that his Majesty puts great confidence in your care and valour : As touching the men, and other things which you demaund, there is dispatched a good quantitie, and more is in preparing, and make you no doubt, but still more shall bee in sending, as much as may bee : for his Majestie hath it before his eyes, and I haue taken in hand the solliciting thereof; Wherefore you may bee assured, that you shall not want any thing which may bee sent that is needfull: There is now in readinesse, 150 Launces, which shall be presently imbarqued, and more men are in levying with expedition, with whom Money shall be sent: And so referring myselfe (for the rest) to his Majesties Dispatch, I will say no more, but to assure you, that in all things which may concerne you, esteeme mee ever to bee your Sollicitor. God keepe you. Valladolid, the fourth of December, 1601.

*El Duque de Lerma,
Marques de Denia.*

To Don Iuan de Aguilá, Master of the Campe, Generall of the men of Warre in Ireland.

A Letter from the Duke of Lerma to the Archbishop of Dublin.

I Have received your Lordships Letters, giving thanks to God for the successe of your journey, for by it it appeares, that there is a way and doore open for many good purposes for his service, and his Majestie hath much confidence of the care & zeale which your Lordship hath for the progression in the same. Now we send you a good Body of men, with such things as is necessary, and more shall be prepared, and so continue sending as much as wee may, whereof you need not doubt: for his Majestie (whom God preserue)

holds it before his eyes, forasmuch as the most important thing (appertaining to this businesse) is the joyning of the Earles with Don Iuan de Aguila: his Majestie commandeth your Lordship to doe in it your uttermost endeavour, according to the confidence hee hath in your zeale. God preserue your Lordship. From Valladolid the fifth of December. 1601.

El Duque de Lerma
Marques de Denia.

Let not your Lordship be wearied with your travells, I hope in God they will be full of good successes.

Al Arcobispo de Dublin.

A Letter from the Secretary Ybarra to Don Iuan de Aguila.

BY Captaine Albornoz I wrote unto your Lordship, and I wish that this dispatch may overtake him (at the Groyne) according to the desire I hold, that it, and that which goes with it, were with your Lordship, certifying you that as much is done (as may be) for your supply in all things: I wrote unto your Lordship, that there were two Companies of Horse ready to be sent unto you, but now I say there is three, and in them two hundred and twenty Souldiers well armed, and horsed; and it please God they shall be all imbarqued in this Moneth, God in his divine mercy guid them: There is men levied in all Castile and Portugall, and shipping embarged to transport them, victuals, and other necessaries in providing; and now at this instant there is imbarqued in Lisborne, in the Groyne, and Saint Andera more then sixe thousand Hanegas of Wheat, and three hundred pipes of Wine, and some Beanes and Rice, and sixe hundred Arrobas of Oyle; and moreover, besides this which I say is imbarqued, there are Commissaries taking of more up, and no care shall bee wanting to hasten them away: I haue spoken with Captaine Moreles, and of that which hee hath told mee of the seat of the place, and of the small number of men your Lordship hath, I feele myselfe grieved; but when I call to mind, what a person Don Iuan de Aguila is, the way is open unto me, to expect great matters, and I hope God will grant the same according to the worth of your Lordship, against your wicked enemies: Let your Lordship hasten the joyning of the Earles with you, for of all things that is most important, which being done, before the Queene can reenforce her Army all is accomplished; I am desirous to heare that the excellent good Horsemen were with your Lordship, that with them your Lordship may winne honour in the field, &c. From Valladolid this seventh of December, 1601.

Estevan de Ybarra.

To Don Iuan de Aguila, Generall Master of the Campe.

A Letter from the Secretary Franquesa, to Don Iuan de Aguila.

HIS Majestie is much satisfied of the good government (in those occasions) of your Army; and J hope in God, that with the succors, which now shall bee sent unto you, it will bee bettered, in such sort, that you will not onely bee able to defend your selfe from the Enemies, but also to chastise them, the meanes to effect the same, is for you to hold your selfe as you are, untill the succours aforesaid doe come; in the meane time, the more you are pressed upon, the more will be your reward and recompence, which his Majestie will conferre upon you, the which I will thrust on, as occasion shall offer it selfe, and bee alwayes vigilant in these things which shall concerne your Lordship as I haue beene. God preserue your Lordship according to my desire: From Mansilla the thirteenth of Ianuary, 1602.

To Don Iuan de Aguila, Master of the Campe, Generall of his Majesties Army in Ireland.

A Letter from the Duke of Lerma to Don Iuan de Aguila.

BY that which Zubiare and Pedro Lopez de Soto hath written, and by the comming of the Earle Odonnell, who is now in the Groyne, wee haue understood of the overthrow of the Earles, and from thence is gathered, that all the forces are now bent against you, and that your onely valour and wisdom hath beene able to resist them; and let the great estimation his Majestie holdeth of you, mitigate the care which this businesse may bring you; his Majestie hath commanded me speedily to prepare gallant succours, both by Land and Sea, which is done, and shall bee presently dispatched, and this ship is onely sent to advertise you thereof, to the end that you may with the more courage defend your selfe, and to bring a true report in what state you stand, which may more particularly appeare unto you by his Majesties Letter, which with this you shall receive, whereunto hee hath commanded me to add this, that hee hath in his favour made you one of his Councillors of his councill at warres, which I congratulate with you; assuring you on his part, that God willing hee will conferre greater favours upon you, wherefore proceed cheerefully, as both now and heretofore (in the course of your life) you have done, taking every occasion to strengthen your selfe in this siege, and to endamage the Enemy that hee may not hinder you, and to assure the Army, no man living hath received greater rewards from his Majestie then you shall; I take upon myselfe the care of it, and I pray you to write me such good newes as I desire, whereof I hope in God: In Mansilla the thirtieth of Ianuary, 1602.

El Duque de Lerma
Marques de Denia.

God is my witnesse, I neither eate nor sleepe with lesse care then any one of them that are with you, and I would willingly be in the perill of every one of you, and if the shedding of my blood might be advantageous, I would readily giue it for you all that haue such need: Doe your endeavours, for presently succours shall be sent unto you.

To Don Iuan de Aguila, Master of the Campe, Generall of the men of warre in Ireland.

A Letter from the King of Spaine to Don Iuan de Aguila.

EL REY.

DON Iuan de Aguila Master of the Campe, Generall of my Army in Ireland; by that which Pedro de Zubiare, and Pedro Lopez de Soto haue written unto me, I haue understood of the defeat of the Earles, Oneale and Odonnell, and likewise I now see that all your hopes remaines in your valour and wisdome; wherein I haue such confidence, that I hope in the midst of so many dangers and labours (wherewith you are inuironed) that you will preserue the Army, untill more succours of shipping, men, armes, and munitions be sent unto you, which are with al possible expedition in preparing, and shall bee speedily dispatched: You may make vse of them, and take reuenge of the Enemy, and untill they come, which shall be (as I haue said) with celerity, preserue your selfe : I doe not advise you of any particulars, because I assure myselfe of your judgement and experience, that knowes how to make your advantage of such occasions, as the Enemy shall giue for the benefit of the siege : And your selfe and the Army (which is with you) shall haue good testimony of my bounty, thankfulnessse, and honour I will doe unto you all : and so much doe you signifie unto the Army from me. The Duke of Lerma shall write more unto you from Mansilla, the one and thirtie of Ianuary, 1602

Yo El Rey.

To Don Iuan de Aguila, Master of the Campe, Generall of our Army in Ireland.

Don Pedro Franquesa.

Not long after most of the Spaniards were imbarqued in Kinsale, onely a few remayning which were to passe with Don Iohn; the day before his departure, the Lord Deputie shewed him the copie of the Letters, saying that they were sent unto him out of Vlster by a Priest, who was his spy about Tyrone, unto whom the Letters had beene caried; Don Iuan (taking this for good payment) thanked the Lord Deputie for his favourable care: All the while Don Iuan was at Corke, every day the President and hee had familiar discourse together, but for the most part their passages in speech was betweene jest and earnest, somewhat sharpe, and especially when they spake of religion, their Soveraignes, or the Nations : But it seemes that hee caried a good respect of the President, as by writing and presents sent, which shall in its due place appeare.

The fifteenth, the Lord Deputie and the President, having acquainted the rest of the Councell, with the effect of the Spanish Letters, (intercepted as afore-said) though not with the manner how they were gotten, they thought it meete to write unto the Lords of the Councell in England this ensuing Letter, wherby they might understand how things stood for the present, as also to provide for the future, since by the intercepted Letters it appeared, that the King of Spaine had set his heart upon the warre of Ireland.

A Letter from the Lord Deputie and Councell, to the Lords in England.

May it please your Lordships : The fourteenth of this Moneth we dispatched Sir Richard Morison with our Letters to your Lordships from this place, and the nine and twentieth we wrote againe by Captaine Butler, yet to this day the wind hath continued still so westerly, as since the departure of Sir Richard, no shipping is come to us, either out of England from your Lordships (as we desired) or from Waterford, Wexford, and those parts (as we directed) to carry away the Spanyards hence ; nor yet untill Sunday the seventh hereof, could those ships stirre, that lay ready* at Kinsale, to be sent to Baltimore, Castle-haven, and Beere-haven; but now they are gone, Wee hope that the Service to bee done by them, (which is the possessing of the Castles, and sending away of the Spaniards in them) will bee presently accomplished, although the winde hath served them so scantly, as we feare they will hardly recover all the places whereunto they are directed: There is onely one Scottish ship gone from Kinsale for Spaine, which carried one hundred and sixtie Spaniards, with part of the Artillerie, but there lies now readie at the Harbour for the first winde, so much shipping as will carrie away fifteene hundred more: so as there will bee yet remaining in Kinsale aboue one thousand more, which with the first shipping that comes from the other Ports, shall be imbarqued. Don Iuan stayes to goe last: It appeareth by some Letters intercepted, which wee send herewithall unto your Lordships, that the King of Spaine purposeth to send a larger supply hither with all expedition: Don Iuan assures us to doe the best hee can to stay them, and if he arriue first in Spaine, hee makes no doubt to dissuade their comming; but if they should come before his departure, hee promiseth to returne them according to his Covenant in the Contract, if they doe not come under the command of some other, that hath a Commission apart from his, from the King: The Irish haue of late received Letters from Odonnell, to encourage the Rebels to persevere in their rebellion, assuring them of present ayde from Spaine; in the meane time, the best of them all doe but temporize, being readie to assist them when they come, especially if they come in any strength, as it is to bee thought in all reason they will, having found their first errour: Her Majestie must therefore be pleased to bee at some charge to erect Fortifications at Beere-haven, Kinsale, and this place, the Commodities and weaknesse of these places being as well knowen to the Spaniards, as to vs, and further withall to erect Cittadels at Limerick, Corke, and Waterford, though it bee onely to assure the Townes from revolt. It appeareth by the King of Spaines Letter, and so by the Duke of Lermaes, that his heart is very much set vpon the enterprize of Ireland, and therefore it is not unlike but that he may send more supplies, after or before Don Iuans arrivall in Spaine, either vnder him, or some other Commaunder; which if he doe, it is also likely the same will bee sent shortly: For prevention thereof (if in your Lordships wisdom it shall be thought meet) we doe humbly beseech, that the foure thousand supplies heretofore desired, and by your Lordships intended, may be presently sent hither, whereof two thousand to bee erected in Companies, and their Captaines to bee named heere, and the other two thousand for the supplies of the Armie, which is exceeding weake; for our men die daily in greater numbers then they dyed in the Campe, the infection being greater, and by some thought, a kinde of plague, (for the people in the Townes dye in farre greater numbers then the Souldiers) though wee hope the contrarie: And we

doe further desire, that her Majestie will bee pleased to hasten her Fleet to the coast of Spaine, which comming timely, will in our opinions hinder any enterprise for Ireland; But lest that should faile, wee renew our former motion, that the Tremontania and the Moone may bee returned to serue upon the coast of Mounster, that the proportions of Munition and Victuals desired in our former Letters, may speedily bee dispatched hither, and that victualls without impediment may come for all places to releue vs: for already a very great dearth is begun, and a famine must ensue, the rates of all things being incredible, and the new Money much repyned at, which notwithstanding wee doe our uttermost endeavors to advance it. But in a matter of so great importance, we humbly desire your Lordships to giue vs leaue to deliver our opinions freely, having so assured ground for it, that if the King of Spaine continue his Warre in this Countrey, it will bee hard to preserue her Majesties Army and kingdome, without the altering of the currant money, so generall is the dislike thereof, and so insolently doe they begin already to refuse it; but if there come no other forraine aid, her Majesty (as we thinke) may securely continue it as it is: For all we that are of the Army, whom it most concerneth, (in regard we liue wholly upon our entertainment) will (God willing) endure it for the advancement of the service, though wee are sensible of our losse, by the excessiue enhansing of the prizes of all things that we are to liue upon, which cannot be holpen so long as this new Coyne continues currant. Of Tyrone, since his overthrow and departure, we hitherto have heard little, neither doe wee thinke hee will bee able to doe any great harme, without the ayde of new supplies from Spaine. And so wee humbly take leave, &c. From Corke. 15 February. 1601.

Among many Letters and papers which were found in the Castle of Dunboy (of the winning whereof you shall after heare ;) there was one written bearing date the fourth of February, 1602. Stilo novo, by Patrike Sinnet an Irish Priest, remayning in the Groyne with the Earle of Caracena to Dominick Collins a Iesuit, who was taken at Dunboy and executed, sundry other things he related of Odonnells landing in the Asturias, who with the Generall Pedro de Zubiare embarked at Castle-haven the            Ianuary, the next day after he came to the Groyne, where he was nobly received by the Earle of Caracena, who invited Odonnell to lodge in his house ; but hee being Sea sicke, in good manner refused his curtesie ; wherefore the Earle lodged him in a very faire house, not farre from his ; but when his sea-sickness was past, he lodged in the Earles house ; and upon the twenty-seventh of Ianuary, Odonnell departed from the Groyne, accompanied by the Earle and many Captaines, and Gentlemen of quality, who evermore gaue Odonnell the right hand, which within his government he would not haue done to the greatest Duke in Spaine ; and at his departure, hee presented Odonnell with one thousand duckets, and that night hee lay at Santa Lucia: the Earle of Caracena being returned, the next day hee went to Saint Iames of Compostella, where he was received with magnificence by the Prelates, Citizens, and religious persons, and his lodging was made ready for him at Saint Martins, but before hee saw it, hee visited the Archbishop, who instantly prayed him to lodge in his house; but Odonnell excused it: The nine and twentieth the Archbishop saying Masse with pontificall solemnity, did minister the Sacrament to Odonnell, which done hee feasted him at dinner in his house; and at his departure hee gaue him one thousand duckets: The King understanding of Odonnells arrivall, wrote unto the Earle of Caracena concerning the reception of him, and the affaires of Ireland, which was one of the most gracious Letters that ever King directed; for by it, it plainly appeared that hee would endanger his kingdome to succour the Catholikes of Ireland, to their content, and not faile therein; for the perfecting whereof, great preparations were in hand: Odonnell caried with him to the Court, Redmond Burke, Father Florence, Captaine Mastian, and nine Gentlemen more, where they were nobly received; although the knowledge of the reception of Odonnell in Spaine, was not well known by mee untill after the taking of Dunboy, yet I thought it requisite to insert it in its due place, according to the time of his being at the Groyne: But now let us return to the affaires of Mounster.

Captaine Roger Harvie (according to his directions) being come to Castlehaven, Pedro Lopez de Soto the Veador, who had the chiefe command thereof, after the receipt of Don Iuan de Aguila his Letters and messages, entertayned him with great humanity, and upon the twelfth of February rendered the Castle unto him, receiving an acknowledgement under his, and his brothers Captaine Gawen Harvies hands in writing for the receipt thereof, which done they embarked their victuals, baggage, and Ordnance ; lastly their men to the number of one hundred and fourtie by pole, and foure Spanish Captaines ; Captaine Roger Harvie delivered the charge of the Castle unto his brother Captaine Gawen Harvie, there to remaine in garrison with his Company of one hundred foote : The same day that Captaine Harvie came to Castle-haven, the Odrischals (who had the inheritance of the same) by a slight got into the Castle, and had made themselves masters of it ; the Spaniards to recover it againe assaulted it, and were undermining the same when Captaine Harvie was entering into the Haven ; but upon the sight of his ships the Irish by composition (to depart in safetie) rendered it to the Spaniards, who had lost two of their Souldiers in the attempt. The one and twentieth, Captaine Harvie having in his Company the Veador, and some other Spaniards, set saile for Baltimore, whereupon the three and twentieth they went on land, and were feasted in the Castle of Done-long by the Governour thereof, called Andreas de Aervy, and the next day (by the direction of the Veador) their Ordnance (being seven in number in the Castle) were shipped: And the sixe and twentieth the said Castle, and the Castle of Donneshed, were with Spanish gravitie rendered to her Majesties use. The second of March following they were all imbarqued and set saile for Spaine: while these things were in doing, Captaine Roger Harvie sent a partie of men to Cape-Cleere, the Castle whereof was guarded by Captaine Terrils men, which they could not gaine, but they pillaged the Island, and brought from thence three Boats; and the second day following, the Rebels not liking the neighbourhood of the English quitted the Castle, wherein Captaine Harvie placed a Guard: at this time Sir Finnin Odrischall came to Captaine Harvie and submitted himselfe: The tenth of the same Moneth, the Lord Barry, Captaine Taffe, and Captaine Iohn Barry, chanced to light upon Donoghe Moyle Mac Carties men, and slew eighteene of the best of them.

From Baltimore Captaine George Flower was shipped in a Hoy of one hundred and twentie Tuns, with two Companies of two hundred in list, (but weake by pole) to receiue from the Spaniards the Castle of Dunboy, but doe all hee could, by reason of fowle weather and contrary winds, hee could never (although hee was at the mouth of the Haven of Beere) recover the Land, and so enforced to returne, effecting nothing, in this short Navigation fiftie of his best Souldiers by infection dyed, and but seven of the Saylers living.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The Spanyards imbarqued at Kinsale. The Spanyards dispossessed of Dunboy by Osulevan Beare. A Letter from Osulevan Beare to the King of Spaine. A Letter from Osulevan Beare to the Earle of Carazena. A Letter from Osulevan Beare to Don Pedro de Zubeaur.

THE twentieth of Februarie, twentie Spanish Captaines with one thousand three hundred seventie foure Souldiers, set sayle from Kinsale for Spaine.

The Composition which Don Iuan did make when he surrendred Kinsale, did infinitely grieue and offend the Irish, and especially those who had voluntarily delivered into his hands their Castles, but especially Donnell Osulevan, who considering that if his Castle of Dunboy should bee in the possession of the English, hee was like to be banished his Countrey, not haying any hope of favour from her Majestie, unto whose Crowne and Dignitie hee had manifested himselfe to bee a malicious Traytor, resolved to set up his rest in regaining of it out of the Spanyards hands, and afterwards to defend it against her Majesties Forces as well as hee might: For accomplishing whereof, they watched a fit opportunitie, and surprized it in this sort: Although the Spaniards were the Masters of the Castle, yet evermore he had recourse into it, & lodged therein with such of his men as hee thought good: In the dead time of the night, when the Spanyards were soundly sleeping, and the key of the Castle in the Captaines custody, Osulevan caused his men, (amongst the which there were some Masons) to breake a hole in the wall, wherein fourescore of his men entered, for by appoyntment he had drawne that night close unto the Castle, Archer the Iesuite with another Priest, Thomas fits Maurice the Lord of Lixnaw, Donnell Mac Cartie, Captaine Richard Tirrell, and Captaine William Burke, with a thousand men: When day appeared, Archer prayed Francesco de Saavedra the Spanish Captaine to goe with him to Osulevans chamber, unto whom hee made relation, that his men were entred the Castle, that he meant no personall hurt, either unto him, or to any of his, and that he would keepe the same for the King of Spaines use, and also told him, that hee had one thousand Foot within Harquebusse shott of the Castle. The Captaine seeing himselfe surprized, made no resistance, and willed his men to doe the like: But the Spanyards in furie discharged a few Musket shott amongst the Irish, and slew three of them, and hurt one: but by the mediation of Osulevan, and Francesco de Saavedra, the Captaine, all was pacified, Osulevan being very carefull that no hurt might bee done to the Spanyards: Afterward Osulevan disarmed them all, kept the Captaine, and a few of the better sort, with three or foure Gunners, in the nature of Prisoners, and the rest hee sent to Baltimore, to be imbarqued into Spaine: He also seized upon all the Spanish Ordnance, Munitions, and in Victualls, which was there store. The Captaine not long after was set at libertie, and returned with the Veador from Baltimore into Spaine, and with him the other souldiers which were detained, but the Cannoniers Osulevan reserved.

When report was brought to Don Iohn de Aguila (then in Corke) of the surprize of Dunboy, he tooke it for a great affront, and would presently haue drawn from Kinsale (the Spanish Companies there yet remaying) and march to Dunboy to regaine it by force, and to deliver it according to the Composition into her Majesties hands: But the Lord Deputie and the President, (who were desirous to see his heeles towards Ireland) wished him not to trouble himselfe with that businesse; and when hee was gone, the President should take order for the reducing of it into his hands: the Castle of Dunboy was surprized (as beforesayd) in this moneth of February, 1601, and held by Osulevan to the use of the King of Spaine: but yet to excuse himselfe unto the King, and to make it appeare unto him how much hee was his servant, hee wrote unto him, to the Earle of Carazena, and to Pedro de Zubiare, there being at that present in Beerehaven, the Spanish Pinnace, which brought the Pacquet from Spaine (intercepted betweene Kinsale and Corke) as aforesaid.

A Letter from Osulevan Beare to the King of Spaine.

My Lord and my King.

OV* of his loue to your kingly greatnesse, your humble stedfast servant Donnell Osulevan Beare, enforced through perill and constraint, doth make bold to enforme unto your greatnesse, that upon the landing in Castle-haven, in the West of Ireland, your Generall Pedro de Zubiar, and Pedro Lopez de Soto, with a fleet and men from your Greatnesse, according to the inward conceit of mind I alwayes held, which I manifested in my young yeares, and would haue still followed, unlesse disability had constrayned mee to the contrary; finding a happy and good opportunity (as I imagined) I came to their presence, tendering my obeysance unto them in the name of your Highnesse, and being with foure hundred men at my owne cost, towards your service, I yeelded out of my meere loue and goodwill, without compulsion or composition, into their hands in the name of your Majestie; not onely my Castle, and Haven called Beerehaven, but also my Wife, my Children, my Countrey, Lordships, and all my possessions for ever to be disposed of at your pleasure. They received mee in that manner, and promised (as from your Highnesse) to keepe, and saue the said Castle, and Haven during the service of your grace: Notwithstanding my gracious Lord, conclusions of peace were assuredly agreed upon, betwixt

Don Iuan de Aguila and the English, a fact pittifull, and (according to my judgement) against all right and humane conscience. Among other places whereof your greatnesse was dispossessed in that manner, which were neither yeelded nor taken to the end they should bee delivered to the English; Don Iuan tyed himselfe to detiver my Castle and Haven, the onely key of mine inheritance, whereupon the living of many thousand persons doth rest, that liue some twentie leagues upon the Sea Coast, into the hands of my cruell, cursed, misbeleaving Enemies, a thing I feare in respect of the execrablenesse, inhumanity, and ingratefulnesse of the fact if it take effect, as it was plotted, that will giue cause to other men not to trust any Spaniard hereafter, with their bodies or goods upon these causes. My Lord in that I judge this dishonourable act to be against your honour and pleasure, (as I understand by your last Letters that came into Ireland) considering the harme that might ensue to the service of your Majestie, and the everlasting overthrow that might happen to mee, and my poore people, such as might escape the sword of our Enemy (if any should) I haue taken upon mee (with the helpe of God) to offer to keepe my Castle and Haven from the hands of mine Enemies, untill further newes, and order come from your Highnesse: I haue sent my Sonne and Heire (being of the age of fve yeares) as a Pledge for accomplishing your will in this behalfe, and for the performing of my promise past unto your Greatnesse: I would not omit my selfe in person to come and visit your Highnesse, but that I feare our warres here would grow weake in respect of my absence, for which cause my selfe, and the rest of our men of worth haue sent in haste with Intelligence vnto your Greatnesse, our loving Friend Dermond Odrischall, in respect of our confidence in him, our knowledge of him, and the continuall endeavors wee see in him towards this Catholique Warre, as from vs all: And for as much as wee could not conveniently write all that wee wish vnto you, wee humbly beseech, that hee may bee heard as from vs all, as if our selues were present, and to hasten helping Newes, that shall rejoyce vs and our people, and afterwards to speed your gracious helpe vnto vs, for the sooner the better, whilst our enemies are not in readinesse; and untill the comming of newes from your grace vnto vs, I will haue in a readinesse where the service shall require, the number of one thousand men; and I will upon my knees pray the mercifull God, to giue vnto your Grace long life, with health of body and soule, and all happinesse, and so doe commit you to the safeguard of the Omnipotent. Donboy, viz. Beere-haven, the twentieth day of February, 1602.

Donnell Osulevan Beare.

A Letter from Osulevan Beare to the Earle of Caracena.

MY dutie remembred: It may please your Lordship to understand, that according to my former Letters, it hath manifestly appeared, heere the resolution of Don Juan de Aguila to haue been (by his composition with the English) to yeeld unto the Enemies hands, all the Forts, and Havens voluntarily delivered by the Lords and Gentlemen of this Land for his Majesties service, which will bee to the dishonour of the King, the prevention of his most godly attempt, and the utter ruine and destruction of thousands of this Countrey Gentlemen and Catholiques, who without compulsion entred into this Action : All which having considered, I haue of meere affection to my Religion, his Highnesse service, and loue to my people and Countrey, so endeavored the recovery of my Castle, as I did draw into the same some hundred of my followers, whom although the Spanyards haue attempted to resist, and killed three of my best Gentlemen, yet durst none of my people kill any of them, but without harme forced them out of my said Castle, saving their Captaine, with five or sixe unto whom I haue allowed certaine roomes in my House, to looke to the Kings Munition and Artillerie : which Castle and Haven I doe detaine, and will evermore, for his Majesties Service, to defend, untill his Highnesse pleasure, and your Lordships resolution unto mee shall bee further knowen : And for manifestation of my loyaltie, and faithfulnessse to his Majestie, I haue sent my Sonne and Heyre thither, whom I hope ere this time is present before your Lordship, and haue cessed all the Captaines Company upon my owne people and charges, humbly beseeching it may please your Honour, to bee a meane unto his most Catholique Majestie, that hee may vouchsafe speedily to releue this place, where many of his Royall Shipps in time of service may bee kept in safetie ; Or otherwayes to send some small Ship towards this coast, for to receiue mee and the rest of my Family, and Children, for to bee carryed into Spaine, for the saving of our liues out of the hands of these mercillesse, Hereticall Enemies, making choyce rather to forsake my ancient Inheritance, Friends, Followers, and Goods, then any way to trust to their most gracelesse Pardon or Promise, Thus much I hope your godly charitable Nature will draw you to doe for such a one as I am, who hazarded Life, Lands, Goods, and Followers for the Catholique Faith, and the Kings Majesties Service : All which, leaving to your Honourable Discretion, through whose vertuous meanes I chiefly hope to receiue comfort, I humbly take leaue. From Beare-haven Castle the last of February, 1602.

Your most Faithfull and bounden,

Donnell Osulevan Beare.

To the Earle of Caracena, Governor and Captaine Generall for his Ma-jestie in the kingdome of Galitia.

A Letter from Osulevan Beare to Don Pedro Zubiaur.

MY honorable good friend, your kind letters I haue of late received, & for your carefull furtherance, I cannot but rest beholden and thankfull as before: Our state sithence your departing, notwithstanding many crosses was reasonable well; partly because of the weaknesse of the English forces, untill a brute came unto us credibly, that Don Iuan de Aguila did not onely agree and compound to yeeld the Towne of Kinsale, but also the other Castles and Havens, delivered voluntarily by the owners unto you, and the Veador to the King his use, during the occasion of service: which notwithstanding (being delivered to the Enemies hands) would mightily discourage and weaken all the Kings friends in Ireland; namely my selfe, who by keeping my possessions belonging to my Castle, and Haven of Beerehaven, and able (God bee thanked) and ready at all times to find out for his Majesties service, upon warning and necessitie one thousand men, besides the ward of my owne Castle, where loosing the same so unexpected, and surrendered to the hands of most hereticall enemies, I am not onely disappoynted of all power, but also driven to run to the Mountaines, there to liue like Woolfes, for the safetie of my life, and to leaue to their mercillesse discretion all the poore men, women, and children within the length of twenty Leagues contayning of my ancient inheritance under my jurisdiction : I pray you as you haue begun, and in his Majesties name, past your promise unto me, to be a meane unto his Majestie, that such shamefull composition void of lawfull ground, may not bee an overthrow and disgrace to the Kings service, and a perpetuall destruction to my posterity for ever, whose Ancestors maintayned the credit and calling of great Gentlemen these two thousand and sixe hundred yeares, sithence their first comming out of Spaine : I haue made offer to the Veador to mainetaine all the Spaniards that were at Castlehaven, Baltimore, and here, with Beefe, Fish, Corne and Salt, till his Majesties pleasure were knowen, and to find upon my owne charges one thousand men to defend them : I would personally haue repaired thither, to make relation hereof to the King, his Majestie, but that I doe feare the warres might haue the worse expedition here by my absence ; although you might thinke, I would for a while use some resistance against the Englishmen, with my people and the Fastnesse of my Countrey, yet I know you will pittie old Sir Finnin, forced by this composition to yeeld his body to the mercillesse butchery of our Hereticall enemies, which leaving partly to bee prevented by your good meanes to the King his most Catholike Majestie : I take leaue, committing you to God : Beare-haven the twentieth of February, 1602.

Donnell Osulevan Beare.

It was first much doubted and feared, that the Castle of Dunboy had beene voluntarily, not without the privitie and consent of the chiefe Commanders amongst the Spaniards, delivered unto Donnell Osulevan, there being such an excellent Haven for the Kings ships, if hee should send forces to repaire the ruines of his honour, so much shaken by the former proceedings; but afterward understanding that the Castle was not surprised without some blood, and also intercepting those Letters which verified the contrary, it cleered the Spaniards of that suspition; but howsoever, the holding of this Castle gaue occasion to the countrey more obstinately to stand out in the action, because Osulevan Beare (for defence hereof) against the English, had according to the contents of these Letters, entertayned Tirrell, William Burke, and others with one thousand Bonnoghs, which were by course employed about the fortifying of this Castle. Neere unto the mouth of the Haven of Beare, there is a small Iland called the Durses, which is very strongly seated by nature, by reason of the difficulty of landing (which is conveniently) but in one narrow entrance, which may bee defended with a few hands, and besides it is impossible for any Boat to arriue at this enterance, except it bee in a dead calme, the least gale of wind, raising such billowes, as doe endanger any Boat as shall come neere the shore: this impregnable place, was elected for their extreame refuge, if Dunboy should bee wonne by the English; and therefore the custody thereof was committed to

Conner Odrischall, Sonne and Heire to Sir Finnin before mentioned, who procuring three Peeces of Spanish Ordnance to be convayed into the Iland, with certaine quantity of powder and shot, and having sixtie choise men, fortified the same (as they thought) against the most potent Enemy; but wee leaue these Rebels busying their braines, and wearying their bodies about these fortifications, and returne to Capitaine Harvie, who while the Veador Pedro Lopez de Soto, remayned at Baltimore, many curtesies and familiar conferences passed betweene them, wherein hee shewed himselfe to bee a man of great humanity, and a good statesman, able to relate many things, both concerning the State of England, and particularly of the Nobility in the same, as well as some that had spent their whole liues in that Realme; but the end of all his conference, still tended towards a peace between our Soveraigne and his Master, whereby it may bee gathered, that the King of Spaine was wearey of the warre, which himselfe had injuriously begun: The substance of their discourse Captain Harvie related to the President, and also shewed him a Pasport of the Veadors, and a Letter which hee sent unto him after his arrivall in Spaine, all which are thus Englished.

CHAP. XXIX.

An Interloquutory discourse betweene Captaine Roger Harvie, and Pedro Lopez de Soto. Pedro Lopez de Soto his Pasport. Pedro Lopez de Soto his Letter to Captaine Roger Harvie.

A Discourse that passed betwixt Captain Roger Harvy, and Pedro Lopez de Soto the Spanish Veador, the six and twentieth of February, 1601, in the Iland of Innysarkin, whilst the Spaniards were imbarquing their Munitions and Artillery, from thence the effect as followeth.

Soto. SIR (saith hee) is it not a miserable and lamentable thing (in any honest mans conscience) to see the daily effusion of blood and infinite expence of treasure, that this warre betwixt Spaine and England doth daily bring forth and consume?

Harvie. I told him it was too high a mysterie for mee to censure, but I thought it to bee the judgment of God, for we must understand that Princes are Gods Ministers, and Agents upon earth, and what they doe is beyond our lymits to looke into: Notwithstanding I thought the pride of his Masters gold, so puffed him up, as either hee must haue all the world, or nothing can content him, or else his King would never haue sought out such a place as Ireland is, to haue buried so many Crownes in, besides the losse of no small number of his Subjects, but it may be hereafter he will know us better, and perchance thinke our nation fitter to conquer, then to loose what we haue.

Soto. But doe you thinke that Gold is so abundant with us?

Har. The Indian world which you possesse, makes us beleeeue so.

Soto. Well, be not deceived, for my selfe haue been a dealer these many yeares in great Affaires for the King, and by that I doe somewhat understand his Hazienda, which I must confesse to bee very great, and yet not so exceeding as the world thinkes: But if it were farre greater then it is, I assure you, the infinite number of Garrisons which he is daily forced to maintaine, would devour another such Indies, if hee had them: for doe but looke into how many severall Branches his Treasure is divided into, and then you will beleeeue mee; but yet of all the rest, his expences in the warres of the Low-Countreyes is most chargeable, and of greatest import unto him, and for the which hee may thanke your Queene of England, for had not shee assisted those Traitors, they long since had borne the yoke of their deserts, and neither Ireland nor England had ever been looked into, or offended by us.

Har. Why then I perceiue it is not Religion, or Conscience that hath brought you hither to releeeue the Irish, but onely Revenge, for ayding of the States of the Low-Countreyes against the Cardinall.

Soto. But did you ever thinke otherwise? I know you did not; and if you say so, I know you dissemble with me: for the place where you haue been brought up in, hath better discipline.

Har. Why, where haue I been brought up?

Soto. I heare that you are neere in blood unto the President, and that from a child you haue followed him; and I know that you are better instructed then you make shew of.

Har. I must thanke you for your good opinion of mee, but haue you ever seene the face of the President?

Soto. I assure you no, and which I am very sorry for: for I heare that he is a worthy Gentleman, and one of the wisest men in Ireland, and if I would take the Irish opinions for my beleefe of him, (they confidently beleeeue that hee hath a familiar) for they say he knows all things, and that nothing can be hidden from him, besides he is so inward with the Secretary of England, as his power thereby is the greater, (which strengthneth much my beleefe of his worth;) but I pray you Sir, is it so?

Har. Truely I must confesse, that I am neerely allyed unto him, and that I am wholly his Creature from my Childhood: but for your better satisfaction of what you haue heard of him; unlesse in modestie I should wrong him, I cannot doe lesse then maintaine the same opinion, which the world holds of his worth and sufficiencie: but for any familiar that he hath, inore then a noble Spirit and Iudgement, and as the long experience of this Nation may sufficiently giue him understanding (I assure you hee hath not any) and therefore the Irish in that doe wrong him: And as for the greatnesse with the Secretary of England, I know in his Affections he hath been very neere him these many yeares, and to his uttermost hath wholly devoted himselfe unto him; and in any reasonable matter I thinke Master Secretary will assone hearken unto his counsell, (as unto any) if hee were in England.

Soto. But why would not the Secretary keepe him still with him, but suffer him to spend his time among this barbarous Nation, for which (I thinke) Christ never dyed?

Harvie. I cannot say but you object well; but I assure you the necessitie of his coming hither was such, as for the publike good hee was enforced unto it, besides her Majesties opinion of his experience is such, as shee knew he was able to end all the warres in these parts, with expedition, which in fower Moneths my selfe can testifie hee had finished, and had not your Armies comming hither caused a new rupture, hee had good hopes to haue beene called (long since) home againe, which I know nothing under heaven hee desireth more.

Soto. That makes mee thinke that hee is weary of the warres, and would be contented now to liue in peace.

Harvie. I thinke not so, unlesse it were a very happy peace, otherwise warres is farre more welcome unto him (although I thought not the Irish warres) but I thought a Spanish Iourney royally undertaken, would please him so much almost as to bee seven yeares younger.

Soto. Since your President loues a hot Clymate so well, I would to God hee would bee a meanes to make a peace betwixt the two kingdomes, and then hee might take his choice in whether of them hee would liue, and bee a welcome man unto both, but was not hee in France with Master Secretary when that businesse was a treating?

Harvie. Yes.

Soto. And were you there likewise?

Harvie. No.

Soto. I assure you there was excellent jugling of your side, and will be still where great personages are the Actors, otherwise I imagine there had fallen out better successe; but wee haue some spirits in Spaine, as that of Essexes was in England, and will never rest, untill they haue either ruined the kingdome or themselues; but dare you Sir impart this conference unto the President?

Harrie. I promise you if I liue I will.

Soto. It may bee out of this, may proceed some good effect, for of lesse beginnings then this haue greater matters risen.

Harvie. I beleeeue you, although I haue small hopes of this.

Soto. And why? Cannot England stand without the Low Countries?

Harvie. Yes against all the earth, but not so quiet if that were yours.

Soto. Why? wee will not aske any assistance from the Queene, but onely haue her stand a Neuter, and for her safetie and the kingdomes, wee will put in pledge twentie of the best houses in Spaine; such as your State will choose; and if the State of England will but looke judicially into it, they shall find the offer honest, and fit to bee accepted: Considering that the Queene of England is by nature as mortall as others of lesse quality: and if shee were dead I know the next that shall succeed will afford it, and bee glad of it upon lesse conditions, or else I am deceived.

Harvie. But God bee thanked wee haue no cause in England to dreame of succession, but hope she shall be eternall unto us.

Soto. That were ill news unto him, who lookes to succeed.

Harvie. But Sir to the matter, 'because I haue promised you to impart this conference unto the President, let mee intreat you to haue somewhat under your hand to justifie it.

Soto. You shall haue a Passe (either for your selfe or any other) from me to come into Spaine, touching this business: The effect whereof I most humbly referre unto God, and so bid you farewell.

Pedro Lopez de Soto, Overseer generall of the Army of my Soveraigne the Catholike King, &c. For certain due respects behooful for his Majesties service, this free Pasport (in his royall name) is assured for any English Ship, which shall bring any dispatch from Roger Harvie Governour of the Garisons at Castlehaven and Baltimore, directed and superscribed to mee, which shall happen to arriue in any Port in Spaine, from the date hereof unto the end of Iuly next : By vertue whereof, his Majesties chiefe Officer that shall governe the Province, or port where the said Ships shall arriue, shall giue commandement for the service of his Majestie, that both it, the Seafaring men, and all other persons with their goods, shall be freely received and entertayned, and accommodated to their liking and content, untill the dispatch in the said ship, directed unto me, bee sent unto Don Pedro Franquesa, the said ship with her men and goods, may not only, freely returne to these Northren parts, without any impediment, but rather to bee intreated with all possible curtesies: And if any of his Majesties ships of warre, or any of his Subjects ships, shall meet with this English ship, either outward or homeward bound, they shall permit her to passe without any detention, it being convenient for his Majesties service so to doe : Written at Baltimore the nineth of March, 1602.

Pedro Lopez de Soto.

Pedro Lopez de Soto his Letter to Captaine
Roger Harvie.

ALTHOUGH you be an Englishman, and my selfe a Spaniard, neverthesse (finding you to bee (as it appeares unto mee) a man of honour in all your actions) I cannot but assure you that I am extreamely affectioned unto you, and the cause that moues me to desire your friendship and correspondence, is the just respect I have to the good proceedings of the Lord Deputie, and the Lord President, and their Ministers towards the King my Master, as also of you, and the rest (in the service of your Prince) which hath obliged us to a good correspondence: The Passport which I left with with you, shall bee alwayes faithfully accomplished when occasion shall serue, and of the same you may be confident, for wee will fully obserue it: And so God keepe you: From the Groyne the nineth of April, 1602.

Pedro Lopez de Soto.

To Captain Roger Harvie, Governour of Castle-haven and Baltimore.

---

---

CHAPTER XXX.

Don Iuan imbarqued at Kinsale. The Lord Deputie departed from Corke towards Dublin. A Letter from the Lord Deputie and Councill to the Lords in England. The Lord Deputie sickened in his Iournie to Dublin. The Lord President surprised with a Feaver in his returne to Mounster.

THE eighth of March Don Iuan being at Kinsale, houely expecting a wind to bee gone, and finding a flattering gale went aboard: The Lord Deputie on the other side, as desirous to bee at his worke in Vlster (for the prosecution of Tyrone;) the day following hee began his Iourney towards Dublin, on whom the Lord President attended, untill hee had brought him out of the Province: But Don Iohn for want of a faire wind, departed not from Kinsale untill the sixteenth of the same Moneth: The day before the Lord Deputies departure, or the same day (I know not whether) his Lordship being mindfull of the sufficiencie, blood, and valour of Sir Richard Percy, caused him to bee sworne a Councillor of the Province of Mounster, and the night that he left Corke hee lodged at Clone, a Towne and Mannor house sometimes belonging to the Bishop of that Sea, but now passed in Fee farme to Master Iohn Fits Edmonds, who gaue cheereful and plentifull entertaynment to his Lordship, and all such of the Nobilitie, Captaines, Gentlemen, and others as attended upon him. The Deputie as well to requite his perpetuall loyaltie to the Crowne of England, as also to encourage others in the like, at his departure, did honour him with the Order of Knighthood, and then continued his iourney towards Waterford, where he bestowed the like honour vpon Edward Gough, and Richard Aylward, two ancient and well deseruing Citizens.

The President having attended the Lord Deputie to Kilkenny, where they lodged in the Earle of Ormonds house, and all things considered of, which concerned the State of the Kingdome, upon the four and twentieth of March, the last day of the yeare, 1601, the Lord Deputie and Councell made a Dispatch into ENGLAND, which heere ensues.

A Letter from the Lord Deputie and Councell to the Lords in England.

IT may please your Lordships, having certaine intelligence since our comming to this place, that Don Juan and all the rest of the Spaniards departed from Kinsale on Tuesday the sixteenth hereof, and that the wind since that time hath served them so well, as wee assure our selues by this, they are neere the Coast of Spaine; wee thought fit hereby to giue your Lordships notice thereof, that you may know that wee are free now of them all. Since our being here, there hath beene brought in a notorious Rebelle, one William Mac Hubbard, lately taken in Vpperossery, who of late hath done great spoyles and murders in these parts, more then any other, so as wee haue caused him to bee executed in this Towne to the great terror of many: About the same time that hee was executed, a Sonne of Garret Mac Mortaghes, named Morris Mac Garret, dyed of a hurt lately given him in fight, who was a most dangerous young man, like to trouble all the Countrey: The death of these two Rebels, as also of a notorious Rebelle by birth, of Mounster lately slaine (called Dermot Mac Awley, who was an inward man, and a great practising instrument with Tyrone) will greatly quiet these parts, and your Lordships can hardly thinke, what a great change wee find already by their so happy and timely cutting off. As for Sir Finnin O drischall, O Donnevan, and the two Sonnes of Sir Owen Mac Cartie, they and their Followers since their comming in, are growne very odious to the Rebels of those parts, and are so well divided in factions amongst themselves, as they are fallen to preying and killing one an other, which we conceiue will much availe, to the quieting of these parts. I the Deputie am this day going towards Dublin, from whence your Lordships shall heare from mee, according to the directions given mee by your Lordships: And I the President am returning into Mounster, to attend my charge there. Wee haue beene much importuned by the Army in generall, touching an abatement of halfe a pound of Beefe upon every flesh day, from every particular Souldier, and of two Herrings every fish day, and the Horse troopes likewise find themselves agrieved, that the Victuallers chargeth them with two shillings sixe pence increase in the issuing of every Barrell of Oates, without any other Warrant then a private Letter from Master Wade, Clerke of the Councell; which although we conceiue Master Wade hath signified over upon such purpose of your Lordships, or other good ground, yet in regard of importunities of the Captaines, and to prevent a generall mutiny of the Army, in regard the Souldiers are weake, and much infeeble, by the last siege of Kin-sale, and that the prices of all things are increased aboue all measure, by reason of the new standard Coyne, and that the Countrey is generally much harried and wasted, and thereby great scarcitie and wants grow here; wee hold it meet, and accordingly gaue direction to the Commissary of the victuals, to issue Oats (as formerly) at six shillings the barrel, and allow the Souldier two pound of Beefe, and eight Herrings a day, according as it was formerly accustomed, till your Lordships resolution were returned in that behalfe, which wee humbly pray and expect. And so having no other matter at this time worthy the presenting to your Lordships, wee most humbly take leaue.

The same day after this Letter was signed, the Lord Deputie tooke his Iourney towards Dublin, but being surprised with an ill disposition of health, which so increased upon him, as that the next day he was enforced to bee caried in his Horse-litter, and so continued untill he arrived there. And the President the aforesaid day returned towards Corke, surprised with the like accident, in so much as hee was not able that night to journey any farther then unto Master Geralt Comerfords house, not distant from Kilkenny aboue three miles, and there it appeared that hee was in a burning feaver: Neverthelesse being transported with a desire to bee in his Province, the next day hee remooued, and so by easie journeyes, resting some dayes upon the way, at last upon the third of Aprill hee came to Corke, but exceeding weake, and in many mens opinion in danger of death.

The Actions, Accidents, and Services of marke related in this second Booke, for the Readers better memory, I will briefly recount, which were as followeth : viz. The sending of Forces out of Mounster into Connaght, to withstand the entrance of Connaght and Vlster men into Mounster : The taking of James fits Thomas, the reputed Earle of Desmond : The apprehension of Florence Mac Cartie : The sending of a Regiment into Connaght for the service of that Province : The sending of James fits Thomas and Florence prisoners into England : The restraint of certaine principall Gentlemen of Mounster that were apt to rebell : The arrivall of the Spaniards at Kinsale : The Lord Deputies comming into Mounster : The siege of Kinsale : The landing of seconds from Spaine at Castlehaven : The remarkeable Sea-fight in that harbour : The revolt of divers of the Provincials : The comming of Tyrone and Odonnell to raise the siege at Kinsale : The famous victory obtayned against them, and the Spaniards : The flight of Odonnell, Redmond Burke, &c. into Spaine : The honourable and advantagious Composition : The rendering of Castle-haven, and the Castles at Baltimore unto her Majestie : The surprising of the Castle of

Donboy by Osulevan Beare: The transporting of the Spaniards into Spaine: And the departure of the Lord Deputie out of Mounster.

The end of the second Booke.

PACATA HIBERNIA.

THE

THIRD BOOKE

OF THE

WARRES IN IRELAND,

Whereby that Countrey was reduced to

Subjection and Obedience.

---

CHAP. I.

The estate of the Province of Mounster after the siege of Kinsale. The Warre of Ireland censured to bee lawfully maintained by the Rebels, in the opinion of the learned men of Spaine. The Names of the Doctors of Salamánca, who censured the lawfulnesss of the Rebellion in Ireland.

ALthough the Spanyards, as is related were sent away out of Ireland, and the Province of Mounster cleared of strangers, yet to regulate and draw into order the Provincials, which were revolted, was a taske (of no small labour) for the President to undergoe, being not unlike unto the state of mens bodies, wherein Relapses are farre more dangerous then the first sicknesse. Before the comming of these Cal-stillians, the Province (as you haue heard) was in so good conformity, as the civill Iustice (without all contradiction) had as currant passage as in any of the former yeares of Peace, and every mans cattell (without losse or danger) lay day and night in the fields: But now the Rebels, and their hyred Bownoghs swarmed every where, and especially in Carbery, Beare, Desmond, and Kerry, in so much as there was no place in them, or adjoyning unto them, free from these Catterpillers, who beholding the grievousnesse of their offences, grewe to bee desperate, concluding themselves to bee the children of perdition, and not capable of her Majesties gracious mercie, whereby their obstinacie was increased. In the tract of Land aforementioned, there was no Castles which was held for the Queene, but those which the Spanyards rendered, and guarded by the two Captaine Harvies, and Castle Mange in Kerry, (wherein a Guard of Sir Charles Wilmotts had continued all the time of the siege at Kinsale) all the rest were in the possession of the Rebels: In this distemper the Province remayned, when the Lord Deputie left the same.

But before I enter further into the progression of the affaires of Mounster, I beseech the Reader to pardon me for this ensuing digression, in the which hee may perceiue how the learned men of Spaine at Salamanca, did maintaine and approoue the Rebellion in Ireland, which was handled upon the seventh day of March, 1602. Stilo novo.

IN the Name of God Amen: The most renowned Prince Hugh Oneale doth make warre for the Defence of the Catholique faith with the Queene of England, and the English people; that is to say, that it may be lawfull for him, and the Irish freely to professe the Catholique Religion, which libertie the Queene of England doth endeavour to take from them by force and Armes. There are two matters now in question about this warre. The one is, whether it bee lawfull for the Irish Catholiques to favour the foresaid Prince Hugh with Armes, and all other meanes in this warre: The other is, whether it bee lawfull for the same Catholiques, to fight against the foresaid Prince, without deadly sin, and to favour the English in this warre, either with Armes, or by any other meanes, especially when as if they deny this kinde of helpe unto the English, they expose themselves to a manifest danger of their life, or of loosing all their temporall goods: And furthermore, since it is permitted by the Pope, that the Irish Catholiques may obey the aforesayd Queene of England, and acknowledge her as their lawfull Queene, by paying tribute unto her; for it seemeth that what belongeth unto Subjects to doe, may be performed, that is to say, to fight against the Queenes Rebels, which deny their due obedience to her, and seeme to usurpe the Land which is subject to her Dominion.

That both these questions may be decided, wee must hold it as for certaine, that the Romish Bishop hath power to bridle and suppress, such as forsake the faith, and those which oppose themselves with Armes against the Catholike faith, when other meanes is not ministred to overthrow so great an evill: And further it must bee concluded for infallible, that the Queene of England doth oppugne the Catholike Religion, neither doth permit the Irish publikely to embrace the Catholike faith, and that for the same cause, the foresaid Prince and others before him, of whom the Letters Apostolicall of Clement the eighth make mention, did make warre against her. These being thus set downe, the first question is easily resolved, for it is questionlesse, that any Catholikes whatsoever, may favour the said Prince, Huge Oneale, in the foresaid warre, and the same with great merit, and hope of most great and eternall reward; for seeing that the foresaid Prince doth make warre by the authority of the high Bishop, for the defence of Catholicke religion, and that the Pope doth exhort all the faithfull by his Letters thereto (as by his Letters is manifest) and that hee will extend his graces upon the Favourers of the Prince in that warre, in as ample a manner, as if they did make warre against the Turkes, no man will in equity doubt, but that both the present warre is just, and that to fight for defence of the Catholike religion, (which is the greatest thing of all) is a matter of great merit: And concerning the second question, it is most certain, that all those Catholikes doe sinne mortally, which doe follow the English Standard against the foresaid Prince, neither can they obtain eternall salvation, nor bee absolved of their sinnes by any Priest, except they first repent and forsake the English Army, and the same is to be censured, of those which in this warre favour the English, either with Armes or Victuals, or giue them any thing of like condition, besides those accustomed tributes which it is lawfull for them by vertue of the Popes indulgence and permission, to pay unto the Kings of England, or their officers, (so long as Catholike religion shall flourish in the same.) This assertion is confirmed by this most manifest reason, because it is sufficiently proved by the Letters of the high Bishop, that the English make unjust warre against the said Oneale, and those that favour him: For seeing that the Pope doth declare, that the English doe fight against the Catholike Religion, and that they should bee resisted, as much as if they were Turkes, and that hee doth bestow the same graces upon those which doe resist them; who doubteth the warre which the English make against the Catholike Army to be altogether unjust? But it is not lawfull for any to favour an unjust warre, or to be present thereat under the paine of eternall damnation. The Catholikes doe therefore most grievously offend, which doe beare Armes in the Campes of Heretikes, against the foresaid Prince, in a warre so apparantly impious and unjust, and all those which doe assist the said warre, with Armes, Victuals, or by any other meanes, which of themselves doe further the proceedings of the warre, and cannot giue account of their indifferent obedience, neither doth it any thing availe them to scandall the Apostolicall Letters of Surreption, for Surreption cannot happen where no petition of them is declared, in whose favour they were dispatched. But the high Bishop doth openly teach in those Letters, that hee and his Predicessors, had exhorted the Irish Princes, and all faithfull men, to make that warre, and to provoke them the more thereto; hee doth enrich them with great favours, and indulgences: How may it then bee, that those Letters were surreptive, which only containe in them an exhortation, strengthned with many great favours, for such as did fulfill them; neither therefore can the Catholikes which assist the English, defend themselves by the reasons alleaged in the second question, for no mortall sinne is to bee committed; although either life or goods stand thereupon: but those things which further and helpe to execute an unjust warre are manifestly deadly sinnes. It is permitted likewise to the Catholikes, to performe such kind of obedience to the Queene, as doth not oppugne Catholike religion, neither ever was, or could it bee the meaning of the Pope, to allow them to use that obedience towards the Queene, which doth manifestly disagree with the end and scope, which hee had to spread the Catholike faith, and religion in Ireland; but that it was his meaning and scope, his Letters doe manifestly declare. By all which it remayneth sufficiently apparant, that the most famous Prince Hugh Oneale, and other Catholikes of Ireland, making warre against an hereticall Queene, who opposeth her selfe against the true faith, and no Rebels at all, neither doe deny due obedience, nor vsurpe unjustly the Queenes Dominions, but rather that they doe revenge themselves and their Countrey, from impious and wicked tyrannie by a most just warre, and defend and mainetaine the holy and right faith, with all their power, as becommeth Catholikes and Christians. All ana every of which, wee underwriten, doe judge and approue, as most certaine and true. Salamanca the seventh of March, 1602.

Iohn of Segvensa, Professor of divinitie in the Colledge of the society of Iesus, of this famous Citie of Salamanca, doe so censure.

I Emanuel of Royas, Professor of divinitie in the said Colledge of Iesus, doe agree in the same.

And I Gaspar of Mena, Professor of divinity and holy Scripture in the said Colledge, doe hold with the opinion of these Fathers, as being altogether true.

I Peter Osorius, Expounder for the sacred Canons in the same Colledge of the society of Iesu, am altogether of the same opinion, with the foresaid Fathers.

The President as is said, being returned to Corke, after a few dayes, began to recover, and finding his strength encreased, and consequently his health, began to apply himselfe to his busines: But before I speake farther of his progressions, I must looke a little backe, to say somewhat of things past.

CHAP. II.

The Earle of Thomond directed to march with an Army into Carbury, and his Instructions. The Castle of Donboy fortified by the Rebels. The Earle of Thomond having placed convenient Garrisons in the West, returned to Corke. The Lord President resolved to besiege the Castle of Donboy. The List of the Army in Mounster. The Lord President advised not to enterprize the winning of the Castle of Donboy, and the reasons why. The Lord President perseueres in his resolution, and causeth the Army to march towards Donboy.

TO make tryall whether the Rebels in the Countrey of Carbery, would submit themselues upon the sight of an Army, having beene lately wasted and spoyled by the Garrisons at Baltimore, Castle-haven, and Bantry; upon the ninth of March (which was the day the Lord Deputie departed from Corke;) the President directed the Earle of Thomond with two thousand and five hundred Foote in List (which were by the Pole but twelue hundred Foote, and fiftie Horse) to march into Carbery, and from thence into Beare, there to view in what manner the Castle of Donboy was fortified, of the incredible strength whereof much was noysed; many other directions hee had, which for the better satisfaction of the Reader, I doe here insert the instructions themselues.

Instructions given to the Earle of Thomond, the ninth of March, 1601.

First assoone as possible you may, your Lordship is to assemble your forces together, consisting of two thousand and five hundred foote in List, and fiftie Horse, and because they lye dispersed, for the more expeditions sake, to take them in your way Westward, as they are garrisoned.

The service you are to performe, is to doe all your endeavour, to burne the rebels Corne in Carbery, Beare, and Bantry, take their Cowes, and to use all hostile prosecution upon the persons of the people, as in such cases of rebellion is accustomed

Those that are in subjection, or lately protected (as Odrischall, Odonevan, and Sir Owen Mac Carties Sonnes) to afford them all kind and mild vsage.

When you are in Beare, (if you may without any apparant perill) your Lordship shall doe well, to take a view of the Castle of Dunboy, whereby wee may be the better instructed how to proceed, for the taking of it, when time convenient shall be afforded.

Captaine Flower as I thinke is now in Bantry, very weakely accompanied, for his relief, you are to hasten towards him, and for your beter understanding to know in what state hee is, to send presently unto him, and accordingly to proceed.

There is direction to the Victualler, to send three moneths Victuals for five hundred Foot to Baltimore, and the like proportion for Beare, and to the Master of the Ordnance, to send to either of those places, one Last of Powder, with Lead and Match proportionably ; your Lordship is to call upon the Ministers of those Offices, to see the same presently sent away. The Powder and Victuall sent for Beare, is directed to Baltimore, there to stay untill the place bee known where Captaine Flower resteth, and from thence to bee thither directed by your Lordship.

When your Lordship hath met with Captaine Flower, and depart from him, you are to leaue with him five hundred Foot (or more) if in your judgement you shall thinke it requisite, and likewise the like proportion of strength to Captaine Harvie, (more or lesse) as in your opinion shall be thought meet.

If the Abbey of Bantrey bee the place found fittest for Captaine Flower to remaine in, and that the same bee so ruined, as of necessity (for the safe and well keeping of the Victualls and Munitions) cost must be bestowed, whatsoever your Lordship shall lay out for the repairing of it, upon your bill of disbursements, it shall be forthwith repaied unto you, alwayes praying you to use as little charge as possible you may: money to intelligencers, and messengers is likewise allowed.

For the Garrison at Kinsale, Victualls is likewise ordained to bee sent, whereof the Victualler must be remembered.

The capitall Rebels that are to resist you, is Osulevan, and Tirrell, your Lordship must leaue no meanes unassayed to get them aliue or dead; the way (in my judgement) how that service may bee effected, I haue already made knowne to your Lordship, wherein I pray you to use your best indeavours.

Giue all the comfort you may to Owen Osulevan, by whose meanes you know the affaires of those parts will be best composed.

Dermond Moyle Mac Cartie is most assisted by the Ocrawlyes, haue a speciall care to prosecute and plague him and his assistants, and if you can finde any good meanes to worke upon him, spare not your endeavour: Sir Owen Mac Carties sonnes (if they bee well handled) will proue the best meanes, knowing as you doe, that hee stands betweene them and the Lord of the Countrey.

If Teg Onorsies Castle, and Rannell Duffes shall in your opinion bee meet for the Service, doe you take them into your hands, and leaue wards in them; but let not your intent bee discovered, untill you be possessed of them.

The like you are to doe with Donneshed, Sir Finnin Odrischalls house, in the which (of necessitie) I thinke the store of Victuals and Munitions for the garrison of Baltimore, must be layed, for the Castle of Donnelong, where Roger Harvie is, is too little for that purpose.

Lastly, I pray your Lordship, of all your proceedings to giue me as often advertisement as you may, and haue correspondencie with Sir Charles Wilmot, for betweene your two Forces, all the Mounster Rebels remaine.

The Earle being gone with his Armie, marched as farre as the Abbey of Bantrie, about threescore miles from Corke, and there had notice, that Donnell Osulevan Beare and his people, by the advice of two Spanyards, an Italian, and a Fryer called Dominicke Collins, did still continue their workes about the Castle of Dunboy; the Barbican whereof being a stone wall of sixteene foot in height, they faced with soddes intermingled with wood and faggots (aboue foure and twenty foot thick) for a defence against the Cannon; they had also sunke a low Plat-forme to plant their Ordnance for a counter-battery, and left nothing undone, either within or without the Castle, that in their opinions was meet for defence: But when it came to tryall, it appeared that their Iudgements fayled, (as after you shall heare) For the Barbican was not above six or eight foot distant from the Castle, the height whereof was exceeding high, not remembring that the ruines thereof would quickly fill the voyd space betweene them, and make a faire assault when a breach was made, whereby all their earth and sodd workes proved vaine and fruitlesse, not so much as one Cannon shott being bestowed upon them, but as neere as the Cannoniers could take their aymes above it, as the President had directed. Tirrell in this meane time with the other Bownoghs had so well placed themselues in the mountaines of Beare, that hee could not with his Armie passe any farther without apparant danger: Heereupon the Earle left with Captaine George Flower, besides his owne Company, the Companies of Sir Iohn Dowdall, the Lord Barry, Captain Francis Kingsmill, Captaine Bostock, and Captaine Bradbury, which were seven hundred men in List, in the Whiddy, (an Iland lying within the Bay of Bantrie) very convenient for the Service, and himselfe with the rest of his Forces returned to Corke, where having made relation of the particulars of his journey, it was found necessary that the President without any protractions or delay, should draw all the Forces in the Province to a head against them; And although the time of the yeere was not so convenient, (the Spring being newly begun) yet present order was taken for all the Armie to repaire unto Corke, except those which Sir Charles Wilmott did imploy for the reduction of Kerry: Vpon a longer delay a double inconvenience depended: First, her Majestie should be burthened with a greater charge; and secondly, though the Spaniards had an intention of sending another Army, yet if they might bee certified that the Castle of Donboy was taken, which was the onely possession which they had in Ireland, and the Countrey reduced to her Majesties Obedience before they were put to Sea, it might peradventure perswade them to new Councels, and alter the former Determinations.

But before I proceed any farther, it is pertinent to set downe the Forces which the Lord Deputy left for the prosecution of the warre in Mounster, which as they stood in List, (but very weake by the Pole) was as followeth:

Of Horse.

The Lord President .	100
The Earle of Thomond .	100
Sir Charles Wilmot .	25
Sir Anthony Cooke .	50
Captaine William Taffe .	50

Of Foot.

 The Lord President .	200
 The Earle of Thomond .	200

The Lord Barry .	100
✠ The Lord Audley .	150
✠ Sir Richard Percy .	150
✠ Sir Charles Wilmot .	150
Sir George Thornton .	100
Sir Gerard Harvie .	150
Sir Francis Barkley .	150
Sir John Dowdall .	150
Sir Samuel Bagnall .	150
Sir Anthony Cooke .	150
Sir Alexander Clifford .	150
Sir Arthur Savage .	150
The White Knight .	100
Captaine Roger Harvie .	150
Captaine George Flower .	150
Captaine William Saxey .	100
Captaine Francis Slingsby .	100
Captaine Henry Skipwith .	100
Captaine Francis Hobby .	100
Captaine Francis Kingsmill .	100
Captaine William Power .	100
Captaine George Kingsmill .	100
Captaine Robert Collome .	100
Captaine John Bostock .	100
Captaine Gawen Harvie .	100
Captaine Charles Cooke .	100
Captaine William Stafford .	100
Captaine John Owsley .	100
Captaine George Blundell .	100
Captaine Edward Dodington .	100

Captaine Ralfe Sidley.	100
Captaine Thomas Bois.	100
Captaine Holcroft.	100
In all	 Horse 325 Foot 4400

The enterprise of the siege of Donboy was by the best Subjects of the land, and by the Presidents particular friends dissuaded; the one in regard of the publique, and the other in the loue they bare him: and also out of England had hee advice, that hee should bee very wary how hee proceeded, lest hee should faile in the enterprise; whereby the Queene and State, should undergoe a fruitlesse charge and scorne; for by all men it was thought, that the place was impregnable, by reason of the situation of it: Whereunto no approach by land forces could be made, neerer then the Bay of Bantry, being short of Donboy foure and twenty miles, the wayes being in many places so impassable for horse and cariages, and in some places such straights and craggie rocks, as it was impossible for men to march but in file, whereby one hundred that were to make defence, might forbid an Army to passe: if hee purposed to transport his Army by Sea, that hee should find no landing place for his Ordnance neere unto it, and being landed, the wit of man was not able (without an infinite number of Pioners) to draw them unto the Castle; for all the grounds neere unto it, were either bog, or rocks, and also that there was no conveniencie of ground to encampe in, no good water neere, nor wood for necessary use, or gabion stufte within three miles of it: The Earle of Ormond in his loue both to the service, and to the President, wrote unto him a disswading Letter, for the causes afore recited, and therefore advised him to forbear the Enterprise: But the President foreseeing the importance of the service, and prophesying (as it fell out) that the winning of that place would discourage the Spaniards from any new invasion, gaue but a deafe eare to all perswasions, hoping that hee should find the difficulties lesse then they were beleevd or related unto him: The well affected Irish (fearing the event) solicited him vehemently not to attempt it; his answers were, that bogs nor rocks, should forbid the draught of the Cannon; the one hee would make passable by Faggots and Timber, the other hee would breake and smooth with pyoners tooles; and with this constant resolution hee caused the Army to bee assembled, which at Corke was in list neere three thousand, but by pole not exceeding fifteene hundred, by reason the Companies had beene extreemely weakned, by the long cold and hungry winter siege: The President (though feeble and weake in his owne estate of health) drew forth of Corke the three and twentieth of Aprill, 1602. and encamped that night at Owneboy, being the very place where Tyrone lodged, at such time as hee received the great overthrow neere Kinsale.

The foure and twentieth wee rose and marched to Tymolegge, where the Army lodged, and three Rebels that were taken, and brought before the Lord President were executed.

The fiue and twentieth wee drew to Roscarbry, where our Army lodged.

The sixe and twentieth wee departed Rosse over the Leape to Glanbarahan neere Castle-haven, where the Army encamped, and the Lord President went to Castle-haven to view the Castle and harbour, not removing Captaine Gawen Harvie his Company (who had the guard thereof) from thence.

The seven and twentieth the Army dislodged, and the Lord President with his Regiment drew to Baltimore, and the Earle of Thomond and Sir Richard Percy, with their Regiments drew to a Castle called the Ould-court, three miles from Baltimore, where (by reason of revictualling of the Army) we lodged two nights, in which time the Lord President tooke view of the Harbour thereof, and was ferried over into the Iland of Innisheseerkan, where hee likewise tooke view thereof, and sent to the Iland of Cleere, and the Sound betweene them not removing Captaine Roger Harvies Company thence, they being divided to guard the Castles of Donneshed, Donnelonge, and Cape-Cleere.

The Castle of Dunboy

The 7 of June the Army Lodged here
opposite to Dunboy

THE PASSAGE OF THE ARMY

The Rebels entrenchment in the Sandye Bay and there wrote to receive us at our landing there as they Expected

The 6 of June 5 Regiments were transported into the Mayne,

PART OF THE

GREAT

ISLAND

Here the Second of June the Army encamped

Here the 6 of June the Army Landed in the Mayne fought w the Rebels put them to flight and that night encamped near into Castle Dermond

THE COUNTRY

OF

BEARE

The nine and twentieth wee encamped on the Mountaine at a place called Recarenellaghe neere unto Kilcoa, being a Castle wherein the Rebelle Caoghor eldest Sonne to Sir Finnin Odrischall Knight held a Ward.

The thirtieth the Army dislodged, and drew to Carew Castle, built in ancient time by the Lord Presidents Ancestors, and by the Irish called Downemarke, or the Marques his house, being two miles distant from the Abbey of Bantry, where wee sate downe, aswell to giue annoyance to the Rebels, as to tarry the comming of the shipping with victuals, munition, and Ordnance; at which place Captaine George Flower with his Garrison (left there by the Earle of Thomond) fell in unto us.

---

---

CHAP. III.

Divers spoyles done to the Enemy. A Letter from the Lord President to the Spanish Cannoniers in Donboy. Captaine Bostock and Captaine Barry sent to Sir Charles Wilmot. A Digression of Sir Charles Wilmots proceedings in Kerry. Divers Rebels slaine. A traitorly Souldier hanged. A Ward put into Carigfoile. The Castle of Lixnaw taken by composition. The Castle of Ballihow taken, and the Knight of Kerry defeated. Castle Gregory and Rahane taken.

THE first of May, Captaine Taffes troop of Horse with certaine light foote were sent from the Campe, who returned with three hundred Cowes, many Sheepe, and a great number of Garrans they got from the Rebels.

The second Captaine Iohn Barry brought into the Campe five hundred Cowes, three hundred Sheepe, three hundred Garrans, and had the killing of five Rebels; and the same day wee procured skirmish in the edge of their Fastnesse with the rebels, but no hurt of our part.

The third Owen Osulevan and his Brothers, Sonnes to Sir Owen Osulevan (who stand firme, and deserved well of her Majestie, being Competitours with Osu-levan Beare) brought some fiftie Cowes, and some sheepe from the Enemy into the Campe.

The fourth, Odalie was convented before the Lord President and Councell, and in regard it was proved that hee came from the rebels, with messages and offers to Owen Osulevan, to adhere and combine with the Enemy, which the said Owen did first reveale to Captaine Flower, Sergeant Major of the Army, and after publikely justified it to Odalies face; the said Odalie was committed to attend his tryall at the next Sessions.

This Odalies Ancestor had the county of Moynterbary given unto him by the Lord Presidents Ancestor, many hundred yeares past, at which time Carew had to his inheritance, the moiety of the whole kingdome of Corke, which was first given by King Henry the second unto Robert fits Stephen; the service which Odalie and his Progenie were to doe, for so large a proportion of Lands unto Carew and his successors, was (according to the custome of that time) to bee their Rimers, or Chroniclers of their actions.

The fift and sixt, the weather was so tempestuous, that we could not stirre out of the quarter.

The seventh, the Lord President understanding that the Spanish Cannoniers were still in Donboy, as well in regard they were strangers, but especially to depriue the Enemy of their service; hee wrote a Letter in Spanish unto them, to perswade them to relinquish the Rebels, assuring them, that they should not onely come safe, and remaine safely with him, but that hee would embarque them for Spaine. This Letter by the meanes of Owen Osulevan, was delivered unto them; but as it appeared, they little deserved the favour proffered; for if they had pleased they might haue made an escape: but at last when the Castle was taken, they payed the price of their inconsiderate obstinacie: The Letter (Englished) was thus.

A Letter from the Lord President to the Spanish Cannoniers in Dunboy.

WHen Don Iuan de Aguila (Generall for the Spanish Armie for his Majestie in Ireland) departed from the Citie of Corke, having a care of your safeties, requested mee to favour you, saying, That contrary to your willes the Traytor Donnell Osulevan (by force) held you in his Castle of Dunboy, there to serue him as Cannoniers : I now calling to mind his desire, (in the loue I beare him, being so great a Captaine, and so honourable a Person as he is) and in consideration of the promise I made him, doe write this Letter unto you, promising (for the reasons before mentioned) that when I shall sit downe (with my forces) before the castle (where you are) if then you will quitt the same and come unto mee, I will, by the faith of a Gentleman, and a Christian, make good my promise to Don Iuan de Aguila ; not onely to secure you in comming to me, and in the like safetie to bee with mee, but also to relieue and supply your wants, and likewise at your pleasure, to accommodate you with a Ship, and my Pasport, safely to passe into Spaine, in such manner as hath been already accomplished to the rest of the Spanyards that are returned to their Countrey: This aboue written I am obliged by my promise to Don Iohn to fulfill. But if you haue a desire to finde or receiue further favours at my hands, you may with facilitie deserue it, that is, when you leaue the Castle to cloy the Ordnance, or mayme their Carriages, that when they shall haue need of them, they may prooue uselesse, for the which I will forthwith liberally recompense you answerable to the qualitie of your merit. Lastly, if there bee in your companies any strangers, (English and Irish excepted) which are likewise by force held (as you are) these my letters shall be sufficient to secure their repaire to me, and also to depart, as hath beene before mentioned, conditionally, that you and they present your selues unto mee, before our Ordnance shall begin to batter the Castle of Donboy aforesayd : But if on your part default be made, I holde myselfe clearely acquitted of my promise made to Don Iohn, and to bee free from breach of faith on my part, and you ever after incapable of this favour of my promised offer. Returne me your Answer by this Bearer in writing, or by some other in whom you haue more confidence. From the Campe neere Bantrie the seventh of May, 1602.

To the Spanyards held by force in the Castle of Dunboy.

The eighth, the Lord President sent forth three hundred light Footmen secretly by night through the Enemies Fastnesse, under the commaund of Captaine Iohn Bostock, and Iohn Barry, with commaundement that they should make their repayre to Ardentully, Mac Finnees house, and there joyne those Forces with Sir Charles Wilmotts Regiment; who being united, Terrill and the rest of the Irish Rebels, (who before had vaunted, that they would keepe our Armie from joyning together, and lay in a place of advantage fit for that purpose) were so discomforted, as they did quit the strength they possest, and sought onely to avoyd our Forces, but no way to resist or interrupt them.

But now leaving the progression towards Donboy for a while, expecting faire weather and prosperous winds, to bring our provisions from Corke by Sea :

Wee will by way of digression say somewhat of Sir Charles Wilmots proceedings in Kerry, before his comming into our Campe: It may therefore please the Reader to understand, that the Army being risen from before Kinsale, the Irish defeated, the composition made with the Spanish Generall, and the forces returned to Corke; The Lord President about the beginning of February dispatched Sir Charles Wilmot with a Regiment of one thousand and seven hundred Foote in list, but by pole very weake, and a troope of Horse, into his former government of Kerry, not doubting but hee which had the skill to cure the former rebellious diseases of that Countrey, could also recure the residuation thereof: In his passage betweene Askeiton and the Glen: Hugh Mac Swyne (with the Oconners and Onedies) possessed a place through which hee must necessarily passe, whereof being advertised, hee lodged short of the Wood an English mile, and rising before day light, hee assayed them in their quarter, where hee slew twelue of their men, tooke all their baggage and horses, with fiftie of their Armes, and chased them three miles, but they were too swift of foote; had it not beene for a Con-naght man of the White Knights company, who purposely discharged his Peece to giue them warning, whereat they tooke an alarme, they had beene (as it was afterward confessed) all (to the number of two hundred) surprised sleeping: The Traytor (as he well deserved) was hanged for his labour: The Castle of Carrigfoyle hee found empty and ruined; neverthelesse hee left a Ward in it, and gaue the charge thereof unto Captaine Collum: when hee came to the river of Cassan, which he passed the same day with some difficultie, being enforced to swim his horses: At which time Iohn fits Thomas, young Captaine Tirrell, Hugh Mac Swyne, Owen Omaylie, Rorie Oconnor, Phelim O Connor, and Gerald fits Maurice, Brother to Fits Maurice the Barron of Lixnaw with five hundred foote and a few horse, assembled at Lixnaw neere unto it, to haue stopped his passage over the Cassan; Fitz Maurice himselfe being then gone into Desmond, to perswade Donnell Mac Cartie, Donnell Osulevan, and William Burke, to draw to the rest, to hinder his passage as aforesaid; but before they had knowledge of his being neere unto them, hee made such expedition as hee was gotten over the River.

And within a few dayes after, hearing that the Lord of Lixnaw was in Lixnaw Castle hee marched thither, and ere hee was set downe before it; Fits Morris fearing to bee shut up in his Castle, although hee had a strong Guard of five and fourtie good men well victualled in it, leaving his Brother for his Constable, he posted into Desmond to procure aids from Osulevan Beare, for the releefe of the same: The Castle stands close to the rivers side, there being but a Pikes length of ground betweene them, which made the Ward negligent to haue any store of water aforehand, thinking they might fetch it at their pleasure: Sir

Charles having knowledge thereof, by a woman which came from them, hee found the meanes to place a choise part of men upon that little plot of ground, whereby the Ward could get no water; in which attempt, Lieutenant Russell who served under Capitaine William Saxey, and one Souldier was slaine: The Ward by this meanes debarred of water, rendered the place upon composition, which Sir Charles yeelded unto, that hee might prosecute services of more importance.

And being now come to Castle-mange, wherein hee had left a Ward before the siege of Kinsale, sent the one halfe of his Companies of horse and foote into the Knight of Kerries countrey (who as the rest in those parts were relapsed into rebellion) to prey the same, and to driue the cattle (they should take) to the Dingle; and for their succours (if need required) himselfe with the remainder of his forces marched after them, as farr as Ballyhow, ten miles from Castle-mange, where hee found the Knight of Kerry with one hundred of his owne Followers, and two hundred Bonoghs, upon a bog not halfe a mile from the Castle, where the Knight had a Ward: To draw him to hard ground, in his sight a few men were appoynted to assault the Castle, himselfe with his foote and horse standing in a body without moving; the Souldiers fired the Castle doore, and within three houres possest themselves of it: The Knight all this while stood at gaze: the Castle being wonne, Sir Charles drew towards him, to procure him to fight, hee finding the advantage of the ground hee was in, where the Horse could not harme him, charged our troopes: Sir Charles seeing himselfe engaged, and in danger if hee should retraite, drew up his Colours to the head of his Pikes, and joyned with the Enemy; it was long disputed whether should haue the better, and with pike and sword, betweene them twentie were hurt and slaine; the Horsemen seeing how doubtfull the successe was, valiantly and resolutely alighted from their horses, upon whose comming the Enemy fled, and were chased more then a mile, but their footemanship was too good for us, and in the chase very few of them were slaine: in this Encounter Phelim Oconnor was killed, and all the Chiefes amongst them (the Knight excepted) were hurt: the next day Sir Charles leaving his foote at Ballihow, rode to the Dingle, at whose comming thither, numbers of people repaired unto him, humbly imploring her Majesties gracious protection: The fifth of March hee also tooke from the Knight of Kerry, Castle Gregory, and the Rahane his chiefe mannor house: And lastly hunting him as a Fox (whose earth is stopped) pursued the sent so freshly, that he constrained him to a new covert, following the Lord of Lixnaw into the Mountaines of Desmond.

CHAP. IV.

The forces which the Rebels had in Kerry in bonaght. The voluntary submission of Donnell Mac Cartie. Sir Charles Wilmot required by the Lord President to come to the Campe at Carew Castle. A great prey taken from Osulevan Mores sonnes. The Knight of Kerry upon humble suite protected. Sir Charles Wilmot with the forces of Kerry, and the munitions and victuals from Corke arrived at the Campe then at Carew Castle. Munition and victuals sent by the Lord President to the Lord Deputie. Dermond Moyle Mac Cartie brother to Florence Mac Cartie slaine.

AFTER these good successes many of the Countrey (as their manner is to take part with the strongest) submitted themselves unto the Governour, the principall amongst whom, was Dermond Osulevan, brother to Osulevan More, by whom hee understood the force of the Rebels there, namely the Barron of Lixnaw, in his Countrey of Clanmorris, had entertayned William Burke with three hundred Bonnaghs, the Knight of Kerry as many under Mac Cabs Sonnes, and the Mac Swynes, and Donnell Mac Cartie (vsurping againe the title and possessions of Mac Cartie More, with the helpe of the Osulevans) gaue bonnaght to Captaine Tirrell with foure hundred men, so that their forces were one thousand strangers.

At this time Sir Charles Wilmot had certaine traffique with William Burke, who seemed very desirous to become a Subject : The Governour required him to doe such service, as might merit both his pardon and reward, which hee yeelded unto, yet with limitations, namely that hee would never betray the liues of any, but hee would undertake to get into his hands all the prey of Kerry and Desmond, and deliver the one halfe to the Garrison, so that he might haue licence to depart into Connaght with the rest.

The Governour in the interim of this entercourse surceased not to follow the prosecution of Fits Morris, and prevailed so well therein, that having slaine many of his kerne, and gotten all his Tenants into subjection, hee banished him the Countrey of Clanmorris, and caused him to fly for his safetie into Desmond: Hereupon Donnell Mac Cartie, who bare a good affection to the Lord President (since his former submission) and relying much also upon the Governours kindnesse, whereof before times hee had good experience, without any capitulation or protection, came in his owne person to Sir Charles, and brought with him five thousand Cowes, besides sheepe and garrans in great numbers: The Governour hereby perceiving his loyall simplicity, would take no advantages against him, but gaue him all countenance and contentment that his place could afford.

The Governour having cleared all Kerry, so that no Enemy was left upon his backe, drew the forces towards Desmond about the middle of Aprill, to pursue such Services as that Mountainous and desolate Countrey would permit him to effect. But by reason of the dangerous passages (the whole Countrey being nothing else but mountaines, woods, and boggs) hee thought it not safe to adventure any further then Listree, a Castle seated twelue myles within Desmond; whilst hee remayned there in campe, hee received Letters from the President, giving him to understand of his journey to Donboy, and how farre hee was proceeded therein, willing him to take the best order that hee could for the speedy setling of those parts, that hee might repayre unto him (upon a day assigned) to Carew Castle. The Rebels receiving also notice, that the President was marched so neere to the Countrey of Beare, withdrew themselues out of Desmond (as before) into Glangarve, whereby opportunitie was offered to the Governour of performing some good service: For Donnell Osulevan, Sonne to Osulevan More, a malicious Rebel, remained with great store of cattell, and certaine Kerne in Iuragh; which being made knowen to Sir Charles, upon the fifth of May hee secretly dispatched a partie of men, which burnt and spoyled all the Countrey, and returned with foure thousand Cowes, besides Sheepe and Garrans. The Knight of Kerry finding that the Queenes forces prospered so well, and that the Rebels were daily impouerished and distressed, sought in all humble and submissiue manner for protection, promising the best security that could be deuised for his future loyaltie, which the Governour was the more willing to accept, because those parts should enjoy thereby a more quiet establishment during his absence with the President. These things thus ordered, hee onely entended his meeting with the Presidents Armie; many difficulties appearing to giue impediment thereunto: for the Rebells knowing that these forces should joyne, and that there was no way for Sir Charles to march, but by the Abbey of Erillah, and so over the Mangart, a most hideous and uncouth Mountaine, they plashed and manned all the places, straights and advantages thereof, giving forth, that they would set up their rest, and either kill, or bee killed, before they would permit him to passe: But to proceed.

The ninth, the Lord President went over into the Iland, Whiddy, to take view thereof, and returned to the Campe that night, and the tenth rode towards the mouth of the harbour, to see the entrie thereof.

The eleventh, the President drew foorth all the Regiments, leaving onely a competent number to guard the Quarter in his absence, and marched two myles from the Campe, beyond Carrignesse, to the edge of the Straight, where Tirrell with the Rebells were lodged, to giue disturbance to Sir Charles Wilmotts comming to the Campe, to the intent if the Enemy had given upon Sir Charles, he might giue him Seconds: But the passage was quitted, and the Forces came through the same without any blowe; and the very same day the Ships arrived in the Harbour, which brought about the Victualls, and Munitions from Corke, it breeding great gladnesse to the Army, then being in so great want, as that wee must haue beene enforced within two dayes to haue returned towards Baltimore.

The twelfth, the Lord President received Letters from the Lord Deputie by Iohn Pavie his servant, whereby hee was required to send a great proportion of Munition and Victuals out of his Province to his Lordship, which hee performed accordingly, and returned his man: The same day also the Hoy which brought about the Ordnance, and the Trinitie, (belonging to Iames Goagh of Waterford) with the remainder of the Munitions and victuals, which was left for her Guard, both safely arrived at Carew Castle, where we still encamped.

The thirteenth, whilst we were thus detayned by unseasonable weather, there was a notorious Rebell accidentally slaine upon this occasion: The President at his comming from Corke, had commaunded all the Subjects in Kinalmecha, Kirrywherry, and Kinaley, to draw the Cattell Northwards, into the plaine towards Yoghall, and Castle-lyons, because if the Rebels should draw thitherwards, while he was at the siege of Donboy, they might not receiue any reliefe from those parts, amongst the which Mac Cartie Reugh would not driue away his cattell, pretending to keepe them secure from the Rebels, under the garrison of Kinsale; and indeed the reason was, because the principall Rebels in Carbery, being his deare friends, and neere kinsmen, he did not stand in feare to receiue any dammage from them: But it fell out, that Dermond Moyle Mac Cartie, Florence his brother, being distressed for want of Victuall for himselfe and his followers, having no other meanes to supply his wants, thought to make bold with his Cozen Mac Cartie for a few Cowes, and therefore came amongst his Tenants with thirtie men in his company, and seazing upon some part of their prey, offered to retyre toward his Fastnesse. The Churles that attended those cattell, raysed the crie, whereupon some fourty of the Country, with such furniture as came next to hand, speedily followed in rescue of their goods. The Rebels not fearing any Enemy, made no great haste away, and thereby being soone overtaken; these sought to rescue their prey, and they to defend them, in such sort, that in processe they fell to a light skirmish, and not many shot made before one lighted upon the chief Rebel Dermond, and killed him dead in the place: which being knowen, it bred no lesse astonishment in the one partie, then in the other, all the Country being equally grieved for the losse of such a principall Piller of the Catholique Cause, and therefore conveying his corpes to the Abbey of Timoleg, was there interred by a Fryer, in great solemnitie: Mac Cartie Reugh sent present Letters hereof to the President, signifying the vigilant care, and unpartiall regard that hee carried against the Rebels, which his Lordship might well perceiue by his service against his neerest kinsman, and the President was content to giue him thanks, although he knew how little he had deserved the same.

---

CHAPTER V.

A resolution in Councell that the Army should bee transported by Sea to the great Iland, and from thence to the Maine. The Rebell Tirrell desirous to parley with the Lord President. All our horse sent from the Campe to guard Kinsale, and likewise certaine foote. Tirrell failed twice to parley with the Earle of Thomond, and the cause why.

THE fourteenth, the Lord President, the Councell, and the better sort of the Captaines assembled together, and consulted touching the way for the conduct of the Army to Beare-haven, where in regard the way by land was found impassable as aforesaid, for that the passage must bee made through such huge rocks, Mountaines, Bogs, and straights, as it was not possible for a man to march, carrie Armes, and use his weapons if hee should haue occasion to fight, much lesse to carie any victuals, munition, or baggage; and for that also Owen Osulevan, and all the other Gentlemen, that best knew the Countrey, did describe the same to bee so full of dangerous and unavoidable straights, as the Enemy being first possest thereof, they might with the twentieth part of the force they had there, giue annoyance and impediment to the greatest Army: for which and other reasons it was resolved by a generall consent, that the Army should bee transported over the Arme of the Sea, to the great Iland, and from thence to passe to the Maine.

The fifteenth, the Traytor Tirrell sent two of his most trusty friends into the Campe, as Messengers to the Lord President, to invite and pray a parley the day following with his Lordship, which hee refused; then hee desired that he might speake with the Earle of Thomond, which was granted at a place upon the edge of a River, about a mile distant from our Campe; And the same day Captaine Taffe with his troope of Horse, all our cariage, garrans and drivers, and one hundred choice foote, selected out of all our Regiments were sent backe to the Castle ny Parke to guard the Towne of Kinsale, and the Ordnance there; Captaine Hobbie, and Captaine Skipwith being there before with their two weake Companies, not thought sufficient in this uncertaine time to secure those places.

The sixteenth the Earle of Thomond, well attended, drew forth his Regiment, and went to the assigned place: but Tirrell failing to be there, excused by his former Messengers his not comming, by the approach of the evening, praying his Lordships patience, promising there to attend his Lordship the next morning.

The seventeenth, the Earle the second time (according to promise) drew downe to the appoynted place, where Tirrell onely made a shew of his whole force on the other side the River, in the view of our Army, but never came to the place where the Earle was, whose treacherous intent the Earle perceiving, and scorning to expect any other issue returned to the Campe; Tirrell as afterwards wee understood would faine haue gone to the Earle, but the Iesuit Archer, Fits Morris, and Donnell Osulevan would not permit him.

From the seventeenth to the sixe and twenty nothing hapned worthy note, only we were detayned in our Campe with contrary winds, and with strange unseasonable and tempestuous weather.

The sixe and twentieth the wind turned faire, and the shipping drew forth, but immediately the weather proved so tempestuous, that they were constrayned to retorne to their former rode; and the same day a Sergeant of the Earle of Thomonds, with a partie of his Company drew to Down-Manus, whence hee brought a prey of three-score and sixe Cowes, with a great many of Garrans.

The seven and twentieth, the eight and twentieth, the nine and twentieth and the thirtieth, wee were detayned with like contrary winds, and unseasonable fowle and stormy weather.

CHAPTER VI.

The Army dislodged from Carew Castle. The Regiments transported into the great Iland. Teg Keugh Mac Maghon slaine. The Castle of Donmanus surprised. A Spanish ship arrived. The conference betweene the Earle of Thomond and Richard Mac Goghagan. The Lord President rides to the place where the forces were to land. The vigilant care of the Lord President. Two Regiments directed to land in the little Iland, the other two to make to the Maine. The Rebels deceived. The Rebels defeated, and Captaine Tirrell wounded.

THE one and thirtieth, the weather grew faire, and wee tooke advantage thereof, and drew forth, which day our Army dislodged from Carew Castle, leaving our sicke men (which were many) with a strong guard in the Iland of Whyddy, and marched to Kilnamenoghe on the Sea side in Mountervarry, where we encamped that night.

The first of Iune, the Earle of Thomond and his Regiment were imbarqued for the great Iland, as also Sir Charles Wilmots and his Regiment, after whose departure, the Lord President remooved his campe to a head-land, three parts whereof were invironed with the Sea, and the rest was intrenched.

The second Sir Richard Percie and his Regiment followed the other two; and lastly the Lord President with his landed in the great Iland, where the other Regiments were formerly arrived.

The Lord President being wearied with his long stay there, spending the time without advancing the service, for that the Hoy wherein the Peeces of Battery was, could not so well turne to windward as the rest, without which hee could effect nothing of his intended service, sent Captaine Slingsby aboard, (who had before been conversant in Sea-affaires) to use his best diligence in getting those vessells to the great Iland neere to the Castle of Donboy, which with towing the Hoy at the Sterne of the Trinitie of Waterford, and other diligence used, hee effected the service, and arrived at the great Iland.

The third, Teg Keugh Mac Maghon, a principall Rebelle (in an Iland adjoyning to the Dorseys) was casually shot through the body by his owne sonne, whereof he dyed the third day following.

The fourth, Owen Osulevan, and two of his brothers with a partie of men, went to the Castle of Donmanus, which was held and guarded by the Rebells, which they surprized, and kept the same, killed foure of the Guard, and tooke the prey and spoyle of the Towne.

The fifth, a Spanish ship arrived at the Bay of Camnarra, neere Ardea in Desmond.

And the same day Richard Mac Goghagan (being the Constable of Dunboy) came into the great Iland, and spake with the Earle of Thomond; but whether he were sent by the Presidents intreatie, to see whether he could perswade with Mac Goghagan vpon promise of reward, to render the Castle to the Queene, or whether Richard Mac Goghagan did intreat the Earle, that he might haue a Safe-conduct to speake with him, I am uncertaine, but of this I am sure, that the Earles meeting with him, was not without the Presidents knowledge and allowance: All the Eloquence and artifice which the Earle could use avayled nothing; for Mac Goghagan was resolved to persevere in his wayes, and in the great loue which he pretended to beare unto the Earle, hee advised him not to hazard his life, in landing upon the Mayne: for I know (sayd hee) you must land at yonder Sandy Bay, where before your comming, the place will bee so trenched and gabioned, as you must runne upon assured death: The Earle disdayning both his obstinacie, and his vaine-glorious advice, brake off his speech, telling Mac Goghagan, that ere many dayes passed, hee would repent that hee had not followed his counsell.

The sixth being Sunday, a foule and stormie morning, the Lord President very early taking but one Footman with him, rode two or three miles from the Campe, to the place where the Boats were assembled to passe the Army (which that day was to rise) over into the Maine: The cause which moved him to be stirring so timely, was to view the landing place, which was lesse then halfe a mile from the place of the imbarquing, from whence hee might easily discerne a low sandy Bay, betweene high ground, of a very little capacite, where the discent was to bee made, which was entrenched and barricadoed with gabions of earth; in the which trench and behind the gabions, the enemies had placed three Muskettiers, and their grosse at hand, to giue them seconds: But not contented with a view so farre off, the Queenes Pinnace the Merlin, riding not farre from him, hee commanded Captaine Flemming to passe him over into a little Iland, called Donghe Irish, which lay betweene the great Iland and the Maine, and some part of it not twelue score from the sandy Bay aforesaid: When hee came into the said Iland, and taking an exact view of the landing place, and how the rebels Army lodged to forbid our descent, and the apparent danger hee saw would ensue in the attempt, hee rounded all the small Iland, and at last hee found a convenient place to land in the Maine; and the same (by reason of a rising ground in the midst thereof) was out of the sight of the sandy Bay: presently hee commanded Captaine Fleming to land (out of his Pinnace) in the Iland two falcons of brasse, and hailed them upon their trunks to a place naturally formed like a platforme, and parrapetted with an old ditch, as if it had beene fashioned to that purpose: In this place the Peeces were planted; from it to the Maine land, it was not aboue one hundred paces; and although the distance from the sandy

Bay to this place, was not foure and twenty score, yet to come unto it was more then halfe a mile, by reason of a Gurt, or cleft Rock, made by the Sea; which ran up farre into the land, which the Enemy must compasse before hee could come unto it: By that time that the President had performed as much as hee intended in the small Iland, the Presidents and the Earle of Thomonds regiments were imbarqued, and under saile, whom the President (when they came neere unto him) caused to land where hee stood in the small Iland, and drawing them to that end of the same which faced the sandy Bay to amuse the rebels, being not distant from them (as is said) a Musket shot, hee formed them into a battallion; and so stood firme confronting the Enemy, as if from thence hee would passe them into the Maine: Sir Richard Percy, and Sir Charles Wilmot with the reare Regiments (by this time) were likewise imbarqued.

For you must understand that wee had not Boats sufficient to transport all our Regiments at once, and they likewise made to the small Iland, but in steed of landing in the same, the President directed them to passe by the end of it (when hee had placed the faulcons) and to land directly in the Maine; before the Rebels found themselues deceived, the two reare Regiments were landed, and formed into order ready to fight; then the President drew his owne, and the Earle of Thomonds regiments to the boats, not twelue score from them, which the Rebels perceiving, and too late finding their error, in a disordered manner made towards our landing place, but before they could compasse the fret, or cleft rocky ground as aforesaid, all our Army was landed: Neverthelesse they came on brauely, but our falcons made them halt; our Vanguard made towards them, and a good skirmish ensued, which continued untill the other Regiments came up, but then they brake, and ran faster then wee could follow: vpon the place eight and twentie of them was slaine, whereof two were officers, and thirtie wounded, whereof Captaine Tirrell was one, shot in the body but not deepe enough: There was onely two prisoners taken, and presently hanged, whereof a servant of Iames Archer (the infamous Iesuit) was one, and with him his masters sword and portace: And if the Iesuit himselfe had not beene a light footed Priest, hee had fallen into our hands, and yet as nimble as hee was, hee escaped with much difficultie, and besides him, great numbers of them would haue passed the edge of the sword, had not they had a boggie Wood at hand, wherein they were sheltered: The losse of our side was onely the hurting of seven men, but none of marke; the skirmish being ended, wee lodged that night upon the same ground neere unto Castle Dermond.

CHAP. VII.

The Spanish ship which arrived neere Ardea brought Passengers, Munition, and Money to the Rebels. The distributers and distribution of some of the money. A Letter from Owen Mac Eggan unto Richard Mac Goghagan at Donboy. A Letter from James Archer Iesuit to Dominick Collins Iesuit at Donboy. A Letter from Iohn Anias to Dominick at Donboy. A Letter from Iohn Anias to the Barron of Lixnaw a little before his execution.

WITHIN two houres after the skirmish aforesaid was ended, the Rebels had intelligence that there was a Spanish patach landed the night before at the haven of Kilmokilloc, not farre from Ardea, in the Bay of Camnarra, shee was purposely sent from Spaine, to know the estate of the Castle of Donboy, whether it held still for the King of Spaine; some Irish passengers was in her, namely a Fryer James Nelane, a Thomond man belonging to Sir Tirlogh Obrian, who had the charge of the treasure; Owen Mac Eggan the Popes Bishop of Rosse, and his vicarius Apostolicus, with Letters to sundry Rebels, and twelue thousand pounds, as the President was credibly informed by one called Moylmurry Mac Edmond Boy Mac Swyny, then a Rebelle, who saw it, besides munition, which did put such a fresh spirit into the Rebels, (who formerly were advising rather to breake and disperse then to endure a siege) as they solemnly vowed to persevere in the defence of the Castle, assuring the Messenger (which they confirmed by their Letters) that they would hold the same until Michaelmas, within which time they prayed aid, which the Messenger confidently promised ; for (said hee) two thousand men were drawn to the Groyne, before I departed thence : And the next morning being the fifteenth, hee set saile for Spaine, carrying with him Brian Okelly, and Donnagh Mac Mahon Obrian : The distribution of the money by appointment in Spaine (as Moylemurry aforesaid affirmed) was left principally to the disposition of Donnell Osulevan Beare, Owen Mac Eggan, Iames Archer and some others, and Ellen Cartie, wife to Owen Osulevan then a prisoner with Donnell Osulevan Beare, did see some part of that treasure disbursed in manner following.

To Donnell Osulevan Beare .	1500.li.
To Iames Archer Iesuit.	0150
To Donoghe Moyle Mac Cartie .	} 0160
To Finnin Mac Cartie .
To Dermond Moyle, Florence his Brother.	0300.li.
To Odonevan .	0200
To Sir Finnin Odrischall , and Conner his Son	0500
To Conner Mac Nemarra .	} 0100
To Richard Blake .
To The Lord of Lixnaw .	0100
To Iohn fits Thomas .	0200
To O Conner Kerry .	} 0100
To the Knight of the Valley .
To Donnell Mac Cartie the Bast.	0400

Sum. 3710. li.

And likewise the said Moilmurry, saw foure great Boat loads of wine, munition, and money, taken out of the patach, and caried on shore by Osulevan Beare, into the Castle of Ardea; but how much munition was brought he did not know, part thereof was presently sent to Donboy, to encourage the Rebels in the Castle; Owen Mac Eggan wrote a Letter to Richard Mac Goghagan, which is here ensuing truely related, and an other written by Archer the Iesuit, to Dominick Collins the Fryer, and a third from Iohn Anias, who conceived himselfe to be a good Ingeniere: All which Letters doe here ensue.

A Letter from Owen Mac Eggan to Richard Mac Goghagan at Donboy.

MAster Richard, I commend mee unto you, being very glad of the good report I heare of you, whereby I cannot but expect much (with God his assistance) in that lawfull and godly cause of you: I am sorry, but it was my lucke to conferre with you, and with the rest of your company, and informe you of all the State of the matters of Spaine; but upon my credit and conscience, there is no peece of service now in hand in all Christendome for the King of Spaine, then the same that yee haue: How great it is to God, and necessary for our Countrey affaires you know: Moreover within few dayes you shall haue releefe of men come to helpe you thither out of Spaine: the great Army of fourteene thousand men are forth comming, you shall all be aswell recompensed, both by God and by the Kings Majestie, as any Ward that is in all the world againe ; haue me I pray commended to all, and especially to father Dominick, and bid him bee of good courage ; there comes with the Army a father of the company an Italian, for the Pope his Nuncius, in whose company I came from Rome to the Court of Spaine, and there hee expects the Armies comming hither, hee shall giue all a benediction, yea I hope within your Castle there, spite of all the devils in hell : From the Catholike Campe this present Wednesday. 1602.

Your assured Friend,
Owen Hegaine.

In my sacrifice and other poore prayers I will not faile, but commend you and your good cause to God ; our shippe did arriue three dayes agon, and our Letters is come to the King by this time, Nisi Dominus custodierit civitatem, &c.

A Letter from Iames Archer Iesuite, to Dominick Collins, Iesuite, at Donboy.

YOur Letters of Thursday last came to our hands, but our disagreeing in some matters, makes to bee slacke in performing your desire, yet you must take better order for the premises ; in the meane while, how ever becomes of our delays, or insufficiencies, bee yee of heroicall minds, (for of such consequence is the keeping of that Castle, that every one there shall surpass in deserts any of us here; and for Noble valiant Souldiers shall passe immortall throughout all ages to come; for the better incouraging, let these words be read in their hearing: Out of Spaine we are in a vehement expectation, and for Powder, Lead, and Money, furnished: Now to come to more particular matters, vnderstand that there are but two wayes to attempt you, that is, scaling with ladders, or Battery: for scaling, I doubt not but your owne wits needs no direction; and for Battery, you may make up the breach by night. The higher you rayse your workes every way the better, but let it bee thicke and substantiall: raise of a greater height that worke Captaine Tirrell made, betwixt the house and the cornell: make plaine the broken house on the South side: For fire-worke direction doe this, prime the holes, and stop in the balls with powder mixt through the materiall well, and some powder vppermost that shall take fire; the rest you know, as you haue heard mee declare there: by all meanes possible send me one Ball, and the rest of the Saltpeeter. This in haste till better leasure: Campe this Thursday.

Your loving Cousen,
JAMES ARCHER.

To Father Dominicke
Collins, these in haste.

A Letter from Iohn Anias, to Dominick Collins, Iesuite, at Donboy.

BE carefull of your fortifying continually, with a most speciall care rayse in height the West side of your Port; fill your Chambers on the South and North side with Hides, and earth; what battery is made suddenly repayre it like valiant Souldiers; make plaine in the South side the remnant of the broken houses; make wayes out of the Hall to scower and cast stones upon the Port, and if the Enemy would attempt the like, dig deepe that place wee first begun, and a trench aboue to defend the same, as I haue sayd unto you. Although wee expect speedie reliefe out of Spaine, yet bee you wise to preserue the store of ~~ammunition~~ ammunition. ~~show your valour~~ Invention possible to hold out this siege, which is the greatest honour in this Kingdome: with the next I shall prepare shooes for you: send me the cord or long line, and the rest of the Saltpeter, withall the yron borriers, seven peeces in all. Salute in my name Richard Magoghegane, praying God to haue of his speciall Grace that care of your successe. From the Campe, the                      of June, 1602.

Your loving Cousen,

John Anias.

To Father Dominick,
Beerehaven, these.

In November following, this Iohn Anias, (who in October was taken prisoner by Iohn Berry, the Constable of Castle Mange) was executed by Martiall Law: Whether he was a Priest or no, it was held doubtfull: The day before his execution he wrote this ensuing Letter to the Lord of Lixnaw.

A Letter from Iohn Anias to the Baron of Lixnaw, a little before his execution.

IN trust is treason: So Wingfield betrayed me; my death satisfies former suspitions, and giues occasion heereafter to remember mee; and as ever I aspire to immortallize my name upon the earth, so I would request you by vertue of that ardent affection I had toward you in my life, you would honour my death, in making mention of my name in the Register of your countrey: Let not my servant Cormock want, as a faithfull servant unto mee; let my Funerall and Service of the Catholique Church bee observed for the Soule. Heere I send you the Passe, and Letter of that faithlesse Wingfield, having charged the Bearer upon his duetie to God, to deliver this unto your hands. Osulevan was strange to mee, but inures himselfe to want me. Commend mee to Captaine Tirrell, Oconnor, your sister Gerode Oge. This the night before my execution, the eight day of November, 1602. and upon this sudden I cannot write largely.

Your loving Bedfellow sometimes,
Ismarito.

CHAP. VIII.

The Lo. President vieweth the Castle of Donboy. The Lord President finds good ground to encampe in, and to plant the battrey contrary to all mens opinions. Two Espials of the Rebels hanged. The Artillery landed. The Campe entrenched, and the Artillery drawen into the Market place. Our Approaches begun. The Iland of the Dorsies taken, and in it divers Rebels slaine and taken prisoners besides Artillery, Munition, and much other spoyle. The Rebels taken in the Dorsies executed, and the fort rased. Captaine Kingsmill maymed with a shot. An attempt of the Rebels given on our Campe. Sir Samuell Bagnall brings Letters to the Lord President from the Lord Deputy, and from Don Iuan de Aguila. A faire escape. The Artillery planted before Donboy. Donboy battered and a breach made. The breach assaulted. Divers of the Rebels slaine in seeking to escape by a salley. Others slaine in the water. The Lord Presidents colours placed on the top of the Castle, but the Vault still mainetayned by the Rebels. Sundry Rebels voluntarily yeelded themselues. The remaynder made election of a new Captaine, whose resolution was extraordinary. A battery made upon the Vault. The rest rendered themselues. A desperate resolution of Richard Mac Goghagan. Eight and fifty Rebels executed, the rest reserved for a time. The whole number of the Ward in Donboy. The losse wee received in the siege. Captaines, men of quality and others wounded. Artillery, Munition, and spoyles gotten in the Castle.

THE seventh, the President drew his forces to a necke of land within a mile of Donboy, opposite against it, an Arme of the Sea passing betweene the Castle and the Campe: from whence the President taking Sir Charles Wilmot, and one hundred Foot for a Guard with him, stole out of the Campe, and marched directly to the Castle to view it, and the grounds adjoyning; in doing whereof some small shott was bestowed upon them, but none other hurt

The 7 of June the
Army lodged here
opposit to Dunboy

The castle of Dunboy taken by assault the 17 and 18 of June after blowne uppe w powder the 22 of the month afore said

Part of the great Hill where y<sup>e</sup> Earl of Thomond spake
wth Richard M<sup>ch</sup>aghach

THE STIDGE OF DVNBOY

The Martin

The Spanish Bay

The Hays and Boates transport inge of the ordnance

Here were two Ditches planted

The Battery plan and the 16 of June

The 10 June y<sup>e</sup> Campe was quartered and entrenched on the nth

Here y<sup>e</sup> Ordnance was Landed y<sup>e</sup> 10th of June

The Bridge

A Small Sconce between the Campe and the Bridge

PART

OF

THE

CONTRYE

OF

BEARE

THE MAYNE OCEAN

done then Sir Charles Wilmots horse shot in the foot: There they found (contrary to the reports of all men that had seene the same) a faire place of good ground, and of capacity sufficient to encampe in, within twelue score of the Castle, and yet out of the sight of it, by reason of a rising ground inter-jacent, and also upon the top of a small ascent in the midst of the rockes, a faire greene plot of ground, not an hundred and fortie yards distant from the Castle, like unto a naturall platforme, of a just largenesse to plant the Artillery upon: At their returne the report being made, it was hardly beleaved: For the Lord Barry, the white Knight, Cormuck Mac Dermond, Captaine Iohn Barry, and Owen Osulevan, who was borne and bred in the Castle; all of them being in the Campe, did evermore constantly aver, that there was no other then rocky ground neere unto it, and surely I conceiue they did thinke it to bee so, supposing that the plots of ground afore mentioned, were too little to lodge in, and to plant the Artillery: Further the President assured them, (with Gods favour) hee would plant the Ordnance without the losse of a man, and within seven dayes after the battery was begun, to bee master of all that place, hereat the whole Army much rejoyced: for the generall opinion was, that it would be a long siege, but afterwards (as you shall heare) the President kept his promise aforesaid: The same day, seven great shot was made from the Castle to the Campe, but no harme done.

The eighth wee planted two Falcons taken out of the Queenes Pinnace, upon a poynt of land, on the North side of the Castle, hard by our Campe, which beate upon the Enemy, who were then carying of turffe, and earth to advance their workes: And the same day, the Hoy was brought a ground, and two Culverings unshipt, and put into boats, and two spies sent by the Enemy into our Campe were taken and hanged: And wee also sent Souldiers to the Wood, to cut Gabion stuffe, and to bring the rafters of an old Church, to make Ioyces for the platforme, to plant the Ordnance on,

The ninth, the Sergeant Major, Captaine George Flower, was sent by Sea to take view of the Spanish bay neere Donboy, to see whether there were any good landing for the Ordnance there, and found the ground rocky and unfit for draught.

The tenth, Captaine Francis Slingsby (whom I cannot too much commend) in the Hoy with the Demy Cannon, and the three boats laden with two Culverings, and one Demy Culvering, past the poynt underneath the Castle, within one hundred foote of the same, from whence their great shot were made at the Hoy, but all without harme, for his Muskets so plyed the Artillery, the Gunners durst scarcely stand by the same: And the same day wee landed the two Culverings, and the Demy Cannon, and encamped within musket shot, but not within sight of the Castle, by reason of a rising ground aforesaid which shadowed us, although oftentimes their great and small shot came over the Campe, and amongst us into the same.

The Ordnance was not possible to bee drawne from the place where wee landed, unto the place where wee made our Quarter; but there was a small Creeke very neere unto the Castle of Dunboy, which being once entred into, they might ride in safetie, being then covered with a hill betweene them and the Castle, but all the way of their comming thither, was open to the play of the Ordnance of the Castle, untill they were within that Creeke, whose mouth was not aboue fortie yards distant from the Castle: The President commanded the Ordnance to bee shipped into Boats, and to carry them into that Creeke, which by the helpe of darke nights, and still rowing, was effected undiscovered: But the Cannon and Culverings were of that weight, that no Boat there could carry them, and none durst adventure in the Hoy to carry them by night. In this difficulty Captaine Slingsby did desire the President, that hee would commit that to his charge, and giue him but thirtie Shott, and he would (by Gods grace) carry that Ordnance by day light into that Creeke, or sinke by the way, if his Lordship would please to adventure the Ordnance; which was accepted and performed the same day without the losse of any man, though many shot were made from the Castle: for hee had placed all his Shot in the hold upon the Ballast, so that the Decke was breast high aboue them, so that they had onely their Peeces and head and shoulders aboue the decke, to play with their small shot, and he that steered the Hoy, might bee in safetie, (which much concerned the effecting of that service by his safe conducting) hee placed him in the hold, and ordered it so, that with two takles hee might steere the Hoy either to Starboard, or to Port, as hee was willed aboue by the Captaine, who stood aloft by the Misen Maste to order her course as he saw cause : but it was so fine and fresh a gale of winde, that though they sayled aboue halfe a league in play of the Ordnance and small shot of the Castle, yet shee made that way, that they could not aboue twice discharge and lade their Ordnance, before shee attained the Creeke, where she was then in securitie from any further annoyance of the Castle.

The eleventh, wee entrenched our Campe, mounted our Ordnance, and drew them all into the market place ; and the same day about eight of the clock in the evening, the Lord President gaue direction to haue a Demy Culvering drawen within shot of the Castle, which made but two shot that night, and was withdrawn : The Spanish Cannoniers finding the shot, willed the Irish to be of good courage, for that Peece would doe them no harme : Hee also caused two Minnions to bee landed out of the Queenes ship, and placed them upon a poynt of ground on the Northwest side of the Castle, which overlooked it, to annoy the Rebels ; whilst we were about our worke, the same night wee began our approaches: the care whereof the President imposed upon Captaine Francis Slingsby, a discrete and dexterous Gentleman, making him Trench-master, who performed with commendations the charge which was layed upon him, having all the day before employed a great partie of men in the Wood (which was a long mile and halfe distant from the Campe) to fetch more wattle, to make Gabions, and was constrained to send a strong guard with them for their defence: This day the Enemy out of the Wood made a salley upon some of our guards, but were immediatly repulsed.

The twelfth of the same, understanding that the Enemy had fortified the Iland of the Dorsies, and caried thither three Peeces of Spanish Ordnance, and placed a strong Ward of fourtie choice men in the same, reserving that as their last and surest refuge: The Lord President made speciall choice of Captaine Iohn Bostock, and sent him with Owen Osulevan, and Lieutenant Downings (officer to Sir Francis Barkley) and gaue them (as also to Captaine Thomas Fleming, who had command of her Majesties Pinnace) secretly in charge; (that now whilst their Army was occupied in besieging Dunboy, and making their trenches and approaches, and the Enemy secure from any suspition, that wee would giue any attempt else where) that they should presently take her Majesties Pinnace and foure boats, and put into them one hundred and sixtie foote men, and set saile for the Iland of the Dorsies, which charge they affected accordingly, and arrived there with the forces early the next day in the morning, and being on land drew to the North poynt of the Iland, where they found the wals of a ruined Chappell; Captaine Bostocke under the safetie thereof lodged Lieutenant Downings, and a partie of men, and then returned aboard the Queenes Pinnace, to giue direction what hee would haue done, and thence tooke the Boat of the Pinnace and rowed about the Iland, to discover a fit landing place for himselfe, and the rest of his Souldiers, then comming backe to the Pinnace (so soone as the tide served) caused the Pinnace to warpe up neerer the place, and appoynted thirtie Souldiers and a Sergeant to attend her, and sent unto Lieutenant Downings a shore, advising him, that at the very instant that hee should land in the East part of the fort, that hee should giue an attempt on the North side: Then hee divided his men into three Boats, and the Pinnace beating upon the fort with her Ordnance, hee and Lieutenant Downings (at the other two places first agreed upon) assayled the uttermost fort, which after a good defence made, their resolution and valour caried it, and there they possest themselues of three Iron Peeces of the Spanish Ordnance, and forced the Rebels into their second fort, where they enter-tayned a good fight for the space of two howers: But our men being encouraged with their first good fortune, gaue on them so eagerly, as the Enemy amazed rendered themselues, and presently all the weaponed men came forth, and delivered him possession of the fort, which was a place of an exceeding great strength; and in the same, at the yeelding up thereof, was the wife of Owen Osulevan, who since February last had beene held prisoner by Osulevan Beare: There were found within the fort seven barrells of powder, with a small proportion of Lead, and about threescore shot for their great Ordnance, as also a quantity of Wheat, Oyle, and Vinegar: In the Iland there were taken five hundred milch Cowes; of the Rebels foure were killed, two hurt, who with all the rest were brought into the Campe, and after executed: The fort for that it was conceived to bee an unnecessary charge, and unmeete to bee held; the Lord President caused Lieutenant Downings to ruine, and lay it even with the ground.

The same Night the Lord President, the Earle of Thomond, Sir Richard Percy, Sir Charles Willmott, Captaine Francis Slingsby, and Captaine George Kinsmill, with others standing round together in conference, a Musket shott came amongst them from the Castle, and shott Captaine George Kinsmill through the left hand, and brake many of his bones.

The thirteenth about midnight, Tirrell with the Rebells forces came as neere to our Campe as he durst, and gaue vs a hote alarme, powring shott into our Campe, shot through many of our tents and cabbins, which did us little or no hurt, who being resisted from the North side of our Campe, where a little Sconce was the same day rayzed to hold a Guard in, the charge whereof was imposed on Lieutenant Iefferey, and good Seconds sent from us, they ran away. This day Sir Samuell Bagnall arrived at the Campe by Sea, and brought Letters unto the President from the Deputie, commanding him to send all the Forces unto his Lordship; (except those of the old List of Mounster) Hee also brought with him a Letter from Don Iohn de Aguila, which had come by a Merchant of Dublin to the Lord Deputies hands.

The fourteenth and fifteenth, our men were busie making of gabions, and drawing the trenches neerer the Castle, Captaine Francis Slingsby being (as aforesaid) Trenchmaster.

The same day the President, the Earle of Thomond, and Sir Charles Wilmott, taking a guard of Foot with them, rode (for recreation) out of the Campe towards our last camping place, and riding softly by the Sea side, (all three in ranke) having left their Foot behinde them, they espied a Gunner in the Castle traversing of a Peece of Ordnance; This fellow (said the President) will make a shott at us; the word was no sooner spoken, but fire was given: The President knowing that Gunners doe evermore lay before a mooving marke, rayned his Horse, and stood firme; The Earle and Sir Charles started forward, and the Bullet grazed even at their horse heeles, beating some of the earth upon them. The President glad to see them past danger, laughing, sayd, That if they had been as good Mechanicall Cannoniers, as they were Commaunders, they would haue stood firme as hee did. Also this day a whole Culvering was drawne out of the Campe, and certaine shot was made; the Bullets being found, the Gunners liked it not, and began to feare their successe. The day following, the whole Culvering having been formerly withdrawne, certaine shot was made out of the Demy-culvering aforesaid; Vpon sight of the shot they much rejoyced, supposing that our Culvering had received some mischance, and scorned at any offence wee could doe them.

The sixteenth, the Gabions, Trenches, and Plat-formes were finished, and in the night the Demy-Cannon, and the two Culverings were drawn downe, and planted against the Castle, within 140 yards.

The seventeenth, about five of the clocke in the morning, our Battery consisting of one Demy-cannon, two whole Culverings, and one Demy-culvering, began to play, which continued without intermission till towards nine in the forenoone, at which time a Turret annexed to the Castle, on the Southwest part thereof, was beaten downe, in which there was a Falcon of yron placed, upon the top of the Vault, that continually played at our Artillery, which also tumbled downe; with the fall of that Tower, many of the Rebels were buried therein: That being ruinated, the Ordnance played on the west front of the Castle, which by one of the clocke in the afternoone, was also forced downe; Vpon the fall thereof the Enemy sent out a Messenger, offering to surrender the place, if they might haue their liues, and depart with their Armes, and a pledge given for the assurance thereof; Neverthelessse they continued shooting all the while the Messenger was coming betweene them and us, whose Message being delivered, the Lord President turned him over to the Marshall, by whose direction hee was executed; And then the Breach being in our apparence assaultable, the Lord President gaue commandement to haue it entred: Whereupon the Captaines of the Lord Presidents Regiments, which were commanded by Captaine Henrie Skipwith, Lieutenant Collonell thereof, who were to giue the assault, and cast the Dice for the poynt, and who should giue seconds; and it fell to Captaine Doddington's chance, and to be seconded by Sir Anth. Cooke their Lieutenants, Francis Kirton, and Thomas Mewtas, to giue on first, & the rest of the Regiment to second them. The Earle of Thomonds Regiment was to second the Lo. Presidents, and during the assault, the two Regiments of Sir Richard Percy, and Sir Charles Wilmot, were commanded to stand in Armes in the market place, aswell to assure the Campe, as also to answer all other occasions; all things being thus disposed of, Lieutenant Kirton according to the direction, giving on first, in entering the breach was at the push of the Pike, on the top of the same; who although hee received three shot and hurt in the right arme, yet with valour and resolution hee kept the place and made it good, till Lieutenant Mewtas came up to his second, and both they, untill the Lord Presidents colours and the rest did climb up, and placed their Ensignes upon a turret of the barbicon, reinforced with earth and faggots of great thicknesse, unto which was added a large spurre on the South west part of the Castle, of the height of sixteene foote, as in like manner all the Turrets and Curtains of the Barbicon were reinforced, at the top whereof they barricadoed themselves with barrells of earth, and at the first approach there was within it, some of the Enemy with a Faulcon of Iron, whom our men forced to quit the place, and to retreate themselves into a Turret adjoyning upon the South side, which was rampiered with earth some sixteene foote high; flanking the first, it being well manned, and therein a Demy Culvering and a Saker of brasse, loaden with haile shot; the one whereof they presently discharged upon our men that were possest of the South west Turret and Spurre, and going to lade her againe, their Gunner was slaine at his Peece; whereupon they being for the present deprived of the use of those Ordnance, and the place wee possest playing directly into it, they were forced to retreate under the safetie of the East part of the Castle, which was standing, where the Enemy had placed Pikes at the corners of the wals, to receiue them; (the way betweene it, and the Curtaine of the Barbicon, being but sixe or eight foote broad, which passage they so well defended, as we could neither annoy them, nor goe betwixt the two Turrets aforesaid, without disadvantage and apparant danger of great losse, where the shelter of the wall, and the narrownesse of the passage deprived both us and them of all use of shot, and there for the space of an hower and a halfe, it was disputed with great obstinacie on either side; the Enemy still making good defence, and beating with shot and stones upon us, from the staires and likewise from that part of the Castle, which stood from the top of the Vault, and from under the Vault, both with peeces and by their throwing downe stones, Iron bullets and other annoyances, wherewith many of our men were slaine and wounded, and wee oppressing them in all those places by all meanes wee might, and still attempting to get up to the top of the Vault by the ruines of the breach, which was maintayned by the Enemy, as wee were divers times forced downe again: And whilest in each of these places, our men were thus employed, Captaine Slingsbies Sergeant who had gotten to the top of the Vault of the Southwest Tower (by cleering the rubbish thence) found out that the ruines thereof had made a way, that leads to a spike or window that looked into it, and commands that part of the barbicon of the Castle, which the Enemy possest and defended (hee having beene there two howers before hee discovered the same,) by which passage our men making their descent to the Enemy, and gaining ground upon them, they being then in desperate case, some fourtie of them made a salley out of the Castle to the Sea side, whither our men pursuing them on the one side, and they being crost by Captaine Blundell with a small party of men (on the out side of the Barbicon) on the other side wee had the execution of them all there (saving eight which leapt into the Sea to saue themselves by swimming: But the Lord President supposing before that they would in their extremity make such an adventure to escape, had appoynted Captaine Gawen Harvie, and his Lieutenant Thomas Stafford, with three boats to keepe the Sea, who had the killing of them all, other three leapt from the top of the Vault, where our Souldiers killed them, amongst which a notable Rebelle called Mellaghlen Moore, (being the man that layed hands first upon the Earle of Ormond, and plucked him from his horse, when hee was taken prisoner by Owlhny Mac Roury) was slaine.

After this, the courage of the Enemy decreasing with their numbers, and not able, nor daring to make such defence as they did before, we gaue a new Assault to the top of the Vault, where having a difficult ascent, the shott from the foot of the Breach giving good assistance, (after some howers assault and defence, with some losse of both sides) we gayned the top of the Vault, and all the Castle upwards, and placed our Colours upon the height thereof, the whole remaynder of the Ward being three score and seventene men, were constrayned to retyre into the Sellors, into which wee having no descent, but by a straight winding stony stayre, they defended the same against us, and thereupon upon promise of their liues, they offered to come foorth, but not to stand to mercy. Notwithstanding immediately after, a Fryer borne in Yoghall, called Dominicke Collins, who had been brought up in the Warres of Fraunce, and there under the League had beene a Commaunder of Horse in Britany, (by them called Captaine Le Branch) came foorth, and rendered himselfe, the Sunne being by this time set, and strong guards being left upon the Rebels remayning in the Celler, the Regiments withdrawen to the Campe.

The eighteenth in the morning, three and twentie more likewise rendered themselves simply to Captaine Blundell, who the night before had the guard, and after their Cannoniers being two Spaniards, and an Italian (for the rest were slaine) likewise yeelded themselves: Then Ma<sup>r</sup> Goghegan chiefe Commaunder of the place, being mortally wounded with divers shott in his body, the rest made choise of one Thomas Taylor, an English mans Sonne (the dearest and inwardest man with Tirrell, and married to his Neece) to be their Chiefe, who having nine barrells of powder, drew himselfe and hit into the Vault, and there sate downe by it, with a light match in his hand, vowing and protesting to set it on fire, and blow up the Castle, himselfe, and all the rest, except they might haue promise of life, which being by the Lord President refused; (for the safetie of our men) his Lordship gaue direction for a new battery upon the Vault, intending to bury them in the ruines thereof, and after a few times discharged, and the bullets entering amongst them into the Celler, the rest that were with Taylor, partly by intercession, but chiefly by compulsion, (threatening to deliver him up if hee were obstinate;) about ten of the clock in the morning of the same day, constrained him to render simply, who with eight and fortie more being ready to come forth; and Sir George Thornton, the Sergeant Major, Captaine Roger Harvie, Captaine Power, and others entering the Vault to receiue them, Captaine Power found the said Richard Mac Goghegan lying there mortally wounded (as before) and perceiving Taylor and the rest ready to render themselves, raised himselfe from the ground, snatching a light Candle, and staggering therewith to a barrell of powder (which for that purpose was unheaded) offering to cast it into the same, Captaine Power tooke him, and held him in his armes, with intent to make him prisoner, untill he was by our men (who perceived his intent) instantly killed, and then Taylor and the rest were brought prisoners to the Campe.

The same day fiftie eight were executed in th Market place, but the Fryer Taylor, and one Tirlagh Roe Mac Swiny, a follower unto Sir Tirlagh O Brian, and twelue more of Tirrells chiefe men, the Lord President reserved aliue, to trie whether he could draw them to doe some more acceptable service the their lives were worth: The whole number of the Ward consisted of one hundred and fortie three selected fighting men, being the best choice of all their Forces, of the which no one man escaped, but were either slaine, executed, or buried in the ruines, and so obstinate and resolved a defence had not bin seene within this kingdome. On our part we lost in the place Thomas Smith, Captaine, Francis Slingsbies Lieutenant, and some others; and many of our men were burnt with Powder and Fire-works, which the enemie cast amongst them as they were in fight: Men of note hurt, Captaine Dodington shot with two Bullets in the body, but not mortall, his Lieutenant, Francis Kirton shot in the arme and thigh, divers Sergeants, and sixtie two Souldiers maimed and wounded, of which some are dead since, and others like to follow. And amongst the rest Sir Anthony Cooke, Sir Iarret Harvie, Captaine Skipwith, and Captaine Roger Harvie, received severall bruises with stones and Iron bullets flung upon them, but being well armed, they received no great hurt. In the Castle wee gayned ten Peeces of Ordnance, whereof fower were brasse, two of them being broken by our battery, and an other Peece of brasse was likewise broken by our Ordnance, before any part of the Castle fell, which the Prisoners say is so deeply buried in the ruines, as the search of the metall is not worth the labour; all the Carredges were by the fall of the Castle and by our Artillery so broken, as no one of them were left serviceable: Moreover there was of powder nine barrells, some great shot, but their whole store by reason of the ruines, wee could not well find out: There was also in the Castle some quantities of Wine, Vinegar, Oyle, Corne, Beefe and Hides, which the Souldiers made pillage of.

---

CHAPTER IX.

Tirrells proffers for the redeeming of his men. Our Ordnance (with those which were gayned there) shipped. The services propounded to Tirrell hee refuseth, and the reasons of his refusall. The Castle of Donboy blowen up with powder. Tirrells men which were respited executed. The Army shipped, and transported into the great Iland. The Downings taken. Leam-con Castle taken. The Castle of Lettartinlesse taken and burnt. The Lord President returned to Corke. The Companies sent for by the Lord Deputie delivered over to Sir Samuel Bagnall. The confidence the Irish had of supplies from Spaine, made them obstinate.

THE nineteenth proffer was made by the traytor Terrill, to doe some acceptable service that might redeeme the liues of his men, so their execution might bee respited, which was for that time forborne: And the same day all our Ordnance, and those Spanish Peeces that we gayned at Dunboy, were put aboard and shipped, as also our boats, sent to the Iland of the Dorsies, to fetch Lieutenant Downings, our men, and the Ordnance, from thence, which were in number twelue, viz. Demy-culvering one, Sacres fower, Minnions fieve, Faulcons two.

The twentieth Tirrell (understanding (as is sayd) that his mens lives were respited) sent his trusty servant Laghlin Odallye to the Lord President, to signifie unto him, that he would performe any service, that should be within his power, to purchase the lives and liberties of his followers: Answer was returned him, and a stratagem propounded, in the effecting thereof, he should obtaine pardon and libertie for himselfe and his Dependants, but the reply which he made thereunto was, that he would ransome the Prisoners with money, if that might be accepted; but to be false to the King of Spaine (whom he termed his Master) or to betray the Catholicke cause, hee would never: upon which answer his twelve Men (before respited) two dayes after were executed. The cause wherefore he so suddainly swarved from his first promise of service, was the hopes which he received by Owen Mac Egan the Popes Bishop of Rosse, lately arrived at Ardea, in the Bay (as aforesaid) of Clanmarrah. The President therefore perceiving that they conceived great hope of Spaniards, advised the day following with the chiefes of the Army, what course was best to bee taken with the Castle of Dunboy halfe ruined, who were all of opinion, that a Garrison which should be left there could not defend themselves, or give any great annoyance to the Spaniard, if they should fortune to land there; for being so remote from all Seconds and succours, were unavoidably left to ruine: And besides (though the Spaniards came not) the service that they could doe in that Countrey, would not countervaile Her Majesties charge in maintayning them: Therefore they resolved to bestow the Powder which was recovered in the Castle to blow up the same; committed to the charge of Captaine Slingsbie.

The two and twentyeth, the Castle of Dunboy was accordingly blowne up with Powder, the out-Workes and Fortifications utterly destroyed, and the same day Lieutenant Downings, with our men and Boates returned from the Dorses to the Campe, as also twelve of Terrills chiefe men, formerly spoken of, were executed.

But Taylor, and Dominicke Collins the Fryer, were carried Prisoners to Corke, where being found, by due prooffe, that Taylor was one of the principall murderers of his Captaine George Bingham at Sligo, besides an infinite number of other foule and traytorly acts, he was shortly after without the City of Corke (not farre from the North Gate) hanged in chaines; and the Fryer, in whom no penitence appeared for his detestable treasons, nor yet would endeavour to merite his life, either by discovering the Rebells intentions, (which was in his power) or by doing of some service that might deserve favour, was hanged at Youghall, the Towne wherein he was borne.

The same day also all our carriage and baggage layed aboard, at the enterance into our boats, because wee were not able to carie the the Cowes, Horses, and Mares which wee had taken, being at least sixe or seven hundred heads, the President commanded they should bee killed, which was performed.

The three and twentieth wee shipped our whole Army backe from Dunboy, who all arrived that day in the great Strand, and from thence the Earl of Thomond, and Sir Charles Wilmot, and both their Regiments were transported by shipping to Killaminog, being the place wee encamped in (as wee went) in Mainterbaie.

The same day the Lord President was advertised by Lieutenant Saunders, that hee had taken a great boat belonging to Teg Mac Connor Odriscall, brother to Connor Oge Odriscall, of the Downings, wherein there was slaine Dary Mac Connor his brother, and three more of his best men, and that two dayes after, hee tooke the strong place of the Downings, which is seated upon a high rock in the Sea, disjoyned from the land, so as their is no comming unto it, but over a little draw bridge of wood, resembling the seat of Dunluce in Vlster.

The foure and twentieth the Lord President, and Sir Richard Percy with their Regiments were imbarqued, and they arrived in the evening at the Iland of Whiddy, where wee had no meanes for want of boats to unship our men, and the night approaching were enforced to leaue our two Regiments a shipboard, and the Lord President lay that night in the Iland.

The fiue and twentieth, the Earle and Sir Charles with their Regiments marched by land from Killaminog to the old camping place at Carew Castle, whither when the boats came to us, wee unshipt the remayned of the Army, and there wee encamped all that night.

The sixe and twentieth, the Companies required by the Lord Deputie were assigned, and commanded to prepare themselues and attend Sir Samuell Bagnall till hee brought them to his Lordship: and the same day the Castle of Leam-con neere Crooke-haven which the rebels warded, was recovered from them, by an officer and party of men, of Captaine Roger Harvies Company.

The seven and twentieth, the Earle of Thomond, and Sir George Thornton were imbarqued in the Queenes Pinnace, to goe for England, and the Army dislodged from Carew Castle, and marched to a place in the Mountaine called Becarien Eltagh, where wee encamped that night.

The eight and twentieth the Lord President departed thence, taking the Captaines and Officers of those companies that were to goe into Vlster, along with him, that they might perclose their accounts, and dispatch all things at Corke, against their Companies should come thither, and by the way the Castle of Lettartinlesse, belonging to Conogher Sir Finnin Odriscals Sonne, where the Enemy had a ward of seventeene men; after some defence made and shot discharged, when they saw the Army drawe before the Castle, they sued for their liewes, which granted them they yeelded it up; and after the Souldiers had made pillage of the goods, wee burned and destroyed the Castle, and stone hall, and rod thence to Tymolagg, leaving the Army behind us that night in Rosse.

The nine and twentieth the Lord President went to Kinsale, and tooke view of the fortifications at Castle-Parke, and gaue order and direction for the better forwarding and ending of the workes there, and thence rode that night to Corke, appoynting the Companies that were to depart the Province, to march the shortest way, and to lodgeat Downtanyer, Donnell Mac Cartie Reughes Castle, and the rest to come to Kinsale.

The thirtieth, those Companies which were to goe with Sir Samuell Bagnall came to Corke, and had their supplies delivered them, with order for their present departure.

The first of Iuly the Captaines that were to goe along with Sir Samuel Bagnall, spent the day in staying for their sicke men, which were comming after, and preparing themselues for their journey; and the day following they arose all from Corke, and marched thitherwards.

The President in his returne from Dunboy (as is said) passing through Carberry where many were still in action, not doubting but now they would haue submitted themselues, seeing their supposed impregnable Cittadell was destroyed, and Dermond Moyle Mac Cartie their Ante-signane slaine, hee found it much otherwise, for those which before offered to doe service for their pardons stood aloofe, and those which before were distracted, and prepared to fly either to Spaine or Vlster, had received new life, and made fast combinations to hold out, till their expected aids from Spaine should arriue; yea and some also who before were subjects, and forward to giue the best intelligence, did now palpably bewray both by their countenance, their words, and their actions, that their hearts were otherwise affected: All which alteration did arise from the arrivall of Owen Mac Eggan so often mentioned, who not onely bestowed the Spanish treasure, which hee brought with him bounfifully amongst them, but put them in hope of more, with full assurance of a fresh Army to come to their succours; his credit, the feeling of a few duckets, and his perswasions so prevailed, as they verily believed, that they should within a few moneths bee so reinforced with Spanish aids, as to bee enabled to driue the English out of Ireland.

---

CHAP. X.

Supplyes of a thousand Foote sent out of England for Mounster. Sir Charles Wilmot with his Regiment sent into Kerry. Iames Archer and Connor Odriscall fled into Spaine. Sir Owen Mac Carties sonnes revolt. Divers Castles taken in Carbery by the Garrisons there. The description of Beare-haven. The description of Baltimore-haven. The description of Castle-haven. The Spanish hostages licensed to depart. A Letter from the Lord President to Don Iuan de Aguila.

THE President being come to Corke, he found Sir Edward Wingfield with a thousand supplyes lately come forth of England, all which were disposed in the weake Companies that came from Dunboy; in the taking whereof, and the marching thither with the returne, ten weekes were consumed, many men lost by the way, and by sicknesse very much weakned: Notwithstanding so many of the Army, as were aboue the old List of Mounster were presently sent to the Lord Deputie by Sir Samuell Bagnall, who came for them (as aforesaid) whilst the President was at the siege of Dunboy; Sir Charles Wilmot with his Regiment was sent againe into Kerry (which Countrey having therein great store of Corne and Cattle, would otherwise haue beene left open to the Rebels reliefe) with direction to remoue all the Inhabitants with their goods and cattle, over the Mountaine into the small county of Limerick, and such Corne as could not be presently reaped and conuaied (as aforesaid) hee was commanded to burne and spoyle the same; the reason whereof was, for that the President having occasion of service neere the heart of the Countrey, as you shall hereafter heare; and also receiving daily intelligence of a great Army provided in Spaine, did not thinke it safe nor convenient, to employ so great a part of his forces in places so remote, considering that good and strong garrisons were needful in the chiefe Cities of the Province, which otherwise would bee open to the Enemy that should attempt them. But in effecting hereof, the Governour found great difficulty; for the harvest (by reason of that winterlike summer) was very backward, and (besides the Irish) the Bishop of Kerry, and certaine English families, which had of late planted themselues there (whose whole estate consisted in that Summers profit) importunately solicited some longer stay: The President being acquainted herewith, unwilling to giue any just occasion of grievance to the Irish, and losse to the English, consented to tollerate their stay for the present, requiring the Governour (in the meane while) to put in execution such services upon the Rebels, as occasion might minister: The fifth of Iuly,

James Archer the Iesuit, and Conner Odriscall, the eldest Sonne of Sir Finnin Odriscall, having gotten a small Barke fled into Spaine.

The two Captaine Harvies were left at their old Garrisons in Carberie, Captaine Roger at Baltimore, the Lord Presidents Horse there, Captaine Gawin at Castlehaven, the Lord Barries Company at Littertonlesse, the Treasurers Company at the Abbey of Strory, Captaine Stafford at Old Court, Captaine Slingsby at the Church of Shadone, where they wasted and foraged the Countrey, as in a small time it was not able to giue the Rebels any reliefe, having spoiled and brought into their garisons the most part of their corne being newly reaped; from whom the President was certified that the Carties of that Countrey did dayly relapse, insomuch as Donnah Moyle Mac Cartie, and Finnie his Brother, with their followers, (who attended the President at the Siege of Dunboy) had received three hundred pounds Impresse, from Owen Mac Eggan, (commonly called the Apostolicall Vicar) in the name of the King of Spaine: They I say upon the tenth of Iuly 1602 joyned with the Rebels; but in the end they could not greatly vaunt of their winnings, for Captaine Roger Harvy got severall Draughts upon them, whereby hee tooke their preyes, and had the killing of many of their men; besides hee tooke from them diverse Castles strongly seated, neere unto the Sea, where Ships might safely ride, and fit places for an Enemy to hold, as namely, the Castles of Donmanies, Leam-con; Donnegall, the Downings, Rancoliskey, and Cape Cleere, and in a word, all that stood upon the Sea coast, betweene Dunboy and Castlehaven, except onely the Castles of Kilcoe and Cloghan.

But because we have had often occasions in this relation to speake of the three famous Harbours of Beerehaven, Baltemore, and Castlehaven, it seemes to mee necessary in this place to speake something more particularly thereof, according to an exact view taken by the Lord President, and by him remited to the Lords of Her Majesties Privy Counsell. First therefore, the Haven of Beere is situated twelve Miles to the Northward of that Promontory, or fore-land (so well knowne by the name) of Myssenhead, or Caronhead: That which wee properly call Beerehaven, is the Sea which entreth betweene the great Iland (before mentioned) and the Maine, or Countrey called Beere, or Osulleavans Countrey: At the entrance of the Harbour, it is not above a Musket shot over, I meane from the Castle of Dunboy to the great Iland, being entred; the Tydes are slack, good Anchorage, and convenient places to bring ships on ground, smooth water, five fadomes deepe at low water marke; towards the North ende it groweth much larger, at the least a league over, and of capacitie sufficient to contain all the Ships of Europe.

The great Iland and the Maine as aforesaid makes the Haven, which Iland is seven miles in length, at the South end whereof it joyneth with the Bay of Bantry: When Donboy was unruined, it commaunded this spacious and goodly Haven, which affords no small profit to Osulevan Beare, whilest his Castle was standing: for the coast yeelds such abundance of Sea-fish, as few places in Christendome doe the like, and many Ships, whereunto at the season of the yeare, (I meane at the fishing time) there was such a resort of Fishermen of all Nations, as Communibus Annis, (although the duties which they payed unto Osulevan was very little) yet at the least it was worth unto him five hundred pounds yearley

The second of these Harbours nominated, is Baltimore, called by the Spaniards Valentimore, which is likewise caused by an Island called Innisherkin, two leagues to the Eastward of Cape-cleere, the Havens mouth (at the south end of the Iland aforesaid) ten fathome at low water, but exceeding narrow, by reason of a great Rock that lyeth in the same (always aboue the water) which being within halfe Calliver shot of the better shoare, giveth good opportunity to secure the port; after you are entered, there is a poole about halfe a league over, where infinit numbers of ships may ride, having small tides, deepe water, and a good place to Carene ships; at the other end of this Iland (with good pilotage) a ship of two hundred Tunne by day may safely come in, but by reason of many suncke Rocks, that lye in this entrance, it is not possible for the best Pilot in the world (by night) to assure his entrance. The President for the safetie thereof, thought it meete to erect Blockhouses there, which undoubtedly hee would haue done, if he had continued any long time in Mounster, being so exceeding dangerous to fall into the hands of a powerfull Enemy, as it would bee a worke of much difficulty (after it were once fortified) to displant him, besides an Enemy there seated would command the best part of Carbery, the soile whereof is good, whereby hee might furnish himselfe with victuals at easie rates.

The last, and indeed the least of these three havens, is Castlehaven, by the Irish called Glanbarraghan, renowned for that memorable Sea fight (lately acted there) by Sir Richard Lewson against Pedro de Zubiaur (commonly called Suryago) the Spanish Admirall: the pasage into the Harbour is so narrow, that a ship of great burden, especially in a storme, cannot safely enter, and being entered, there is no great space for any number of ships to ride in; but for all other commodities like to the Havens before mentioned, for there is eight faddomes at low water marke, the Castle aptly commands every part of the Harbour, but the grounds round about it, so commands the Castle, as it can by no reasonable charge bee made teneable against the Cannon: but to proceed.

When the composition was made with Don Iohn de Aguila, for the rendering of Kinsale, among other Articles it was agreed, that the Spanyards should be shipped away in English or Irish Bottomes, and for the safe returne of the Ships into Ireland, there was three Spanish Captaines (as is formerly declared) left in Corke as Hostages: The Spanyards being all safely arrived at the Groyne, and the Shippes returned, the Lord President according to the Composition, set the Pledges at libertie, and having provided a Barque for their transportation, he wrote unto Don John de Aguila, which letter (Englished) was as followeth.

A Letter from the Lord President to Don Iuan de Aguila.

*AC*cording to the agreements made at Kinsale, betweene the Lord Deputie and your Lordship, these two Captaines, Pedro Suaco, and Diego Gonzales Sigler, (which remained in Corke Pledges for the securitie of the Ships, and the Subjects of the Queene my Mistresse, which transported the Spanyards to the Groyne, are now in this passage in a Ship called the Marie of Corke) returned into Spaine: The third Pledge Don Pedro Morijon, went with the Lord Deputie to the Citie of Dublin, from whence (as I understand) hee is departed into his owne Countrey. Now the agreements which were made betweene the Lord Deputie and your Lordship is on either part fully accomplished; your Lordships

Letter of the second of Aprill I haue received, but the Wine and Fruits came not to my hands: Nevertheless I acknowledge my selfe much obliged, and render your Lordship humble thanks for your favours, and especially in that I am retained in your memorie: the occasion I did not receiue them, was my being at that time at the siege of the Castle of Beerehaven, which I thanke God is taken, as also many others possest and held by the Rebels, and the Defendants of them chastised, as appertaineth to Traitors: Your Lordships Present unto mee was delivered by the Messenger to the Lord Deputie, hee conceiving that it had beene directed to his Lordship, whereof I am extreame glad, and am as well satisfied with it, as if it had come to my owne hands, for the loue I beare unto his Lordship, is no lesse then unto my selfe: I am much grieved, (and at nothing more) then to see that this Countrey produces not any thing worthy to bee presented to your Lordship, that I might in some proportion manifest in what esteeme I holde the favour of a man of your qualitie, Honour, and Merit. If Ireland may yeeld any thing which may bee to your Lordships liking, you may bee assured that your Lordship hath power (at your pleasure) to commaund both it and mee: So being ready to doe your Lordship all the possible service I may, the differences betweene our Soveraignes reserved, in the which both your Lordship and all the world shall evermore finde mee to bee a true

Englishman, and a faithfull servant to my Queene and Mistresse: I recommend your Lordship to God, beseeching him to preserue you. Corke the thirteenth of July, 1602.

Muy Illustre Sennior.

Beso las Manos de V. S.
Su Servidor,

GEORGE CAREW.

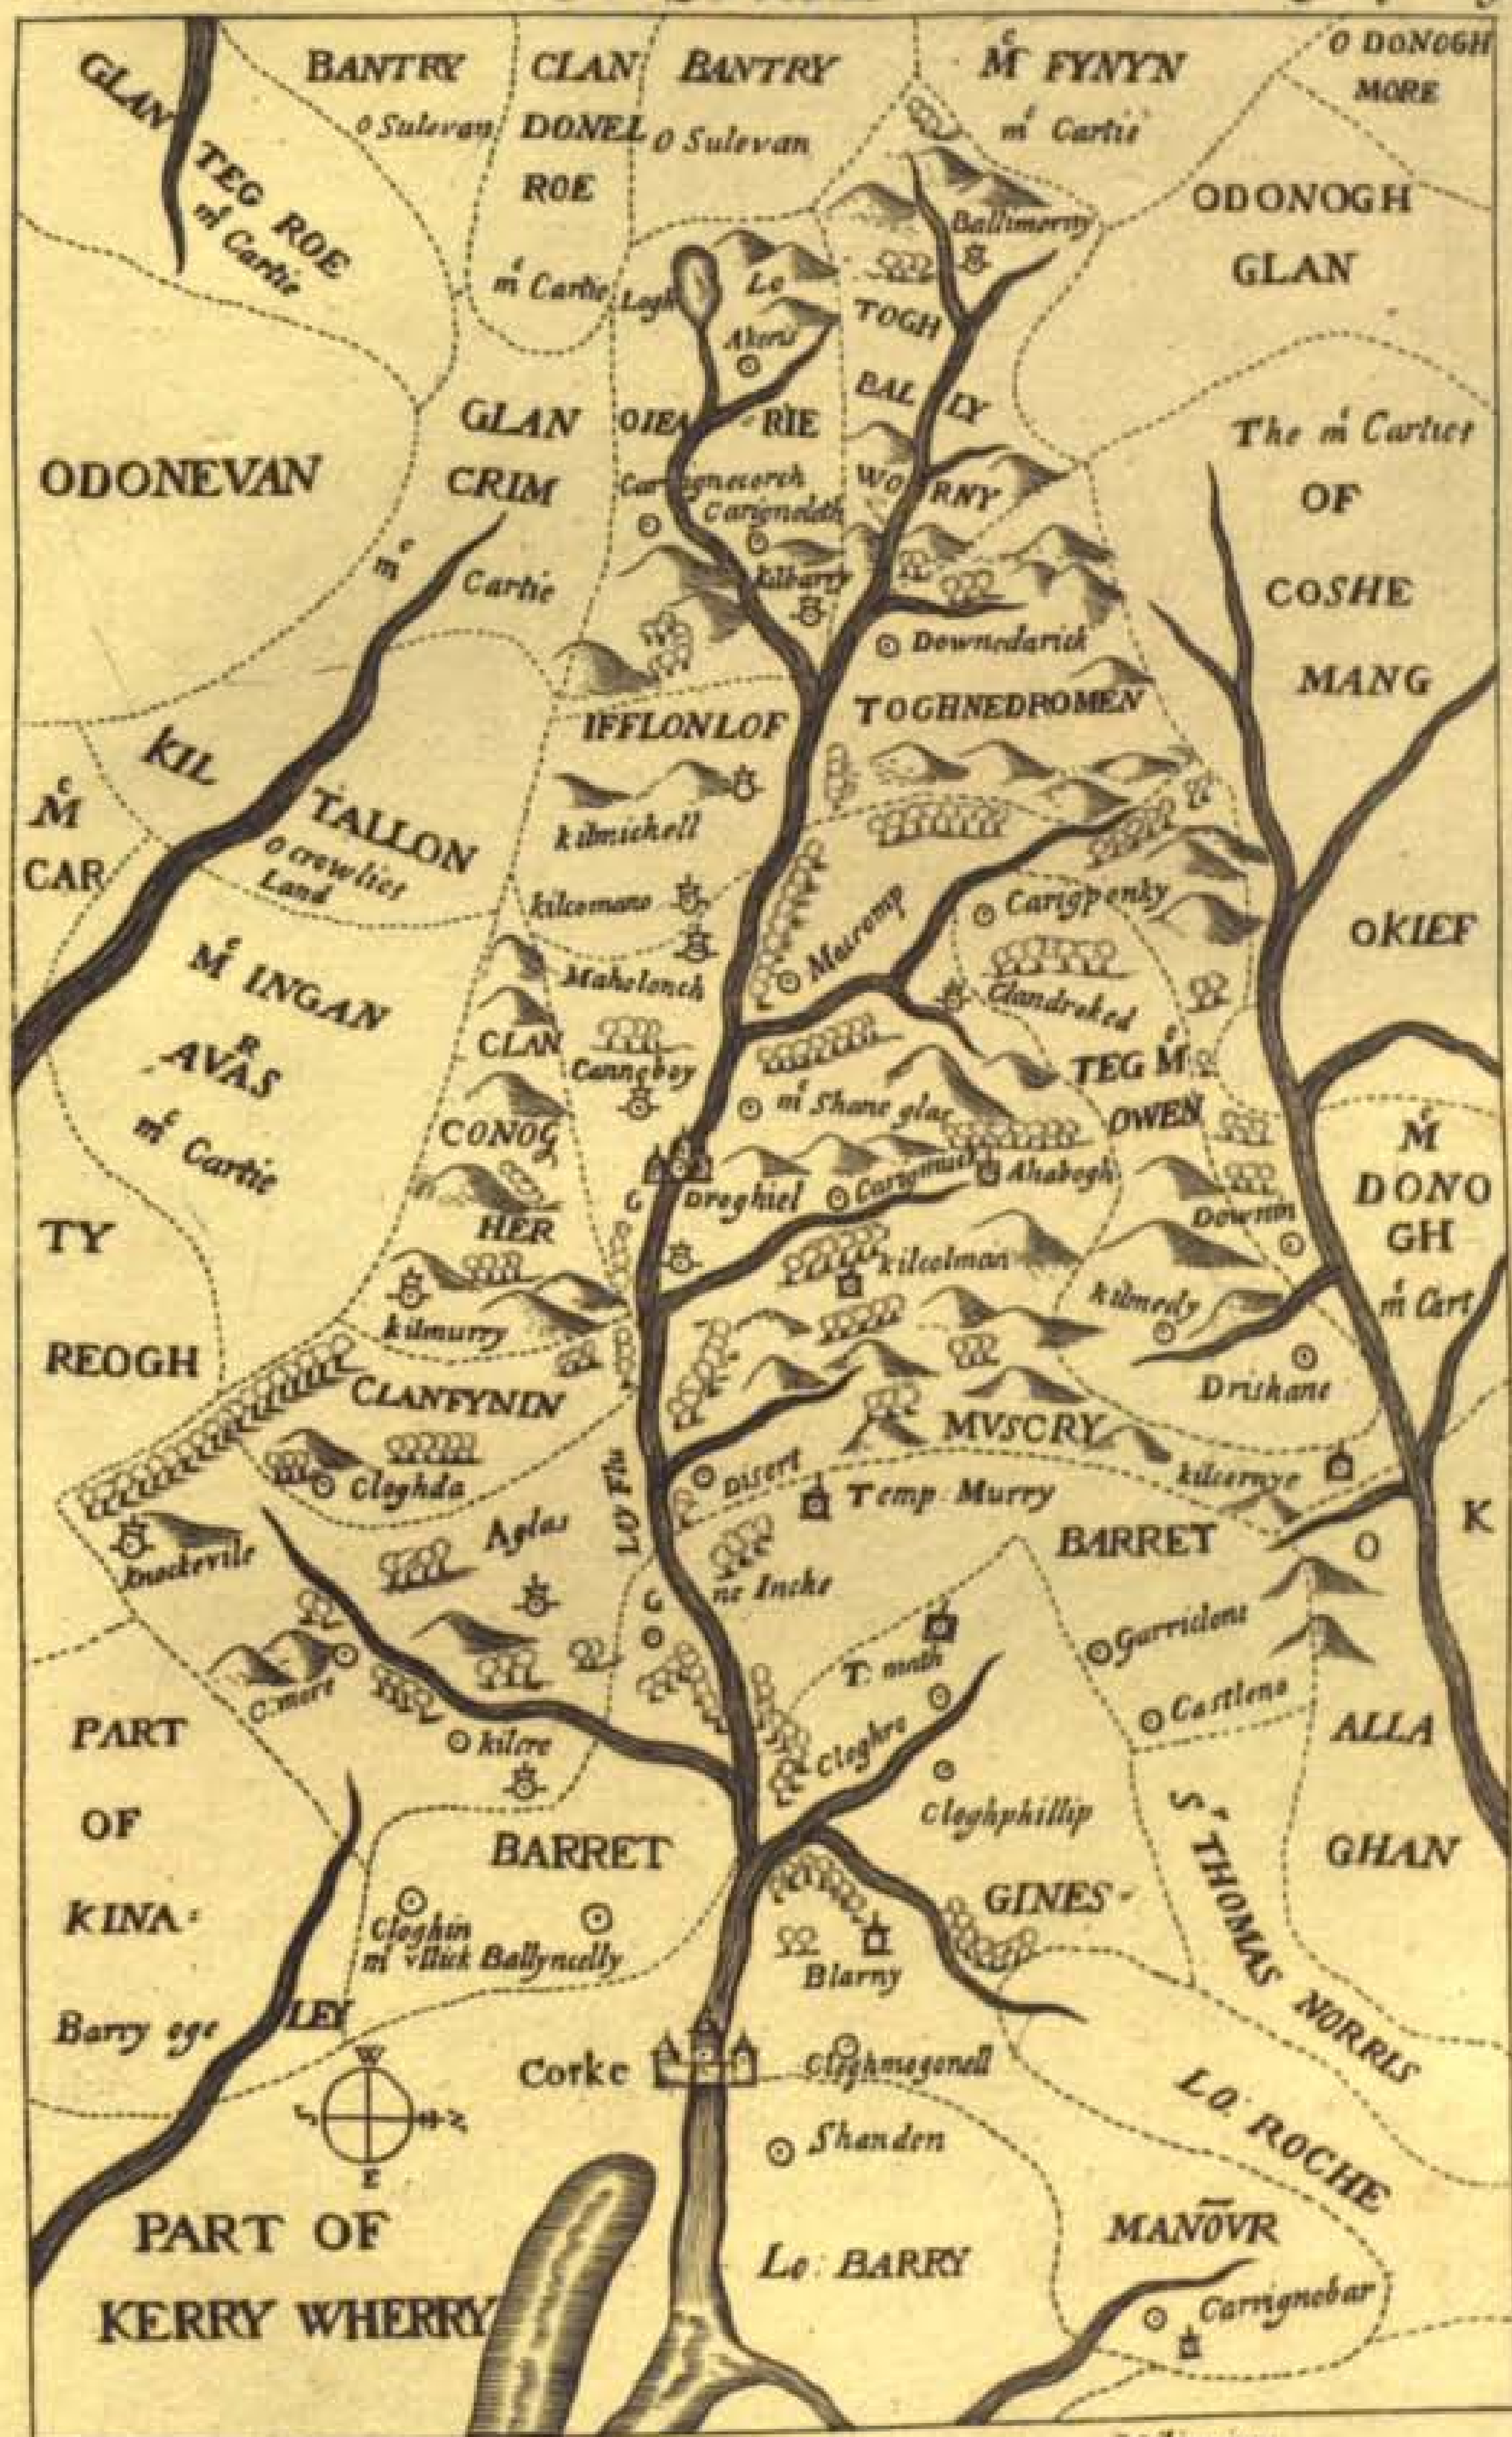

---

CHAPTER XI.

The taking of the Castle of Dunboy was the cause that the Army prepared in Spaine for Ireland was stayed. Two thousand supplyes of foote were sent out of England for Mounster. Mr Sir Thomas his practise to deceiue the Lord President, but failed. A false rumour of a Spanish fleete on the Coast of Mounster. Sir Samuell Bagnall with his Regiment commanded to stay in Mounster.

THE President daily received advertisement, aswell by some of the Countrey that had conference with Owen Mac Eggan, as also by Merchants and their Agents out of Spaine, which did all agree in one, that succours being prepared and ready to embarque for Ireland; (understanding the losse which the Rebels had received in Beere, and the Castle of Dunboy rased, where they purposed to secure their landing) new directions were brought from the Court of Spaine to the Earle of Carracena, Governour of the Groyne, to stay their proceedings in the voyage, till the Kings pleasure were farther knowen, but yet the Army was not dissolved: the examinations sent by the Lord President into England to the Lords, were found to agree with the intelligence which was sent to her Majestie out of Spaine; wherefore to prevent what danger hereby might ensue, it pleased her Majestie to take present order, that the fleete of ships, some her owne, and some Merchants, that had beene upon the Coast of Spaine (the most part of all the Summer) should be revictualled, and lye off and on, in the height of Cape-finister, till towards Michaelmas; that if they proceeded in the intended invasion, either they might fight with them at Sea, or at least follow them to such Harbours of Ireland, where they should arriue, and there distresse them: but the happy successe in the siege of Dunboy altered the Spanish Councels, for now they had no place in Ireland that held for them: Neverthelesse the coming of new forces from Spaine for Ireland, being still doubted, there was sent from England two thousand foote for the supplying of the List. By this time Sir Charles Wilmot, as hee was directed, was come out of Kerry, and all the Subjects with their goods and Cattle, were drawn on this side the Mountaine of Slewlogher, whereby the Bonnoghs that had lived these five moneths, principally upon Osulevan Beare, (and by that meanes eaten him up) began to consult about leaving of the Province, there being no man now in action that was able; (for the Carties in Carbery had beene so much wasted and impoverished by the two Harvies) as though their hearts were good, yet their meanes failed them to uphold a warre, or any long time to hold them together: Therefore Iohn of Desmond, brother to the Sугan Earle, (prisoner in the Tower of London) laboured Terrill very instantly, to take Bonnaght of them in Connilogh, and for that purpose had inveighed Morris fits Thomas, called the Lord of the Clenlis to deliver unto him the strong Castle of Glancoyne, the custodie whereof (to saue her Majesties charge) had beene committed to him the yeare before, and because no suspition might be conceived of the said Iohn fits Thomas practise, hee now became a sutor by Iames Walsh (who had beene his brothers Secretary) for a protection, desiring, as hee pretended, to become a Subject upon these conditions: First, if his brother Iames (the titular Earle) might bee set at libertie, hee would bee content to become a Pledge for him, either in the Castle of Dublin, or else where the State should appoynt; which being refused and rejected, hee offered to doe service, so that hee might haue his pardon, and some meanes to releue him in the future: But as the President would not bee drawn to accept any of these conditions; so it was thought that hee would haue flyen backe if they had been accepted: But all this Negotiation was but to colour his practise laid for Glancoyne, which Castle and the Fastnesse neere adjoyning would haue commaunded a great part of that Countrey. But all these Inglings were discovered by one V. B. whom the President without suspicion maintained amongst them: Wherefore hee sent Philip Northcot, the Sherife of the Countie of Limericke, with private Instructions, to surprise both Maurice fits Thomas, and the sayd Castle, but either to take both (at one instant) or to meddle with neither. The Sherife watching many opportunities, and not speeding of his purpose; the President to prevent future danger, committed the custodie of the said Castle to Sir Francis Barkely, and so disappointed the Rebels of that hope.

Scala

Miliarium

About the latter end of this moneth of August, a rumour was generally divulged through the Province, that the Spanyards were upon the coast, and that certaine Ships were discovered from the olde Head of Kinsale, and presently after that foure and twentie sayle were arrived at Bearhauen, and hereupon you might see Horsemen galloping this way, and that way, to and fro, with such signes of gladnes & apparent joy, as though the day of their deliverance were neere at hand; but as it fell out, this was but a false allarme, the Ships that were descryed being a Fleet of Easterlings bound to the Southward. The President heereby discerning with what assured hopes they apprehended their comming, and with what glad hearts they should be welcome, (being come) he became an earnest & humble suitor to the Lord Deputie: That Sir Samuel Bagnals Regiment lately called out of Mounster, (by his Lordships Command) might with his favour bee returned againe. The Lord Deputie taking an honourable care of that Province, finding by his owne intelligence, that the Spanyards were purposed to make their discent, either in Mounster, or in the parts of Connaght, (not far dis-joynd) condescended unto the Presidents request, whereupon the said Colonell with his Regiment were directed to Limrick, there to remaine in Garison.

During the siege of Kinsale, there was a young Gentleman of the Carties, called Teg Mac Cormock, sonne to that well deserving Gentleman, Sir Cormock Mac Teg, who being of the Presidents Troope of Horse, through the inticements of the Rebels, and promises of the Spanyards, was induced to combine with the Enemie, and stealing away his Horse and Hackney, entred into action ; But the successe of his Confederates not prooving so fortunate (as they hoped) hee grew weary of the Rebellion, and made himselfe a Suitor to the President to be received to mercy, as may appeare by his Letter here ensuing.

CHAP. XII.

A Letter from Teg Mac Cormock Cartie to the Lord President, intreating the remission of his offences. Cormock Mac Dermond Cartie accused of sundry treasons. Cormock Mac Dermond committed. The Castle of Blarny in the custody of Captaine Taffie. The Castle and Abbey of Killcrey rendred to the Lord President. Mocrumpe besieged. Cormocks Wife and Children imprisoned. Cormock Mac Dermond plotted his escape.

A Letter from Teg Mac Cormock Cartie to the Lord President, intreating the remission of his Offences.

Right Honourable, my dutie most humbly remembered ; Having long forborne, though thereby disquieted in mind, and ashamed of my selfe to send unto your Honour : Yet presuming upon her Majesties mercie and your favour, I haue made bold to become a Petitioner to your Honour, that it may please you to admit me thereunto, and to forgive and forget my faults, considering they were not malicious, but youthfull, and not of pretence to hurt her Majestie or her Subjects, but in hope to recover against my Cosen Cormock Mac Dermody, some meanes to maintaine my decayed estate, and still likely to be suppressed by his greatnesse, who will by no meanes giue me a portion of Land to liue upon, as was promised upon the delivery up of Kilcrey by your Honour, wherein as of the rest, I doe againe humbly beseech your favour, and so as with a repentant and penitent transgressor of the Lawes, I doe humbly submit my selfe to her Majesties grace, and will endeavour my selfe hereafter by my good deeds and services, to wipe out the memory of my former follies: Expecting your favourable Answer, I most humbly take my leaue. From Carrigifuky this ninth of Iune, 1602.

Your Honours most humble to commaund,

Teg Mac Cormock Cartie.

But the President had conceived such a deepe displeasure (and not undeserved) against him, as hee protested against all favour to be extended towards him, except hee did merite and deserue the same by some signall service. This young man finding himselfe exposed to a desperate fortune, and abandoned to ruine, unlesse hee could worke his reconciliation; and besides bearing no goodwill to his cosen Cormuck Mac Dermond the Lord of Muskerry, for some controversie about title of Lands betweene them, desired a safe conduct to come to the President, promising to reveale unto him, such matters of importance, as might happily make satisfaction for his former offences; his motion was hearkned unto, and a protection granted for three dayes, within which time hee presented himselfe before his Lordship, and delivered to him in private, that hee was able to avouch and proue divers capitall matters of notorious treasons, in his kinsman

Cormock Mac Dermond: First that hee had underhand traffique with Don Iohn de Aguila, Letters ordinarily passing betweene him and the said Cormock, and in particular, hee averred, that hee saw Don Iohn himselfe to deliver unto Iames Galde Butler, (Cormocks wiues brother) two Letters, the one from the King, and the other from the Church; but from what particular Church-man hee could not certainly affirme, but by all probability it should seeme to bee from the Pope; these two Letters were by him sent, to bee delivered to Cormock aforesaid, together with his owne commendations in these words: Commend me to your brother in law Cormock, and deliver him these two Letters, the one from the King, and the other from the Church, which were the same night delivered: Moreover hee was deposed (by vertue of which oath he affirmed) that upon his knowledge, Cormock had secret conference with Owen Mac Eggan, since his last arrivall out of Spaine, and that from him hee had received eight hundred duckets impresse, and thereupon had accorded to yeeld into the Spaniards hands (immediatly upon their landing) his strong Castle of the Blarny, situate within two miles of Corke, which deposition was afterwards confirmed by the testimony and evidence of sundry other credible personages: these informations concurring with the examinations of Dermond Mac Cartie, by the Spaniards called Don Dermutio (executed at Corke, of whom before you haue heard) and also manyfold proofes, existing of his often combination with Tyrone, Odonnell, Florence Mac Cartie, and James fits Thomas, with other triviall treasons, ordinary amongst these Provincials: The President with the advice of the Provinciall Councell, thought it a matter of very dangerous consequence, to permit such grosse and palpable treasons to escape unpunished, the tolleration whereof might breed such intollerable boldnesse in these people, that her Majesties politicke government, and authority temporall, would grow no lesse contemptible then the Ecclesiasticke; against the which the best seeming Subjects were refractory; to prevent therefore such future mischief as might ensue by longer protraction, it was thought fit, that during the time of these Sessions (then in hand) the said Cormocke should bee apprehended, and committed to safe custody, untill such time as the originall and depth of his offences (being found out) hee might bee brought to his triall, according to due course in Law: the day and time therefore being appoynted for his commitment, which was about the eighteenth of August, the President the same morning (to avoyd all suspition) tooke a journey to Kinsale, to view the fortifications in Castle ny Parke, leaving behind him double directions concerning Cormock; first for his Castle of Blarney, which is one of the largest and strongest Castles within the Province of Mounster, for it is fower piles joyned in one, seated upon a maine Rock, so as it is free from myning, the wall eightene foote thicke, and well flancked, at each corner to the best advantage: considering therefore the difficulty that might grow in taking this Castle by force, the President gaue direction to Sir Charles Wilmot, and Captaine Roger Harvie (taking for their guard a Sergeant with foure and twenty foote) to make shew of going only to hunt the Bucke in the parts neere adjoyning, and beeing hot and weary, betweene the houres of ten and eleven of the clock in the forenoone, to take the said Castle in their way homeward, and calling for wine and vsquebagh (whereof Irish Gentlemen are seldome disfurnished) should (if it were possible) themselues first, and their Souldiers afterward draw into the Castle, and gaine possession thereof; and the chiefe Iustice Saxey likewise had direction to call Cormock before him in the publicke Sessions; and taking occasion of defect and delay, about certaine prisoners, whom hee should haue forth comming at these Assises, should at the same hower (before appoynted) commit him to the Gentleman Porter, till the Presidents pleasure should be farther knowen at his returne from Kinsale: this later order concerning his person was accordingly effected, but the former stratageme about the Castle was frustrated: for the Warders, whether out of the jealous custome of the Nation in generall (which is not to admit any strangers in their masters absence to come into their Castles,) or whether Cormock in his guiltinesse had given them such directions, I know not, but sure I am that neither Sir Charles, (though hee much importuned to see the roomey within) nor any of his company were permitted to goe into the Gate of the Castle nor hardly to looke within the gate of the Bawne: The President was no sooner returned to Corke, but one of Cormocks Followers, saluted him with a Petition, relating at large the heard measure that his Master had received from the chiefe Iustice, to whom answer was made, that hee would call for the chiefe Iustice before him, and being satisfied from him of all particulars, order should bee taken that no unjust, nor sinister proceedings should be taken against him; in the meane time hee must be content to submit himselfe, and be menable unto Law: Now did the time better permit the offences formerly committed, to be pursued by course of Iustice, for could he but haue gathered by probable conjecture, of the discovery of any part of these treacheries (before his apprehension) he had in readinesse one thousand men of his owne Followers) well armed to haue stept with him into action upon the first alarme.

The combination lately by Cormocke contracted with the Priest Owen Mac Eggan, being manifestly prooved by severall witnesses, subject to no Exceptions, the Gentleman Porter, (called Master Raph Hammon) was commaunded to bring the Prisoner before the President and Councell, which were assembled at Shandon Castle, who making his appearance, was charged with the severall Treasons afore recited, who insisted very much upon his Iustification, pretending that those accusations were injuriously devised, and slanderously suggested by his Enemies, especially for the last Article concerning the Conspiracie with the Priest Mac Eggan, (which indeed was so cunningly and secretly caryed, as he supposed, that it was rather presumed then prooved against him; Hee renounced all favour and pardon, if it would bee justified by lawfull testimony. The President replied, that this was the onely matter of substance that he was charged withall, the former being pardoned since the perpetrating thereof, being onely inducements and presumptions whereby they were the rather mooved to giue care and credit to the latter accusation: But hee still persisting in his Innocencie, was at last urged with this Dilemma, namely, that either hee should confesse his fault, and so intreat her Majesties mercy, or else in token of his loyall and guiltlesse heart, he should deliver unto the State his Castle of Blarney, upon condition, that if the fact whereof he was charged, were not evidently prooved against him, the sayd Castle should be re-delivered to him or his assignes by a day appoynted. At first hee seemed very inclinable to the motion, but in processe it was perceived that hee intended nothing but jugling and devices; wherefore a Warrant from the whole Body of the Councell, was directed to the sayd Gentleman Porter, straightly charging and commanding that he should be kept in yrons closer then before, untill he should demeane himselfe in more dutifull conformitie; And besides, they appoynted Captaine Taffe, (in whom Cormock reposed much trust) to perswade him to surrender the sayd

Castle into the Presidents hands, undertaking upon his credit, to retaine the same, and all the goods in it, or neere thereunto, belonging either to himselfe or his followers, from losse and danger, either by Subject or Rebelle. Cormocke at last finding that the President was resolved either to make him bend or breake, caused his Constable, (though much against his will) to yeeld the said Castle to Captaine Taffe, so that no other (whatsoever) might haue the charge or custodie thereof. The Prisoner besides the Castle of Blarney, had two places (kept by his Dependants) of good importance to commaund the Countrey; the one an Abbey called Kilcrey, distant from Corke six myles, and the other a Castle called Mocrumpe, sixteene miles distant from Corke; the former scituated upon the South, and the latter upon the North side of the River of Lee. The Castle and Abbey of Kilcrey was rendered to Captaine Francis Slingsbie, sent thither by the President; But Mocrumpe seated in the heart of Muskrey, and invironed round about with woods and bogges, could not be gotten without the countenance of an Armie; therefore the President sent first Captaine Flower, and afterwards Sir Charles Wilmott, with competent numbers of Foot and Horse to lye before it, untill such time as they might gaine it by Sapp or Myne, or by some other stratageme, as time and occasion should minister opportunity. During this siege the President cast about for his wife and children, and having gotten them likewise into his hands, confined them within the walles of Corke. These things thus accomplished, the President dispatched Letters both to the Lords of her Majesties Privie Councell of England, and also to the Lord Deputie and Councell of Ireland, relating unto them the apprehension of Cormocke, and the reasons inducing him thereunto, desiring also to receiue their Lordships pleasures for his further proceedings in this businesse; but before answeere could bee returned, an unfortunate accident unexpected altered the whole platforme of this intended service: For Cormocks followers had plotted his escape, and likewise to procure Cormock Oge his eldest sonne, (who was then a Student in Oxford) to bee convayed secretly out of the Vniversitie, and to be brought into Ireland, or as some thought to bee sent into Spaine; for effecting whereof, Iohn O Healy, one of Cormocks old theeues, was (the next passage) to be sent into England: Advertisement hereof was brought to the President, who for preventing of both these Designes, first sent for the Gentleman Porter, delivered unto him at large the great prejudice that should arise to her Majesties Service, if the prisoner should escape, that the Queenes charge, and his owne paines and laborious travell, were all frustrated: yea if the Spaniards should arriue (as they were expected) the whole kingdome of Ireland should receiue hazard and prejudice by it: Wherefore he charged him upon his duty to the State, his allegeance to her Majestie, and in the loue he bare unto himself, that hee would bee no lesse carefull of his safe keeping, then of his owne life, which in some sort depended thereon: Answer was made by Hammon, that his Lordship should not need to trouble his minde with any such imaginary doubts: for if shackles of yron, walles of stone, and force of men, (for hee had certaine Souldiers allowed him for a Guard) could make him sure, then should the Prisoner bee forthcoming, whensoever the State should bee pleased to call for him, and for John O Healy, the President held a watchful eye over him, but it was not thought good to make stay of him untill he should be aboard the ship, that such Instructions and Letters as should bee sent by him, might with himselfe bee apprehended, whereby the whole circumstance of these plots, and the chiefe Agents therein might bee discovered: to make short, the wind was faire, the Master hasteth aboard, the Marriners and Passengers purposing to set saile the next tyde ; amongst the rest John O Healy unregarded (as hee thought) is also on shipboard, but hee was much deceived in his opinion, for presently a Messenger sent from the State, found him in the hold; when he began to search him for his Letters, he making shew to deliver them willingly (upon a suddaine) threw both his Letters and money into the Sea; which although it did plainly demonstrate apparent guiltinesse, yet could hee never afterwards bee wrought to confesse either the contents of the one, or the summe of the other, pretending ignorance in both, whereupon hee was committed to the common Goale.

But let us leaue Cormock for a while with the Gentleman Porter, and his man in the Goale, and speake of other accidents and matters of State, which at this time were handled.

Upon the second of September, the Lord President received Letters from the Lords of the Councell, wherein they signified unto him, how well her Majestie and themselves liked of his services performed in Mounster, with many other things worthy to be remembred, which importeth me in this place to relate the true copie of the originall Letter.

---

---

CHAP. XIII.

A Letter from the Lords of the Councell to the Lord President. Instructions for Captaine Harvie to write into Spaine. A Letter written by her Majesties owne hand to the Lord President. A Letter from the Lord President to her Majestie. A Letter from Captaine Harvie to Pedro Lopez de Soto, the Spanish Veador. A Letter from O'Donnell to O'Connor Kerry. A Letter from Don Iuan de Aguila to the Lord President. A Letter from the Lord President to Don Iuan de Aguila. Captain Harvies Passeport sent to the Veador. The Lord Presidents Passeport for Captaine Edny into Spaine. Spanish intelligence sent from Master Secretary Cecill to the Lord President. The Lord Presidents opinion sent to Master Secretary of a defensiu warre in Ireland.

A Letter from the Lords of the Councell to the Lord President.

AFTER our heavy Commendations: Wee haue
(according to our dueties) imparted to her Majestie

your dispatch of the seven and twentieth of Iuly, who hath conceived so great liking of your proceedings, as she hath commanded us to take notice of the same, in the most gracious termes that our owne heart could wish, being likewise most desirous that the Army (under you) as well in generall, as those Gentlemen and Officers in particular, who haue so valiantly exposed themselves to danger (as appeareth by your particular relation) may know, that they haue ventured their liues for a Prince, who holdeth them so deare, as if shee could preserue her estate and them, without the losse and hazard of them, there is nothing which she possesseth (of her owne) which she would spare to redeeme their trouble and danger. It remaineth now that wee acquaint what is done by her majesue, to prevent all further of the King of Spaine, wherein wee cannot but much commend the apprehension you take of those advertisements you haue, and the judgment you use in applying the same, for the safetie of that Province, the defection whereof, as wee are sorry to find by so understanding a person as you are: So doe wee hope when it shall appeare (as it doth daily in all parts of Ireland) that God doth blesse her Majesties Army against the Rebels, and that the King of Spaine shall find himselfe not so at ease, as to employ any Army there in haste, that, that lacke of duety and ingratitude (which doth now liue in them) will either dye in it selfe, and turne to the contrary, or else that God will (as hee hath begun) confound them in their owne malicious inven- tions : It is very true, that her Majesties owne advertisements doe confirme, that a Pinnace of fiftie Tunne, was sent with some of Odonnels Followers, and some treasure, to assure the Rebels of an Army to come into Ireland, which Pinnace being once put to Sea, was forced backe againe to Vinera, but they parted thence againe within three or fower dayes after, which is the same that landed at Ardea, whereof your Letters make mention : wee have also assured advertisements that her Majesties fleete, (being kept on the Coast) hath much hindered the Spanish designes, not that they were fully ready to come forth, but because the fleete kept their preparations from drawing to a head, for this next moneth is the time, which is the fittest for them to put to Sea, if her Majesties fleete doe not hinder them : For which purpose, though now most of her ships (being long at Sea, and come in with the carrick, yet they are going out againe with all possible speed.) You shall further understand, that her Majestie hath beene acquainted of the Letters of complements, betweene Don Iohn and you, the Copies being sent over by the Deputie, by Sir Oliver Saint-Iohn, whereof you now send the originall. At which time, hee sent her Majestie his owne and kept no counsell, that hee had intercepted your great bribe : wee have also seene the Letter of Soto, to Captaine Harvie, and the Passeport of whose conference (from which Passeport also proceeded) her Majesty conceiveth that you may make some good use for her service, in this forme following : Where it doth appeare by Odonnels

Letter to OConnor Kerry out of Spaine, that hee is desirous to understand the State of Ireland; but so as if there bee any bad, it may bee concealed from the Spaniards: Captaine Harvie may in requitall of the Veadors curtesie towards him use this freedome (of a Gentleman) though an enemy, to let him see how much the King of Spaine is abused by the Rebels, who seeke to engage him upon false hopes, and conceale just causes of doubts, for which purpose hee shall send him Odonnels owne Letter, which hee cannot deny, and withall in any case (it being well overseene by you) make him a relation of the successes of her Majesties Army; now if it may bee said, that they will thinke this Letter is aposted, and take this to be a finenesse in Harvie; the worst that can come, is, that this good may ensue: That under colour of sending that to him, there may some person goe in the ship, who may discover what preparations there is in that place; for the better colouring whereof, hee may reply, that where hee hath sent him a Passeport for the safe conduct of any person whatsoever, hee should send to negotiate in the matter (which passed betweene them in conference) that he looked rather to have received from him, who was the Propounder of the same (with so great affection,) some such overture from that side, as might have given him foundation to breake with the Deputy, or your selfe, to send over to her Majesty about it, for which purpose he may offer him, as good a Passeport for any of his Messengers, as he hath sent to himselfe, it being very great reason that such a motion should proceed from that side rather, which hath opened itselfe with greatest violence, then from any of her Majesties Ministers, who have instead of their malicious attempt, performed all offices of honour and humanity. And so much for answer of that poynt.

For your opinion concerning such places as are fit to bee fortified, her Majestie doeth very well approoue the reasons whereupon the same is grounded, being such indeed as ought to sway her Maiesties Iudgements either one way or other; for as it is true, that charge is well forborne which draweth with it perill, so it is a double danger to spend in any place, where safetie followeth not such a charge: And therefore if you doe continue in the minde, that Baltimore is like to bee of greatest use to the Enemie, both in regard of the Haven it selfe, and of the Countrey adjoyning, and that some such Fortification may bee raysed as may commaund the Haven, without any great charge, her Maiestie is content that you doe proceed; Otherwise if you doe thinke that whensoever any forces shall descend, that the place so fortified cannot hold out for any time, then her Maiestie doeth like it better, both there and else where, that those Castles which you doe winne from the Irish, seated upon the Sea, bee utterly demolished, rather then to bee left for the Rebells to nestle in at their first arrivall, and easier to be furnished by them for their great advantage. In which poynt of Fortifications, because you may see the temper of her Maiesties mind, that useth meane in all things, and knoweth when to spend, and when to spare, in both which never Prince was so little subiect to private humour, either one way or other, further then stood with the safetie of her state and people, over which her care is rather to bee admired then matched: Wee doe send you an extract of her owne Letter to the Lord Deputie, how hee should governe himselfe in that poynt, whereof wee feare you have not yet had notice, in respect that the distance betweene you and him, is well neere the longitude of Ireland. For the Artillery which you have taken, if you finde them necessarie for that Kingdome, shee is well pleased that they bee detayned, as well to serue for a scourge to them that brought them, (if againe they renew their attempt) as to prevent the inconveniencie and charge of their transportation hither: But if you finde them not necessary for that place, but that Iron may doe as good service, you may transport them in some of the Victuallers, when they doe returne from that Province; And so wee doe commit you to Gods protection. From the Court at Greenwich this eighteenth of Iuly, 1602.

Your very loving Friends,

Thomas Egerton. C. S.	Thomas Buchurst.
Notingham.	Iohn Stanhope.
Robert Cecill.	Iohn Fortescue.

At the same time also he received a gracious Letter written by her Majestie with her owne hands, which multiplied his comforts, thinking all his laborious endeavours to bee fully recompensed, in that they were so graciously accepted.

A Letter written by her Majesties owne hand to the Lord President.

Your Soveraigne, E. R.

MY Faithfull George, how joyed Wee are, that so good event hath followed so toylesome endeavors, laborious cares, and heedfull travells, you may guesse, but Wee can best witnesse; and doe protest, that your safetie hath equalled the most thereof: And so God ever blesse you in all your actions.*

Not many dayes after the receipt of this gracious Letter, the President in his next dispatch into England, wrote vnto her Majestie this Letter following.

*A Letter from the Lord President to
her Majestie.*

SACRED MAIESTIE,

IF I could sufficiently expresse the Ioy which my heart conceived, when I beheld a Letter written by your Royall hand, and directed unto mee, (who in* your service haue merited little, though in zeale, faith and loyaltie equall to any) your Maiestie would not in your more then abounding Charitie, mislike your paines, having thereby raysed the dejected spirit of a poore Creature, exiled from that blessing which others enioy in beholding your Royall Person, whose beautie adornes the world, and whose wisdom is the myracle of our age. Gracious Sovereaigne, three yeares are now almost fully expired, since my imploiment (into this kingdome) tooke his beginning; during which time, rest in body and minde hath been a stranger unto mee; and overwearied in both, I doe most humbly beseech your Maiestie, (if this Realme bee not invaded from Spaine, whereof in a few dayes true Iudgement may be made) to graunt mee leaue, but onely for two moneths this Winter to attend you in your Court; which small time of respiring, and at that time of the yeare, can bee no hinderance to the Service, and yet sufficient to releue my minde, and enable my body, which now is not so strong (as I could wish) to doe your Maiestie that service I ought. Ireland is destitute of learned men of English birthe and with Irish Physicians (knowing the good will they beare mee) if they were learned I dare not adventure: The longer I am without remedy, the lesse, and the lesse time I shall bee able to serue you: But as I am your Majesties Creature, so I doe submit the consideration of my humble and just suit, to your Princely consideration, at whose Royall feete, and in whose Service I am howerly ready to sacrifice my life. From your Majesties Citie of Corke, the nine and twentieth of September. 1602.

Your Sacred Majesties most humble Vassall and Servant,

GEORGE CAREW.

After the President had received their Lordships instructions (in their Letters aforementioned) hee framed an answer for Captaine Harvie, written in French to the Veador; and also a French Passeport, the copies whereof Englished, I thinke it meete to relate, and with them the Letter from Odonnell, formerly touched by their Lordships.

A Letter from Captaine Harvie to Pedro Lopez de Soto, the Spanish Veador.

Sir, after your departure it pleased God to visit mee with such extreame sicknesse, as all my thoughts were fixed upon another life, supposing that my dayes had beene determined: By reason whereof, together with my feeblenesse and absence, I had not the meanes to acquaint the Lord President, with the passages betwixt us untill now, that the time prefixed in your Passeport is almost expired, which I could not by any meanes remedy: Sir I haue of late received a Letter from you, dated the ninth of Aprill, 1602. by the which I perceiue that you are desirous that I should send a Messenger, to giue you a taste (as I conceiue) concerning the discourse which passed betweene us, which truely I would willingly haue done, if I had not beene visited with sicknesse: But now finding by the opinion of all men, that his Majestie is resolved to continue the warre against the Sacred person of my Soveraigne: Although in my heart (as a Christian) I wish a firme unity betweene their Majesties, the which by their Ancestors hath beene so long time (to the comfort of their subjects) religiously continued: Yet now understanding the great preparations which the King is in making, for the invasion of her Majesties Dominions: I confesse I am not so passionate for the peace as I was, and I haue no reason to make any overture of your discourse to the Lord President, there being so little probability of a peace to ensue: Wherefore if you thinke it good, that the matter we speake of, should be set on foote, because you were the first mover of it (wherein you manifest your zeale) I pray you to write unto mee, that I may understand, whether his Majestie will giue eare to a peace or no, whereof you need not be scrupulous to speake freely, since you see by experience, that when your designe did giue us cause of revenge, we did intreat you with honour and humanity; when I shall know your answer, I will deale effectually with the Lord President ; with whom aswell in kindred as in affection, I haue such interest as you haue heard, and of whose worth and sufficiencie you haue bin well informed, assuring you that if hee will put his hand unto it, it will much advance the busines : I am not in despaire of his inclination to a peace, if by your answer hee may perceiue, that you proceed roundly : I marvell much that his Majestie and the Lords of his Councell, lends their cares so much unto this traitorly barbarous nation, who from their Cradles haue beene nourished in falsehood and treasons, masking (of late) their actions under the vaile of religion, whereof the truth is, that in their hearts they haue neither feare of God, nor faith to men : And that from henceforth you may not bee blinded, and see their fraud, wherewith they beguile his Majestie, unto whom they protest sincerity. I doe send you here inclosed a Letter signed by the hand of the Traytor O donnell, written to a friend of his in this Province of Mounster, called O Conner Kerry, which was found in the Castle of Beerehaven, the which by her Majesties forces (under the conduct of the President in person) was within the space of seven dayes taken and razed, and the Rebels put to the sword, and their Companions with all their forces lodging neere unto them, but (according to their custome) they durst not second nor aid them, but left them to destruction : By the which Letter you shall see (as cleere as the day) how this Traytor O donnell onely tempers a baite to deceiue the King your Master, like unto all the rest of this nation, who doe but temporize to worke their advantage by it: To relate unto you truely in what estate these Rebels liue at this present, howsoever they may protest and dissemble their affaires, or write from hence, I protest upon my soule, that Tirone workes all he may to bee received into the favour and mercy of our Soveraigne, and that all the Lords and Chiefs of the North that followed him on the day of the rowt at Kinsale, and others of those parts haue submitted themselues to the Lord Deputie, and for securitie haue put in their Pledges for their future loyalties: And Tirone (with his weake Troupes) haue beene so sharply prosecuted, that as a fugitiue (being enforced to quit his owne Countrey) hee seekes out Coverts, Bogges, and Woods; The Lord Deputie without impeachment passes from place to place, and holds all Vlster in subjection: The other Provinces of Leinster and Connaght, are reduced to obedience, and the Province of Munster (where I remaine) is so much at the commandement of the Lo. President, as if he would receiue to mercy all the Traytors that seeke to bee received, and promise to liue as good subjects there would bee no rebels left; And amongst others, Osulevan, who hath given you the best assurance, and of whom (as I think) you haue most confidence, doth daily make suit to be restored to the Queens favour, and this I assure you from the mouth of the Lo. President. Moreover (as the vulgar can informe you) the President absolutely commands in this Province, and the traitors (whose requests he rejects) are so few and so weake, as they liue like unto wolues and foxes, flying from one place to another, onely to assure their liues, which kind of life cannot long endure. But if the King your Master will persevere to ayd these poore traitors, you shall see us (when you shall enterprize it) in better point then wee were, it not being in your power to surprise any Port or place of importance; and if it be your chance to come hither in person, you shall find it to be true, whereof in my particular (in regard of the honour I beare you) I should be exceeding sorry. The Bearer hereof Walter Edney my Lieutenant, whom you know by sight, in his fatherly loue to his dearest Son, whom he placed in the service of Captaine Pedro Enriques de Tejada, lately deceased, hath intreated the Lord President to licence him to see his sonne, to the end that he might supply his necessary wants, for default whereof he may otherwise perish; which occasion I willingly embraced, whereby I might write unto you, and by that meanes receiue your answer, beseeching you to extend your favour unto him, during his abode in Spaine, I will doe the like for all such as depend upon you, if they shall happen to arriue in this Kingdome. And to the end that I might the more fully know your answere, and haue the better meanes to treat the more effectually in these affayres, which are of such consequence, I pray you to send one from you well instructed, that I may bring him to the Lo. President, which will much advance the businesse you desire. And as you haue given mee a Pasport for such as I should send unto you, (whereof by reason of my sicknesse I could make no use) I doe send you the like here inclosed, which shall be of force untill the end of February 1602: Even so Sir, being ever ready (my allegiance to my Soveraigne excepted) to doe you all friendship and service, I pray God to preserue you in health according to your own desire. From Corke the 17 of September. 1602.

Yours affectionately to doe you Service,

A Monsieur,

Monsieur Pedro Lopez de Soto, Veador generall for his Majestie of Spaine, deliver these at the Groyne.

Roger Harvie.

Sir, I had forgotten one thing, which is to pray you to affoord your favour to my Lieutenant, that hee may vent his Merchandises transported thither, and returne others, which he carries onely by the meanes of Traffique, for the defraying of his charges. I will doe the like for any of yours that you shall send hither.

Roger Harvy.

A Passeport of Captaine Harvies sent to the Veador.

I Roger Harvie, Captaine of a foote Company, and Governour for her Majestie of Castle-haven and Baltimore, &c. For certaine causes concerning her Majesties service, I doe giue this free Passeport to such ship and Messenger as Don Pedro Lopez de Soto (Veador generall for the King of Spaine) shall send into this province of Mounster in Ireland, betweene the date of this present, and the last of February 1602. And if it shall happen that any of her Majesties ships, or any other of her Subjects, shall meete with the said Ship, or that by force of wind they shall be enforced upon the Coast of England, or into any part within the Realme of Ireland: In her Majesties name I pray and require every of them, that they may bee friendly entreated, and that the Messenger without any impediment may bee permitted to haue free recourse unto me, and to vent their merchandize, being requisite for the Queenes service: Dated at Corke the seventeenth of September, 1602.

Roger Harvie.

To all Admirals, Viceadmirals, Governours, Magistrates; and Officers, and to all other her Majesties loyall and obedient Subjects, unto whom this shall or may appertaine.

A Letter from Odonnell to O Conner Kerry.

WHat newes are here, the Doctor and Dermond Odrischal may largely report unto you; but of this one thing you may bee fully assured; that the King will not omit the winning of Ireland, if it cost him the most part of Spaine: His Majestie doth send you money and munition. I pray let our enformation of you bee found true, and your service encourage our King to further merit you: I pray you send mee the relation of the newes of our Countrey, in such sort, as if there be any bad, it be concealed from the Spaniards, and knowen to me; where the Deputie with the Queenes forces are occupied, or where they are in Garrison: At the Groyne the foure and twentieth of May, 1602.

To his loving Friend
O Connor Kerry,
 these giue in Ireland.

Your loving Friend
Hugh Odonnell.

At the same time, when Pedro Lopez de Soto the Veador, wrote to Captaine Harvie, Don Iohn de Aguila, did write unto the Lord President, and sent him a present of wines, Lymmons, Orenge, &c. And to doe him a farther curtesie, hee gaue him assurance, that his Passeports should bee sufficient for any man, that hee would employ into Spaine, if hee had any cause to send thither: This Letter the President sent to the Lords of the Councell in England, who authorised him both to write unto him, and to returne him a Present, if he were so disposed; The copie of Don Iohns Letter, and the Presidents unto him translated out of the Spanish doe here ensue.

A Letter from Don Iuan de Aguila to the Lord President.

MVy illustre Sennor: To say the truth, I am very glad that I am in Spaine, and that the passage was good which I was to make. I confesse unto your Lordship, that I am so much obliged, for the honourable and good tearmes, which the Lord Deputy and your Lordship used there in the servic of your Prince, in all things which concerned me, that I desire some apt occasion to manifest my selfe to be a good paymaster (as I ought) for those curtesies, and for the assurance thereof, your Lordship may send securely to me, to command any thing you please for your service: And that your Ship and Passeport shall bee friendly received: And for that in this Countrey, there is no fruit of more estimation then Wines of Ripadavia, Limmons and Orenge, these few are sent to make a prooffe thereof, and the willingnesse I haue to serue your Lordships; whom I commend to God: From the Groyne the second of Aprill, 1602.

Muy illustre Sennor.

Beso las manos a V. S.

Su Servidor.

Don Iuan de Aguila.

A Letter from the Lord President to Don Iuan de Aguila.

MVy illustre Sennor*, I doubt not but that your Lordship hath received my Letters of the thirteenth of Iuly, sent in answer of yours of the second of Aprill, by the Captaines Suaco and Sigler, and I rest so well satisfied of the good tearmes, wherein wee stand, as I am desirous to doe your Lordship some agreeable service; at that time there was no occasion for mee to make use of the Passeport, and offer your Lordship made me, for security of that man or ship which I should send into those parts: But now this bearer Captaine Walter Edney, whose Sonne served Captaine Pedro Enriques de Tejada (lately deceased) having prayed mee to giue him licence, and my Passeport to see his Sonne: To supply him of his necessary wants, I beseech your Lordship that he may (according to your promise) safely and securely passe and returne, which favour I shall thankfully acknowledge: And whensoever your Lordship shall haue occasion, to send any of yours into these parts, hee shall bee vsed with the like courtesie: I haue received profit by the booke of fortification which your Lordship left me at your departure, and hold it as a Relique in memory of you, and as a good Scholler I haue put some things in practise, whereof your Lordship at your returne hither againe (which I hope in God will be never) may be a witnesse, whether I haue committed any error in the art or no. My greatest defect hath beene the want of the helpe of so great a Master as your Lordship is, of whom I am desirous to learne, not onely that art, but in all else concerning military profession, in the which I doe giue your Lordship the preheminence: To conclude, I rest in all I may (my dutie reserved to the Queene my mistresse) affectionately ready at your Lordships service, and so kissing your hands. I beseech God to preserue you with many happy yeares: From Corke the seventeenth of September, 1602.

Muy illustre Signior,

Although here is nothing to be had worthy the presenting unto your Lordship, yet I make bold to present you with an ambling Hackney

Beso las manos a V. S. su Servidor.

GEORGE CAREW

The man whom the Lord President made choise of, to carry these Letters to Pedro Lopez de Soto, and to Don Iohn de Aguila, was Walter Edney, Lieutenant unto Captaine Harvie, who was an ingenious man of good discretion, and well experienced, aswell in Land as Sea service, and the better to disguise his employment hee had a Sonne in Spaine, a Page unto Captaine Pedro Enrique, who after rendering of Kinsale (the Captaine aforefaid) casting an affection to the boy, moved Don Iohn, to entreate the President that hee might haue the youth to serue him, which was granted, and within a few moneths after the Spaniards returne the Captaine dyed; and to put farther maske upon his employment, the President fraighted a small Barkeloaden with Irish commodities, and in it a choise Irish horse, with a rich pad and furniture, and some other trifles which he sent to Don Iohn de Aguila: and for his safetie hee had two Passeports with him, the one from Captaine Harvie, the other from the President; the Presidents Passeport here ensueth.

By the Lord President of Mounster,
in Ireland.

I SIR GEORGE CAREW, Lieutenant generall of the Artillery, for her Sacred Majestie the Queene of England, in that her kingdome, and her Highnesse Lord President for the Province of Mounster in Ireland, doe certifie that I have licensed Captaine Walter Edney to goe into Spaine, to visit his Sonne remayning there, and to returne hither within two moneths after the date hereof; this being agreeable with the allowance and power which Don Iohn de Aguila did giue me (at his being here) the copy whereof is heereunto annexed. Given at Corke the seventeenth of September, 1602.

G. C.

Of these dispatches for Spaine enough being said, it is time to returne to the passages in Mounster, but first I must relate unto you, the newes from Spaine sent in a Letter from Sir Robert Cecill unto the Lord Deputie, and the same transcribed (by master Secretaries direction) unto the President: the Letter bare date the seuenth of August, and arrived at Corke the second of September following, whereby the Reader may see, that the King of Spaines eyes were yet still (notwithstanding the rowt at Kinsale, the dishonour hee received in the returnes of his troopes, and the losse of Dunboy, whereby his footing in Ireland was meerely lost) open npon that kingdome.

Although Queene Elizabeth of happie memory was dead before Lieutenant Edney returned, yet I hold it not impertinent in this place to recount his successes: When hee was landed at the Groyne, hee understood that Don Iohn de Aguila, by the accusation of the Irish Fugitiues, was in disgrace confined to his house, where (of grief) shortly after hee dyed. His Letters and Pasports were taken from him by the Earle of Carazena, and sent to the Court, and himselfe stayed untill the Kings pleasure was knowen. The Irish Traytors inveighed much against him, saying, That under pretext of Trade, and bringing of Presents, hee came as a Spie; Nevertheless he was well intreated, and had the libertie of the Towne, and to weare his Sword, with allowance from the King of a Ducatt per diem for his dyet:

His goods were solde for the best advantage, and his Barque returned into Ireland; But the Presidents present to Don Iohn, the Earle of Carazena detayned to his owne use; And after nine moneths restraint, Edney was enlarged, and returned into England in Iuly 1603.

A little before this time Sir Robert Cecill, her Majesties principall Secretary, wrote unto the Lord Deputie the Newes of Spaine, a branch of which hee also sent to the President, dated upon the seventh of August, and received the second of September, I hold meet to insert, whereby the Reader may understand that the King of Spaine had still his eyes open upon Ireland,

One great cause of my writing this private Letter, is this, that where I see how much it doth distract your mind to thinke of Spaine behinde you, and of the North before you, fearing to bee diverted from the conclusion of your labours, you may perceiue in what estate the preparations of Spaine are now, as I am certainly advertised by one of mine owne, who is newly from the Port of Lisbone, where he tooke shipping the 21 of Iuly.

There are two great Ships, each of them of a thousand Tunnes, one called the Andrew, and the other (which shall be the Viceadmirall) the name forgotten: Besides, there are twelue shps of two hundred tunnes and downeward, in which it is resolved to send some fifteene hundred men, to haue releevd the siege at Bearehaven; the Newes of the taking whereof was first knowen by a Ship from Waterford to Lisbon, and not before: Of the fifteene hundred men, eight hundred came from the Groyne, being part of those which were transported out of Ireland. In the Groyne remaineth Odonnell, and there is onely the great Saint Philip, with ten small Barques, with which he mightily importuned to be sent to the North. If these had been sent unto Beerehaven in Mounster, hoping upon his arrival with some fifteene hundred men, to haue raised the siege, possessed some parts, and made a beginning of a plantation, heereof great benefit must needs haue growen to the Rebels: for as those small numbers which should haue beene landed at Mounster, with the bruit of the rest to follow, (which is alwayes multiplied) would haue made a distraction of the Vlster prosecution, &c. Lastly, in the said Letter he prayed the President to set downe his opinion, what course were best to be taken in a Defensiuē warre, if the King of Spaine did invade Ireland with a Royall Armie. The next passage, to giue Master Secretarie satisfaction, the Lord President wrote unto him a long Letter; but because many private things were handled in the same, I will onely relate so much of it, as concernes his opinion, touching a defensiuē warre in Ireland.

The Lord Presidents Opinion sent to Master Secretary, of a Defensiuē Warre in Ireland.

GRanting that the Enemie will come no lesse powerfull then is reported, and that the Irish will joyne with them (whereof there is no doubt) then consideration is to bee had, what in such a Sea of troubles, is meetest to bee done, that may best preserue the Queenes army with lest charge, and the way to weary the enemy and the countrey. Because my opinion may perchance differ from other men, whose Authority, Greatnesse, and better iudgement (in the worldes opinion) beares more sway, I will forbear to deale in so waightie a businesse any farther, then to your selfe, vsing the libertie you haue euer giuen me, to say what I conceiue to be the best Counsaile, if the army of Spaine be so great as is both reported by those that come from thence, and expected heere, let us make no doubt, but he will bee Master of the field (for the present) and will so hold himselfe, except the Armie of Ireland bee reenforced to a farre higher List, the charge whereof will make (if I bee not deceived) both England and Ireland to groane: Wherefore the best way (in my conceit) to moderate such huge Expences, is for the present to be carelesse of the Countreys generally throughout the kingdome; for in seeking both to defend them, and to make head against the Enemy, will bee too heauie a burden. The principall regard which we ought to haue, is of the Cities, in every of which I doe wish a strong

Garrison both of Horse and foot, able to defend a siege: when the Enemie shall see that wee are dispersed into Garrisons, either hee will presently (in his best strength) goe to besiege one of those places, or else disperse, (because hee hath the Countrey to friend) as wee doe, if he attempt the besieging of any of our places aforesaid, there is no doubt, but in such a businesse he will unite all his forces in one, then may wee be bold to draw all our forces from their severall Garrisons, to a head to releue that place; and with Gods favour make no doubt but to enforce the Enemy to rise; if hee disperse, then those Garrisons will be able to master the Countries about them, and leaue no habitation to releue either Spaniard or Irish; and upon occasion two or more of these Garrisons may assemble and meet, to effect greater services, then otherwise can bee done: This fashion of a warre will in a short time destroy all the Countrey, make the Irish to curse the Spaniard and themselues, for drawing them hither, driue the King to an inestimable charge, and hazard by Sea, to victuall and releue his Army, which otherwise will perish, ease the Queenes charge, and secure the chiefe Townes, which is chiefly (and aboue all other things) to be respected. Supposing the Army would land in Mounster, in it I would haue principall regard of Corke, Limerick, and Waterford, in either of which Cities I doe wish there might be a strong Garrison of three thousand foote and three hundred horses, one thousand foote more to be dispersed for some poorer places meet to be kept, so as the Queenes forces should consist of ten thousand foote and one thousand horse; the rest of the kingdome (where the Spaniards are not) may bee held in awe with some Garrisons upon them as now they are: This manner of warre (in my conceit) would little or nothing increase the charge the Queene is now at, and in a short time weary both the Spaniard and the Irish.

To make it appeare more probable unto you, that these Garrisons will be able to ruine all the Countrey at their pleasures, although the Enemy bee never so strong: it cannot bee denyed but sixe thousand foote and sixe hundred horse may bee drawn from the Garrisons; and yet those left against the Irish, and Townesmen sufficiently guarded; with such a light Army, the Commander may goe where hee list, and lodge as neere the Spaniard (without harme) as hee thinkes good: for wee haue the same advantage upon them, as the Irish in lightnesse haue of us, and with such an Army (of the Irish) there is no doubt to bee made, then it followes that wee shall be able to goe into every part of the Province, and retreat at our pleasures: To the contrary, if the Spaniard be strong, and wee in his strength doe fight with him, the event of the battels (being dangerous and uncertaine as they are) the losse of one field or one dayes disaster, would absolutely loose the kingdome, if hee come with like numbers as he did the last yeare, (which I cannot beleeeue, because the example hath taught him more wit) yet I doe not wish that wee should (doe as wee did) presently besiege them; for Kinsale was bought at so deare a rate (as while I live) I will protest against a winter siege, if it may be avoided: I doe speake within my compasse, I doe verily beleue, that at that siege, and after (the sicknesse were gotten) we lost aboue sixe thousand men that dyed: Thus may your honour see what a fashioned warre, I doe conceiue to bee least in charge and most of use; but for a farther helpe, it will be needfull for some of the Queenes ships, to bee evermore upon the coast, to keepe the Spaniard from reliefe of victuals; and then there is an apparant hope, that a Spanish Army cannot any long time subsist in Ireland, for betweene us and them, and the swarmes of Irishrie that will draw into Mounster, the Province will be so harrassed, as neither the Spaniards nor Rebels can avoid starving. I protest unto your Honour, I doe not project this manner of a warre for any particular respect unto my selfe, hoping thereby to haue the managing of it, being unmeet for the Lieutenant of the Kingdome, to bee where there is not a royall Armie in the field, to confront an Enemie; and therefore lest I may bee mistaken, if the motion bee liked of, let it not bee mine: But the Reason that leads mee to that opinion, is, because I am sure it is the easiest warre for charge, the surest from hazard, and in the end must prevaile.

Dat' 11 August, 1602.

G. C.

CHAPTER XIV.

Cormock Mac Dermond makes escape. The Castle of Mocrumpe taken, and most of the Ward put to the sword. Osulevan and Tirrell repayre with their forces into Muskrey. Cormock Mac Dermond makes meanes to bee received to her Majesties mercy. The Reasons that mooved the Lord President to accept of Cormocks submission.

Cormock Mac Dermond* being all this time in the Gentleman Porters custodie, and his intended escape (as hath been said) made knowen to the Lo. President, the same also came after to the eares of the Lo. Bishop of Corke, who according to his duty both of a subject and a Councillor, acquainted the Lord President with it, who made answer, that himselfe heretofore having Intelligence thereof, and had seriously admonished the Gentleman Porter to take an extraordinary care of his Prisoner: Yet because that could not be too often repeated, that can never be too sufficiently learned, he intreated the Bishop, that he also for Abundans cautela non nocet, would call for Hammon, and giue him warning to bee vigilant and circumspect in his charge, knowing how much it concerned both himselfe and the State. The Bishop having performed grauely and pathetically the Presidents desire, left the execution thereof to his future care. Lastly Dominicke Sarsfield (the Queenes Attorney for that Province) came to the President upon the same errand, agreeing in all Circumstances with the former intelligence: whereupon the sayd Officer was again called, the practise revealed unto him, and for a perclose, commaunded to keepe him close prisoner in an Hand-locke, either with his owne Servant, or some Souldier of especiall trust: Notwithstanding all these repetitions, and reiterations of warnings, within two dayes this last caution given, namely upon Michaelmas day betweene seven and eight of the clock at night, Cormock having no other attendant, but his trusty Servant Maghon Oge Olyne, who had broken up a window that looked into the Streete, stripping himselfe forth of his clothes, creepeth in his shirt out of the window, where were divers gentlemen wayting of purpose to receiue him; an English woman comming alongst the street (in the very instant) while he was creeping forth, perceived his white shirt, and thereupon rayzed the cry, they within the house (hearing the cry) looked for the Prisoner, and finding the window open, and Chamber empty follow the pursuit, but all in vaine, for he having the darke night, the Towne and Countrey to friend, was conuaied over the Citie wals and so escaped. The President although infinitely grieved with this unfortunate accident, yet thought it more necessary to prevent future dangers, then to lament passed disasters, and therefore wrote presently, first to Sir Charles Wilmot (being still before Mocrumpe;) that if he could not gaine the Castle that night, hee should raise his siege, and retreat with his forces the next morning, for nothing was more certaine, that now (Cormock being escaped) all his Followers and Dependants (who did infinitely loue him) would presently turne Rebels, which if they should, and joyne with Tirrell, and Donnell Osulevan (as most likely) they would intercept the places and passages twixt him and Corke, that he should not be able to retire without great danger and losse: These being sent away by a Horseman, other Letters were instantly written to the Lord Barry, and the Lord Roch, that they should make stay of all Cormocks Followers and goods, that were as yet residing in their Countries, not suffering either the one or the other to start aside, till from himselfe they should receiue farther directions.

Sir Charles was exceeding much distracted with these Newes, being exceeding sorry to raise his siege before the worke were finished, yet purposed to obey his directions; behold a meere casualty gaue him opportunitie to effect his desires: for the Warders having killed a Swine for their provision, and having no plentie of water to scald the same, were constrained to singe her (as the manner of some Countreyes is) with straw, fearne, and such like, as they had within the walls. This fire not carefully regarded, tooke hold upon a Cabin within the Bawne adjoyning to the Castle wall, and the thatch thereof (fired and flaming aloft) happened (through a window) to catch hold of certaine tallow, and such combustible matter within the Castle, raging so violently withall, that the Rebels were constrained to quit it, and to make the Bawne their last refuge, wherein they had little hope of safety : for they saw the two Captaine Harvies, brethren, and Captaine Thomas Boys, ready to assault it, wherefore (mistrusting that weake defence, which could not bee maintayned) they resolved to sally, and to adventure the recovery of the woods adjoyning ; in which attempt, about fiftie of them were put to the sword, the rest were but few, who by favour of the darke night escaped ; at length the violence of the fire being somewhat appeased, all industry was vsed to make the Castle tenable, and a Company being left within, well victualled and furnished with all necessities, the Army the next day returned towards Corke : the rumor of Cormocks escape being come to the eares of Osulevan Beare, and Captaine Terrill, they incontinently drew their forces forth of Kerry and Desmond into the borders of Muskerry, to conferre and joyne with Cormock, making no question but their decayed party should receiue great strength and encouragement by the Lord of Muskerry, his strong Countrey, and multitude of dependants. The President both to terrifie Cormock, and to secure the goods of the Subjects in the Lord Roches Countrey, sent for Sir Samuell Bagnall with his Regiment from Lymrick, to lye upon the confines of Muskerry, not making any other account, but to beginne a new warre, chargeable to her Majestie, painefull to himselfe, and nothing profitable to the Captaines or Souldiers, the Countrey being already much impoverished with the former siege, the Corne destroyed, and the Cattle fled into places of greatest strength, when as it pleased God contrary to all expectation, to giue this turbulent beginning a short and peaceable end, considering that the hopes of Spaine began to bee desperate and calme: For this Irish escaped Lord having conferred with Terrill and his associates, and discerning that they being very needful and halfe hungerstarved, (having been shut up so long within the Mountaines of Beare & Desmond) required bonnaght upon his Countrey, which was grievously wasted already by the English, found the unavoydable ruine and destruction of himselfe and his followers, if hee entertayned that course; and secondly, finding the English possessed of all his strong holds, both on the sides, and in the very heart of his Countrey; and lastly, his eldest sonne then by the procurement of the President prisoner in England, and his younger son, with his wife, daughter, and some of his most respected followers close prisoners in Corke, thought it his wisest course to adhere unto the State, if his humble submission might bee accepted. Vpon this resolution the twelfth of October, he wrote severall Letters to the Bishop of Corke, to the Chiefe Iustice, and to Captaine Taffe, earnestly solliciting every of these that they would become Mediators and Intercessors in his behalfe to the Lord President, that licence might bee graunted unto him to make his repaire unto his Lordship, protesting that hee would doe any thing within his power to redeeme his former offences. The whole body of the Councill adjudging his suite reasonable, the President would not dissent from their unanime opinion, and therefore his request was granted. The one and twentieth of October he came to the President, falling downe vpon his knees, he humbly (and indeed more passionately then I haue seene any) besought her Majesties mercie, no way standing upon his Iustification, but promising that his future Services should deserue her gracious favours; onely thus farre in modest tearmes hee alledged for his Excuse, (although he knew his Offences great, and himselfe thereby subject to Law) yet that in his heart he still retained the dutie of a Subject, and therein would remaine so long as life and breath should remaine within his body. The President and Councell beholding the man, and weighing his words, which proceeded from him not without evident testimony of inward griefe, and unfained sorrow, (although peradventure arising like *Esau*s teares from the sense of his losse, more then from Conscience, and feeling of his folly) thought good (upon advised deliberation) to receiue him into her Majesties grace and favour: And as you haue already heard the Motiues inducing him to demaund it: so shall ye briefly understand the reasons, by the weight and validitie whereof the State was perswaded to graunt it. First, considering the insupportable losse which hee had sustained since his imprisonment, in the taking of two, and burning his third Castle, wherein (as being the place of his most especiall abode) his best moouables (whereof hee was very well furnished) were consumed and burnt; and that the harvest of his Countrey, betweene her Majesties forces, and the Rebells, (for in the same they had made their abode for a whole moneth) was valued as might be esteemed at five thousand pounds, which as a just punishment was fallen upon him.

Secondly it was well weighed, what a helpe and courage his combination would haue afforded to the Rebels, if hee had obstinately run a rebellious course, for hee was at that time the strongest man of Followers of any one of the Irish in that Province, and his Countrey in strength and fastnesse equall with the worst part of the same, and that which required no lesse respect was the situation of his Countrey, reaching even to the wals of Corke, whereby the greatest part of her Majesties forces, must of necessity haue beene employed in Muskerry, which would haue given great impediment to the prosecution of the service in other parts, whereas by receiving him the warre would bee removed farther off, and the greatest tempest of disturbance avoyded: that hee was deeply infected, and fowly stained with manifold treasons was too manifest, yet this difference was made betweene him and others, that they were in publicke action professed Traytors, and he a Iugling Traytor; and though hee had joined with a forraine Enemy, yet not in so hainous a manner as some other: for they solicited strangers to invade the kingdome, but strangers having invaded the kingdome, solicited him to partake with them; the three Castles (before mentioned) no doubt were great Banken Fla.

HAVEN

CASTLE PARK

- A. The Bulwarks and Ramparts of the forte
- B. The gate house
- C. a small forte well ramped wth a Stone wall of 16 foote hy.
- D. an inner Square wth Soulders lodging in 3 sides a Stonewall on the fourth
- E. and a Counte within marked E
- F. two Square Castles wth flank the Sides of the inner woth. and Shewre the forte from the Battlements above
- G. a drawbridge over the inner ditch

Scale of 100 feet

Banken Fla.

HAVEN

bridles upon him, and in time (no doubt) would haue wrought the effects desired, which was to banish him out of his Countrey: But considering the charge and incumbrance subject to some losse, that would grow in victualling of them, and many lewde and unsettled persons ready to joyne with him (if they had perceived him inclinable to continue a Rebell) which might haue bred newe broyles, and protracted the warres of Mounster in infinitum: Againe the benefit, that by his prosecution and extirpation might haue redounded to her Majesty, was that thereby his Land should haue excheated unto her, which in the opinion of all wise men would haue proved too deare a purchase: Farther, besides his submission and his Sonne that was a prisoner in England, his second Son also and his Castle of Blarney were held as pledges upon him: And whereas the L. Deputie had devised the forme of an oath for the Northern Protectees, he was content to sweare and subscribe to the same oath, and lastly himselfe with foure of the best Barons of Parliament in Mounster, were bound in three thousand pounds for his future loyaltie and subjection, so that hee was bound in heaven and in Earth, before God and before man, by Law and by Nature, and nothing but onely hell was remayning for his farther assurance.

CHAPTER XV.

The Lord President offers the Lord Deputy to send him of his List one or two Regiments. Odonnels death. Tirrels quarter assailed by Sir Samuel Bagnall. The losse on the Rebels part. Tirrell rageth in fury against the inhabitants of Muskry, and retireth into Beare and Desmond. The death of Captaine Harvie. Captaine Flower succeeded Captaine Harvie in the government of Carbury. Cloghane summoned. The Constables brother hanged, and the Castle rendered.

Cormocke being now reduced, the Lord President wrote to the Lord Deputie, signifying him thereof; and withall, that if his Lordship had any use in Connaght for the forces of Mounster, that he might dispose of one or more of the regiment of the same as hee pleased: And also he certified him, that one called James Blake of Galwav. lately arrived from Spaine, did constantly affirme, that Odonnell was dead, both which you may beleeeue was welcome unto the Lord Deputie.

The morning immediately following the day of his submission, which was the two and twentieth of October, Sir Samuel Bagnall placed (as you haue heard) with a Regiment of Foot, and one hundred Horse on the borders of Muskrey, had occasion of service by this meanes: Tirrell with eight hundred Foot, and fortie Horse, was still remaining in the westernmost confines of Muskrey, environed with such fastnesse of woods and boggs, as he thought himselfe secure: The cause of his stay was, for that hee expected the returne of Cormock, by whom hee made account to be waged, for Cormock indeed had not acquainted him with his intent of submission: Sir Samuel Bagnall therefore conjecturing, that so soone as hee should heare of this Lord of Muskery to become a Subject, hee would then retire himselfe to his old haunt in the Mountaines of Beare and Desmond, thought the time either now or never to doe service upon this lightfooted Enemy, and therefore hee called upon Owen Mac Teg of the Drisshan, one of the Mac Carties of Muskery (whom the President had appointed to attend his directions) and requested him (in the edge of the evening) to make tryall if hee could goe unperceived to Tirrells Campe, and bring him word in what place, and in what manner the Rebels were lodged: This Owen Mac Teg very willingly and faithfully performed his employment, and about midnight returned, and reported, that hee had found the Rebels secure (as hee imagined) from all feare or suspition, and would undertake to conduct, and guid the forces directly to their Campe: upon this intelligence it was not long before Sir Samuell and his Companies were all in Armes, disposing them into two bodies, Captaine Sidley (who had the poynt) had five and twenty out of every Company, with officers proportionable for his numbers, and Sir Samuell himselfe, with the rest marched close up after them, and the Horse came in the reare, for the night was darke, the wayes deepe and woody, in this manner they held on till they came so neere to the Rebels quarters, as that they might discerne their fires, then they made halte, and sent Owen Mac Teg, with his cosen Owen Olough one of the Mac Swynes, to discover whether they could perceiue any stirring amongst them, and to descry more particularly the manner of their encamping; they gathering courage by the countenance of the Army, which approached so neere, as they precisely viewed every part thereof, and returning to the Colonell, certified him that they were lodged in three quarters, a little distant the one from the other, at their backe a strong wood, before their face a maine bog halfe a mile broad, and on either side cragged and rocky Mountaines: The Colonell therefore directed Captaine Sidly with the Vanguard to diuide his troopes, and to giue an order all the three quarters at one instant, and commanded the Sergeant Major, Captaine William Power, and Captaine Bostocke with the battle to be his seconds; to make good their undertakings, himselfe marched in the reare, a very small distance from them; and because there was no ground for the Horse to serue in neere the Campe, therefore they were commanded to attend Captaine Minshaw (Lieutenant of the Presidents Horse troope) upon the farther side of the bog to intercept them in their flight: These forces marshalled into this order, the foote were come up within lesse than a furlong of the Rebels quarter, and no doubt had surprised them unperceiued, if a Peece by mischance had not fired by the stumbling of one of the new supplyes, which giving the alarme, some of them drew speedily into Armes, yet our men killed eightie of them dead in the place; Tirrell ran away in his shirt, leaving both his garments and weapons behind him, and his wife followed no better clothed: our men got fiftie horses and hacknies, one thousand Cowes, sheepe and garrans, great store of Armes and baggage, and that which seldome hath beene seene in Irish spoyles, some remnants of Velvet, Holland, Gold, and silver Lace, English apparell of Satten and Velvet, and some quantitie of Spanish coyn, amongst the rest there was a Portmanteau found by the Souldiers, wherein Tirrells Spanish money was confessed to haue bin, but they that got it had more wit then to proclaime it in the market place: But whosoever sweetened their mouthes with these Spanish drugs, sure I am that the Souldiers came all with good courage, well pleased to Corke, except only seventeene which were hurt in the skirmish, all our Captaines and Commanders deserved well, and particularly Captaine Minshaw, who had his horse slaine under him, and himselfe wounded with a Pike: Tirrell finding himselfe to haue sustayned this irrecoverable losse of men, money, clothes and armes, and hearing withall that Cormock was with the President at Corke, imagining that this plot had beene contrived by him (in revenge of this defeate) wreaked his anger upon divers Churles and poore people in those Fastnesse: First burning their corne and cabbines, and afterwards put them to the sword, wherein he little offended the State; these being onely such as had fled from the Garrisons into those Fastnesse, because they would not be subject to Law, and this was towards the latter end of October: Tirrell having found by this woefull experience, that the Fastnesse of Muskery could not secure him from the pursuit of the English, retired himselfe into his old lurking dens, in Beare and Desmond, not fearing but that hee might quietly spend the remainder of this winter in those desolate parts, and the rather because he committed no outrage upon the Subjects adjoyning.

The President perceiving their resolution, being now freed from the cloud (he formerly conceived) of forraine Invasion, and knowing them to be much discouraged, and out of heart, by reason of their late overthrow, which now was past hope to bee recovered, either by Spaine or Cormocke, thought it a fit time (in these respects) to make a speedy prosecution, foreseeing, that the former good fortune effectually pursued, might strike a good stroke to breake the heart of the Rebellion in Mounster; towards the effecting whereof he incontinently resolved to inviron them with Garrisons; but the difficulties that did incounter him in this businesse, were many and great: the long wayes, being neere fourescore miles English from Corke to Beare, the Plaines so deepe and boggie, the Mountaines so rough and craggie, and the carriage Garrans, that are never strong, were not able to travell sixe miles a day; and besides Easterly winds are so seldome upon this coast, as it would aske a long time to transport their Victualls and Munitions by Sea. Notwithstanding, wading through all those inconveniences with industrious travell, and laborious diligence, hee had planted Sir Charles Wilmott with one Regiment at Donkerran, Sir Richard Percie at Kinsale, Captaine George Flower, the Sergeant Major at Bantry, and Captaine Roger Harvie at Baltimore. But the present service received no small prejudice by meanes of the untimely departure of Captaine Roger Harvie, whose heart being overwhelmed with an inundation of sorrowes, and discontentments taken, (though in my Conscience not willingly given) by one that had beene his honourable Friend, as his heart blowen like a bladder, (as the Surgeons reported) was no longer able to minister heate to the vitall parts, and therefore yeelded to that irresistable fate, which at last overtaketh all mortall creatures: The untimely death of this young Gentleman was no small occasion of griefe to the Lord President, not onely that Nature had conjoyned them in the neerest degrees of Consanguinitie, but because his timely beginnings gaue apparent demonstration, that his continuall proceedings would haue given comfort to his Friends, profit to his Countrey, and a deserved Advancement of his owne Fortunes. Great were the services which these Garrisons performed: for Sir Richard Percie and Captaine George Flower with their Troupes, left neither Corne nor horne, nor house unburnt, betweene Kinsale and Rosse; Captaine Roger Harvie, who had with him his brother Captaine Gawen Harvie, Captaine Francis Slingsbie, Captaine William Stafford with their Companies, and also the Companies of the Lord Barry, and the Treasurer, with the Presidents Horse, did the like betweene Rosse and Bantry.

Not many dayes after the death of Captaine Roger Harvie, Captaine George Flower having the charge of Baltimore, and the commanding of the Garrisons thereabouts, which formerly was under Harvies direction, understanding that the Castle of Cloghan was guarded by the Rebels, and that in the same there was a Romish Priest lately come from Rome, taking with him Captaine Francis Slingsbie, and Captaine William Stafford with their Companies of Foot, (besides his owne) he marched unto it, in hope to gaine it, the rather, because he had in his hands one called Donnell Dorrogh, a traytor, brother to the Constable that had the charge thereof: Vpon his summons they refused to yeeld; then hee told the Ward, that if the Constable did not presently render the Castle unto him, that hee would hang his brother in their sight: they said the Constable was gone abroad (but therein they said untruely as afterward it was proved) in conclusion to saue the Priest (whose life they tendered) they persevered obstinately not to yeeld; whereupon Captaine Flower in their sight hanged the Constables brother: Neverthelessse within fower dayes afterward the Priest being shifted away in safetie, the Constable sued for a Protection and rendered the Castle to Captaine Flower. I doe relate this accident to the end the Reader may the more cleerely see, in what reverence and estimation these ignorant superstitious Irish doe hold a Popish Priest, in regard of whose safetie the Constable was content to suffer his brother to perish.

---

CHAP. XVI.

A Branch of a Letter from the Lords of the Councell to the Lord President. The Ensignes of Magistracy redelivered to the Corporation of Kinsale. Of Spanyards defeated at Kinsale, in the time of King Richard the second. The Rising out of the Country committed to the charge of the Lord Barry. The Lord Deputy requires the Lord President to meet him at Galway. Sir George Thornton appoynted to joyne with the Lo. Barry. A Messenger from the Rebell Tirell to the Lord President, and his Answer. The Knight of Kerry defeated. The Knight of Kerry, Thomas Oge and Osulevan Mores Sonne make their submission. A foule murther committed by Osulevan Mores Sonne.

THE Lords of the Councell, by the Letters dated the sixteenth of December, signified their pleasures unto the President; that in regard Florence Mac Cartie was a prisoner in the Tower, his children (to avoyd her Majesties charges) should bee set at libertie, and also the children pledges of others (except the President saw cause to the contrary) to bee enlarged: That her Majestie was pleased that the President should deliver unto the Corporation of Kinsale, their Charter and other Ensignes of Magistracie, and to impose upon them in stead of a fine, the reedifying of their wals at their owne charges, and certaine workemen towards the finishing of the Fort of Castle ny Parke: That her Majestie was pleased at the Presidents request, that a faire and strong house should be built for the President, where hee thought it convenient, to bee defrayed upon the fines and casualties of the Province: That the fort of Haleboling should be presently finished: Lastly, thanks in her Majesties name for his services, liking well of his proceedings with Cormock Mac Dermond, and for the courses he had taken in his returne from Donboy, and of the well disposing of the Garrisons, and

By this Letter it appeares that the President was directed to redeliver unto the Burgesses of Kinsale their Charter, and other their Ensignes of Magistracie, among the which there was a faire large Standard of Damaske with the Armes of England in it: This Standard aforesaid was first delivered unto them (by the commandement of King Henry the eight) by Sir George Carew, the Lord Presidents cosen german, when hee arrived at Kinsale, who not long before the siege of Bollogne) was Admirall of some of the Kings ships: Into the hands of Sir George it was left in safe keeping, when the Spaniards arrived there, and by the same time Sir George Carew, by Queene Elizabeths commandement, it was (as is said) redelivered unto them againe: although this petty note may seeme to some scarce worth the relating, yet for the rarenesse of the accident, I thought it meet to bee remembred: And that the Reader may also understand what a fatall place Kinsale hath beene unto the Spaniards in former times (as well as now) I thinke it not impertinent to relate, what hapned unto them in that port, in Anno 1380. and the fourth yeare of the Raigne of King Richard the second: My Author is Thomas of Walsingham, who lived in those dayes, and thus Englished in Hollinshed.

IN this meane while that the Earle of Buckingham was passing through the Realme of France, the French and Spanish gallies did much mischief on the Coast of England, but about the later end of June, by a fleete of Englishmen of the West Countries, part of them were forced to retire, and take harbour in an haven in Ireland called Kinsale, where being assailed by the Englishmen and Irishmen they were vanquished: so that to the number of foure hundred were slaine, and their chiefe Captaines taken, as Gonzales de vorse, and his brother Martin de Motrigo, Turgo Lord of Morrans: Also the Lord of Reath, Peers Martin of Vermew, Iohn Moditt of Vermew, the Seneschall of Wargarie, the Seneschall of Saint Andrewes, Cornellis of Saint Sebastiano, Paschale de Biskaya, Iohn Martinez, Sopogorge of Saint Sebastiano, and divers others: There were taken foure of their Barges, with a Ballenger, and one and twenty English vessels recovered, which they had robbed and taken away from their Owners: There escaped yet foure (of their notable Captaines) from the hands of our men, Martin Grantz, Iohn Perez Mantago, Iohn Husce Gitario, and one Garcia of Sebastiano: Thus farre Hollingshed, craving the Readers patience, for to some, this old story may seeme to bee a needlesse curiositie, but to proceed.

The President to make the speedier prosecution, and expedition in the affaires of the Province, caused the Rising out of the Countrey to bee assembled to the number of sixteene hundred (at their owne charges) under the conduct of the Lord Barry: These Provinciall Forces were not prepared for any great need that was of their service, it was thought meet to draw as many hands together as conveniently might bee, who according to their manner, for spoyles sake, would not spare their dearest friends. And also it was thought no ill policie to make the Irish draw bloud one upon another, whereby their private quarrels might advance the publike service. The President had first determined himselfe in person with five hundred English, (joyned to the Provincials) to haue taken the field; but his intentions were casually diverted by Letters from the Lord Deputie, who signifying that his Lordship purposed to bee at Galway about the two and twentieth of December, required him (all other businesse set apart) immediatly to repayre thither, to consult about certaine affaires much importing the service of the State, by reason whereof the President appointed Sir George Thornton with 500. English Souldiers, Inhabitants as Vnder-takers in Mounster, to accompany the Lord Barry with the Provincials, and all these to meet together, about the twentyeth of this present, at Donkerran, which was the place of their rendezvous.

In this meane time the Rebelle Tirrell, not liking to stay any longer in the Aire of Mounster, wherein hee had runne many dangers, bethought himselfe of a retreat out of the Province, hoping that the President would condescend to any composition, rather then to bee troubled with his company, whereupon he sent his inward servant Laghlin Odallye (afore mentioned in this discourse) unto Corke, who comming to the President, told him, that his Captaine (meaning Tirrell) would bee content to leaue the Province, and would heereafter this, (so as hee might haue a Pardon, a Pension, and a Company of Foot in her Majesties pay) serue the Queene, and deserue the reward demanded by his future services. The President knowing that for want of food hee would be forced ere the spring of the yeare to depart; And also assuring himselfe (within that time) to get some good draught to bee drawn upon him by some of the Provinciall Rebells, who now being heart-broken, would doe any thing for their Pardons, or for a little money, not onely sleightly rejected his offers, but bid Odalley tell him, That although hee were never so warie, yet hee doubted not before it were long, to haue his head sent unto him in a bag, willing him to forbear to send any more unto him.

While these forces aforesaid were gathering according to the directions afore-recited, the Governor of Kerry losing no opportunity, and forbearing no labour, had the like fortune upon the Knight of Kerry, as Sir Samuel Bagnall had upon Tirrell; for being conducted to his Quarter in the night, killed fortie of his men, and tooke from him all his whole substance, which consisted of five hundred cowes, two hundred garrans, and two moneths provision of Meale and Butter for his Souldiers; which small spoyle was a great losse to the poore Knight: for thereby hee being disfurnished of all his provision, & disabled to minister entertainment to his followers, and having no Castle whereunto he might safely retreat, was constrained (like a Wolfe) to shelter himselfe in waste woods and desolate mountaines, untill he could worke meanes with Sir Charles to accept his humble submission, which incontinently (upon his defeat) hee earnestly solicited, by the meanes of Osulevan More. And surely this Service was of good consequence for the settling of Kerry: for Thomas Oge, induced by the example of the Knight, and likewise Donnell Osulevan, Son to the said Osulevan More, did all joyntly submit themselues, and her Majesties Protection graunted them: The former performed as much as was promised; but the latter, in the interim that hee should haue put in Sureties for his loyaltie, (according to a Clause inserted in his Protection) did in the malice of his heart to our Nation, commit a most base and traiterous murder upon a Sergeant and ten Souldiers going after Sir Charles towards Donkerran, who not suspecting any false measure at his hands, being lately protected, were most cruelly butchered by that inhumane perjured Rebell: His father, olde Osulevan conceived so great discontentement against him for his damnable fact, as hee threatned to withdraw from him his favour, his Blessing and Birth-right: But of this sufficient.

THE CITIE OF LIMERICK

Between Page 103 & 104

---

CHAP. XVII.

Sir Charles Wilmot chiefe Commander of the forces in the absence of the Lord President. The Rebels make three divisions of their forces. Tirrell afraid flies the Province. The Lord Barry and Sir George Thornton joyne their forces with Sir Charles Wilmot. A skirmish entertayned. A prey taken from the Rebels out of the Fastnesse. Divers Rebels submitted themselues. William Burke, Iohn O Connor Kerry, and Osulevan Beare with the Bownoghs fled out of the Province. The Rebels losse in their passage through the county of Corke. And the hard shift they made over the Shenan. The good service done upon the Rebels by the Sherife of the county of Typperary. Captaine Henry Malby slaine. Beare, Bantry, and Dorsies spoyled, and the Castles of Ardea and Carrignesse rendred. Captaine Tasse employed against the Rebels in Carbry. The Popes Vicar slaine, and the Rebels defeated. The Carties of Carbry submit themselues to the Lord President.

THE Lord Barry, and Sir George Thornton were now upon this their third march towards their rendezvous at

Donkerran, there to attend the directions of Sir Charles Wilmot, who in the Presidents absence (for by this time hee was upon his way to Galway) did command all that Army in chiefe, composed of the Garrison of Kerry, and of the Garrisons of Bantry, Kinsale, Baltimore, &c. aforementioned, who with great valour and discretion discharged the same: The Rebels understanding by continuall advertisement of the great preparations made, to rouse and hunt them out of their Fastnesse, thought fit in their Councils to divide themselues in three severall parts, to the intent that her Majesties forces then vnited, might likewise bee severed and divided in severall prosecutions, whereby each party might be the lesse indangered: For if the English should neglect any one part of them, they might harrasse and spoyle the Subject, for whose defence a good part of the Army must bee withdrawne: This resolution being taken, Osulevan Beare and William Burke with seven hundred men were appoynted to remaine in Beare, other foure hundred was appoynted for Carbery, to bee commanded by Sir Owen Mac Carties sonnes, and the third division (which was five hundred strong) and commanded by Captaine Tirrell, were to goe with the Lord Fits Maurice into Kerry: But Tirrell being upon his pretended march for Kerry, fearing to runne so hard a fortune, suddenly altered his former determinations; and notwithstanding that hee had lately received a great imprest of Spanish money from Osulevan Beare, and farther he promised unto him

1500. hundred more in good rials of plate, and one thousand Cowes to stay with him but three moneths longer, resolved with all possible expedition to leaue the Province, and therefore acquainting the Lord Fitz Maurice with his intention, without farther consultation, giving a deafe eare to any contrary persuasions, leaving all his carriages, sicke men, and other impediments behind him, set forward on his hasty Iourney, and never looked backe till hee came into O Carrels Countrey, which is from the Mountaine of Shewlogher (where hee began his march) no lesse than sixtie Irish miles, and this his departure was the same day that our forces should meet at their rendezvous, whose defection from the rest, made the worke in hand much more easie to bee effected.

Our forces under the Lord Barry and Sir George Thornton met with Sir Charles Wilmot, upon the seven and twentieth of December; the thirtieth wee camped in Glangarrem, on a little plot of dry ground, (environed with woods and bogs) of so small capacitie, as most of our Guards and Sentinels were held either on the bog or in the edge of the wood, and yet was there not so much firme ground together, within five miles of that place; within two miles thereof encamped Donnell Osulevan, and William Burke with his Bonnaghts: Before the Campe was settled, the Rebels entertayned a skirmish for an houres space, and hurt three of our men, whereof Captaine Staffords Lieutenant, William Ieffries was one; the same night they gaue us an alarme, and powred into our quarter a volley of shot, but being encountered with our Guards adjoyning were repulsed, and driven into the wood.

The one and thirtieth, there was a Convoy sent to Donkerran for Victuals: and the same day Sir Charles Wilmot sent foure hundred of the risings out under the command of Captaine Iohn Barry, and two hundred of the Armie in List under the command of Thomas Selby, Lieutenant to Captaine Francis Slingsbie, to beat the Fastnesse where the Rebels with their cartell lodged: their quarter was entred by our men, and their cartell seized, whereupon ensued a bitter fight, maintained without intermission for sixe howers, neverthelesse they kept the prey they had gotten; the Enemy not leaving their pursuit, untill they came in sight of the Campe: for whose reliefe two Regiments were drawen forth, to giue countenance, and Downings, Lieutenant to Sir Francis Barkley, was sent with one hundred and twenty choise men to the succour of Barry and Selby, who in the reare were so hotely charged by the Rebels, that they came to the Sword and Pike, and the skirmish continued till night parted them: many were slaine on either side, but the greatest losse fell upon the Traytors: there was taken from them in that dayes service, 2000 Cowes, 4000 Sheepe, and 1000 Garrans.

Immediately vpon this Defeat, many of the Coun-they that escaped, leaving the Rebels, having before lost all their goods, submitted themselves to the Governour, and obtained mercie; Hugh Mac Swine and Owen Grayne, with eightie of their followers, and other of the Bownoghs likewise became suiters for her Majesties protection, (which to weaken the adverse partie) was also graunted; whose revolt, or rather returne, so disturbed and distracted William Burke, the chiefe Commander of Osulevans forces, who did his endeavour, (by assaulting them in their way to Sir Charles) to resist their submission, wherein some men were lost; and not prevayling in the same, purposed to follow the steps of Tirrell his forerunner; and therefore wished Osulevan Beare, either instantly to rise with him, or else to shift for himselfe as well as he could: for a longer stay in those parts could promise him nothing but apparant ruine and destruction. And when the other urged the intertainment that hee had given unto him and his Company before hand: Burke answered, that hee had already lost, not that onely which of him was received, but whatsoever else he either brought into the Province, or gained therein, besides the slaughter of many his Followers and neere kinsmen, whom he prized and valued (in his affection) aboue all the King of Spaines treasure; and therefore with extreame passion (as was reported) cursing and damning himselfe for staying so long in Mounster; in all hast with two hundred men (for the rest were all either slaine or protected) hee fled and followed Captaine Tirrell into OCarrols Countrey:

Osulevan finding his estate desperate, that either hee must starve in Mounster, or begge in Vlster, made choise of the lesse evill, and therefore himselfe and Iohn OConnor Kerry kept Company with the Bonnoghs, content to partake with their fortunes, till hee might get to Tyrone.

As they passed by the skirts of Muskery, they were skirmished withall by the sonnes of Teg Mac Owen Cartie, where they lost some of their men, and most of their carriage; in passing by Liscarcell, Iohn Barry, brother to the Vicecount, with eight Horsemen and fourty foote charged their reare at the foord of Belaghan, where he slew and hurt many of them, and of his part one Horseman was slaine.

When they came to the River of the Shenan, they finding the River high, and no boats nor troughs to passe them over into Connaght, they killed many of their horses, and made shift with their hides to make certaine little boats, called in Irish Nevogs, in the which they transported their men and baggage: Neverthelesse before all were past the River, the Sherife of the county of Typperarie, fell upon their reare and slew many of them; being in Connaght they passed safely through the county of Galway, untill they came into the Kellies Countrey, where they were fought withall by Sir Thomas Burke, the Earle of Clanriccards brother, and Captaine Henry Malby, who were more in number then the Rebels: Neverthelesse when they saw that either they must make their way by the sword or perish, they gaue a braue charge upon our men, in the which Captaine Malby was slaine, upon whose fall Sir Thomas and his Troopes fainting, with the losse of many men, studied their safeties by flight, and the rebels with little harme marched into Orwykes Countrey.

The next morning being the fourth of Ianuary, 1602. Sir Charles comming to seeke the Enemy in their Campe, hee entered into their quarter without resistance, where hee found nothing but hurt and sicke men, whose paines and liues by the Souldiers were both determind: The governour sent the Lord Barry with some of his light foote after them, but all in vaine, for they flew so swift with the wings of feare, as passing by many preyes directly in the way (as they passed) yet they never made so much stay as to molest either the Cattle or their Keepers.

Heereupon Sir Charles with the English Regiments overran all Beare and Bantry, destroying all that they could find meet for the reliefe of men, so as that countrey was wholly wasted: He sent also Captaine Flemming with his Pinnace, and certaine Souldiers into Osulevans Iland; Hee tooke there certaine Boats, and an English Barke, which Osulevan had gotten, and kept for his transportation into Spaine, when he should be enforced thereunto; they tooke also from thence certaine Cowes and Sheepe, which were reserved there as in a sure storehouse, and put the Charles to the sword that inhabited therein. The Warders of the Castles of Ardea, and Carricknesse on the sixth of the same moneth dispayring of their Master Osulevans returne, rendered both their Castles and their liues to the Queenes mercy: so that although hee should haue Animum revertendi, he had neither place of safetie whereunto hee might retyre, nor Corne or Cattel to feed himselfe, much lesse to uphold or renew any warre against the State.

The sharpnesse of this Winter journey did exceedingly weaken our Companies: for the Mountaines of Beare being at that time quite covered with snow, tasted the strong bodies, whereby many returned sicke, and some unable to endure the extreamity, ~~and standing continually~~. But whilst this service was in prosecution in Beare, the President on his journey towards the Lord Deputie, chanced to meet with some of the Countrey risings out, to the number of foure hundred foote or thereabouts, that came short of the rest, that were under the commands of the Lord Barry, and Sir George Thornton: And understanding that the Sonnes of Sir Owen Mac Cartie, and Donnogh Keugh, brother to Florence Mac Cartie, were retyred with their Creates and Followers into the strengths of Carbery, his Lordship commanded Captaine Taffe (with the said risings out) fourtie of Sir Edward Wingsfields Company, and his owne troope of Horse to draw into those parts, and to endeavour the best service hee could upon them: Whilest the rest were busied by the Governour of Kerry in Desmond as aforesaid, wherein it pleased God to giue him good successe, for on the fifth of Ianuary, his foote entering their Fastnesse, tooke a prey of two or three hundred Cowes and Garrans; the Rebels in pursuit of their Cattle, gaue them so braue a charge, as they were disordered, whereby some of them were slaine, which Captaine Taffe perceiving, being in the head of his Horse troope, in the skirt of the Fastnesse, and espying some of their Horsemen to doe much hurt upon our foote, charge them into the wood, slew foure of their Horsemen, and put all the rest to rout, wherewith our men being encouraged pursued them: Owen Mac Eggan (the Popes Apostolike Vicar so often before mentioned) to put fresh heart into his Company, with his sword drawne in one hand, and his portius and beades in the other, with one hundred men led by himselfe, he came boldly up to the sword, and mainetayned a hot skirmish, untill hee was slaine with a shot, whereupon his men (together with a fresh charge of our horse) were so amazed and terrified, partly by his death, and partly by their owne danger, that they brake instantly, and for better expedition throwing away their Armes, leaped into the river Bandon, hoping by that meanes to escape, but that little auailed them, for they all for the most part were either killed or drowned in the river; there were slaine in this service (besides Owen Mac Eggan, who was of more worth then all the rest) aboue one hundred and twenty Rebels, and of the Provinciall rising out of our part, a good number lost their liues, and many of Captaine Taffes horses hurt, wee got the Armes of 100. and fourtie, and all their horses, cowes, sheepe and garrans, that were in the Countrey neere adjoyning: There was also taken a Papist Priest, being as it seemed a Chaplaine to Mac Eggan, whom the President (shortly after) caused to be executed in Corke.

Vpon this discomfiture, the Carties who formerly had beene Petitioners to the President for protection, but denyed, became suitors to Captaine Taffe in the like, who not knowing of the good successe, that the Governour had against the other Rebels (according to direction before given him by the President, that hee should accept their submission, after a blow given them, if it were humbly sought) did grant protection to them and their Followers; and upon the Presidents returne from Galway, Captaine Taffe having then in his company upon the high way, not farre from Moyallo, presented them to his Lordship, who with great shew of unfayned penitence, desired his allowance, and acceptation of their submission, who to gratifie the service of Captaine Taffe, and to ratifie his promise assented thereunto, whereby all Carbery (a very large and spacious Countrey) was wholly reduced to subjection, no one open Traytor remayning therein. A principall meanes of this suddaine and vniuersall reduction, was the death of that traitorly Priest, Owen Mac Eggan, which doubtlesse was more beneficiall to the State, then to haue gotten the head of the most capitall Rebelle in Mounster, for the respect that was borne unto him (by reason of his authority from the Pope) and the credit which hee had obtayned in Spaine, was so great, as his power was in a manner absolute over them all, and he onely was the meanes of their obdurate obstinacie: his dignity in being the Popes Vicarius Apostolicus, did hold them in vassallage unto him, and the livings given him in Mounster by the Popes grant, were to be valued (if hee might quietly haue enjoyed them) at three thousand pounds per Annum. And farther to ingage the Popish Clergy of Ireland unto him, hee had power to dispose at his pleasure of all the spirituall livings in the Province of Mounster, by which authority, together with the credit he had gotten with the King of Spaine (well testified by the trust committed to him in transporting and disposing the Spanish money, last brought into Ireland) he had obtayned in a manner all power, both over the temporality and spirituality of Mounster, and to depaint him in his true colours, a more malicious Traytor against the State and Crowne of England, never breathed, which well appeared by the barbarious tyranny hee exercised upon his owne Countriemen; for assoone as any prisoners were taken (though of his owne Countrey, birth and religion) yet if they had served the Queene, he caused them first (in piety as he pretended) to bee confessed and absolved, and instantly (in his owne sight) would hee cause them to bee murdered, which religious tyranny in him was held for sanctity. The President upon his returne to Corke, employed certaine Messengers whom hee might trust, into the Countrey to make search in such places as Mac Eggan vsually resided, for such bookes and papers as were belonging unto him: divers bookes of schoole divinity (for the most part) were gotten, all which by the Presidents gift fell to my share, and certaine papers, amongst the which I will onely insert three in this present relation; the first contayning large indulgences, granted by P. Clement the eight, to such of the Irish as should beare Armes against Gods chosen Servant, and their annoynted Soveraigne the Queenes Majesty, the tenor whereof here ensueth.

---

---

CHAP. XVIII.

Pope Clement the eighth his Indulgenec to the Irish that were in Rebellion. A Letter from Pope Clement the eighth unto Tyrone and the Irish Rebels, animating them to persevere in Rebellion. Pope Clement the eighth his Bull far the granting of spirituall livings unto Owen Mac Egan.

Pope Clement the eighth his Indulgence to the Irish that were in Rebellion.

CLemens P. 8. Vniversis, & singulis venerabilibus fratribus, Archiepiscopis, Episcopis, & Prelatis, nec non dilectis filijs, Principibus, Comitibus, Baronibus, ac populis Regni Hiberniæ salutem, et Aposto- licam Benedictionem: cum jam diu, sicut accepimus, vos Romanorum Pontificum Prædecessorum nostrorum, ac nostris & Apostolice sedis Cohortationibus adducti, ad vestram libertatem recuperandam, eamq; adversus Hereticos tuendam & conservandam, bonæ memoriæ Iacobo Giraldino (qui duru servitutis jugu vobis ab Anglis sanctæ ecclesiæ desertoribus impositum, summo animi ardore depellere dum vixit pro viribus procuravit) Deinde Iohanni Giraldino ejusdem Iacobi Consobrino, & novissime dilecto filio nobili viro Hugoni principi Onel, dicto Comiti Tironensi, Baroni Dungenaniæ, et Capitaneo generali Exercitus Catholici in Hiberniâ conjunctis animis et viribus presto fueritis, ac opem et auxilium prestiteritis: ipsiq; Duces & eorum Milites, nostrum Domini exercitum illis assistentes progressu temporis plurima egregia facinora contra hostes viriliter pugnare perstiterint, et in posterum præstare parati sunt; Nos, ut vos, ac Dux, et Milites prædicti alacrius in expeditionem hanc contra dictos Hereticos opem in posterum etiam præstare studeatis, spiritualibus gratijs et favoribus vos prosequi volentes, eorundem Prædecessorum nostrorum exemplo adducti, ac de Omnipotentis Dei misericordiâ ac beatorum Petri et Pauli Apostolorum ejus authoritate confisi, vobis omnibus and singulis qui prædictum Hugonem Tyronensem ducem ejusg exercitum Catholicæ fidei assertores & propugnatores sequimini, ac illis vos adjunxeritis, aut Consilio, Favore, Commeatibus, armis, alijsq; bellicis rebus seu quacung ratione eis in hac expeditione operam de-

*deritis, ipsig Hugoni Duci ejusg exercitus Militibus univrsis and singulis, si verè pænitentes & confessi, ac etiam, si fieri poterit, sacra Communione refert fueritis plenariam omnium peccatorum suorum veniam & remissionem, ac eandem que proficiscentibus ad bellum contra Turcas, & ad recuperationem Terræ sanctæ per Romanos Pontifices concedi solita est, misericorditer in Domini concedimus, non obstantibus, si opus sit, nostris Decretis de non concedendis indulgentijs ad instare, ac susceptionis Indulgentiarum occasione anni Iubilæi alijsq constitutionibus et ordinationibus Apostolicis cæterisq contrarijs quibuscung.
 Verùm quia difficile foret præsentibus nostras ad omnium quorum interest noticiam pervenire volumus, ut earum exemplis etiam impressis manu alicujus Notarij publici subscriptis ac Sigillo personæ in dignitat' Ecclesiastica Constitutæ munitis eadem fides ubiq habeatur quæ ijsdem præsentibus haberetur.
 Datum Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum, sub annulo Piscatoris, die decimo octavo Aprilis, 1600. Pontifi-catus nostri, Anno Nono. Subscrip.*

The second which was found among Mac Eggans Papers, was a Letter written from the holy Father Pope Clemens the eighth, unto Hugh Oneale Earle of Tyrone, to exhort him and all his Adherents, to persevere, (for the defence of the Catholique cause) in their unnaturall Rebellion; from the Originall whereof this following Copie is extracted.

A Letter from Pope Clement the eight unto Tyrone, and the Irish Rebels, animating them to persevere in Rebellion.

Dilecte Fili Nobilis vir. Salutem et Apostolicam benedictionem cognovimus ex literis nobilitatis tuæ & ex hijs quæ dilectus filius Petrus Lombardus Civis nostræ præpositus Cameracensis nobis coram exposuit sacrum fœdus, quod tu & quamplures Principes & procures, & Nobiles primarij regni istius Dei benignitate iniistis charitatis glutino Colligatum conservari & augeri quodquæ eiusdem Domini exercitum ope & virtute prospere à nobis pluries pugnatum est adversus Anglos Ecclesie & fidei desertores magnam ex his voluptatem in Domini cepimus, ipsig Patri miserecordiar' Deo gratias egimus, qui adhuc in regno istoreliquit sibi multa millia virorum qui non curvaverint genua sua ante Baal. Hi enim impias hæreses, & prophanas no vitates non sunt sequuti, imo eas detestati fortiter pugnant, pro hæreditate maiorum suorum, pro fidei salute, integritate et unitate cum ecclesia retinenda, quæ una est Catholica et Apostolica extra quam non est salus; laudamus egregiam pietatem et fortitudinem tuam fili & principum, et cæterorum omnium qui tecum juncti ac federati nulla pro Dei gloria pericula recusant, seg majoribus suis qui bellicæ virtutis & Catholicæ Religionis studio, ac laude imprimis floruerunt dignos nepotes & justos Successores ostendunt et palam*

*profitentur: conservate filij hanc mentē, conseruate unionem, et consensionem vestram, & Deus Omnipotens, Deus Pacis & Concordiæ erit vobiscum, & pugnabit pro vobis, & quemadmodum fecit pros-ternet inimicos suos ante faciem nostram; Nos autem qui Nobilitatem tuam & vos omnes avitæ fidei & gloriæ imitatores paternæ, a manus & gerimus in visceribus Iesu Christi, non cessamus Deum orare nostrum pro vestra felicitate & salute, vestrig solliciti sumus & erimus semper quantum cum Deo poterimus, atque ubi opus fuerit scribemus effi-caciter ad Reges & Principes Catholicos filios nostros ut vobis & causæ vestræ omni ope suffragentur:
Cogitamus etiam propediem mittere ad vos peculiarem
Nuntium nostrū, & Iulius sanctæ sodalitæ, in qua Deo auctore meritis licet imparibus præsidemus vestrum, pium, prudentem, zelo Dei predict' et nobis probatu, qui nostri erga nos honoris testis sit vobisq omnibus in rebus ubi usus venerit adjumento sit ad salutarem & necessariam Unionem vestram conservandam, ac Catholican fidem propagandam, ac omnia denique pro sui muneris Officio, officianda, quibus Dei honor & cultus in regno isto augeatur.
Interea placuit has nostras literas ad vos præmittere testes amoris nostri, in vos et Regnum istud, et ut vos omnes tanquam filios nostros in Christo dilectos paterno affectu consolaremur; ipsum veró Petrum Lombardum, quem Nobilitas sua oratorem & negotiorum gestorem constituit apud nos, et jam libenter audivimus, et deinceps audiemus, tibi veró et cæteris*

qui tibi unanimes pro fidei Catholicæ propugnatione adhærent, nostram & Apostolicam benedictionem benignè impartimur; Denig precamur ut Angelos emittat in circuitu vestro, & pios conatus vestros sua cœlesti gratia dirigat vosq; dextra suæ potentiae perpetuo tueatur. Datum Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum, sub Annulo Piscatoris, die 20. Ianuarij, Anno 1601. Pontificatus nostri anno 9.

Silvius Antonianus Cardinalis.

Dilecto Filio Nobili viro Vgoni Principi Nælio, Exercitus Catholici in Hibernia Duci, & Capitaneo Generali.

The third, is an instrument here immediately following, comprehending the prescript forme of the Popes Bull, vsually granted in the presentation to spirituall dignities, together with the oath to the Popes supremacie, and of the Articles of faith, whereunto the Popish Clergie are enjoyned to subscribe: All which things being not so familiar in this land (thanked bee God) as in former ages, and many no doubt desirous to be made acquainted with the particulars thereof, although it may seeme somewhat tedious, by reason of the prolixitie, yet haue I thought good in this place, to transcribe the same verbatim according to the originall.

Pope Clement 8. his Bull for the granting of spirituall Livings to Owen Mac Egan.

Clemens Episcopus servus servorum Dei: Dermitio episcopo Corrag' salutem & Apostolicam benedictionem: Romani pontificis providentiam circumspecta Ecclesijs & Monasterijs singulis, quæ vacationis in-commoda deplorare noscuntur: ut gubernatorum utilium fulciantur præsidio prospicit diligenter, & personis Ecclesiasticis qui buslibet, ut in suis oppor-tunitatibus, Congruum suscipiant relevamen subventionis auxilio, prout decens est, providet oppor-tunè. Cum itag sicut accepimus Monasterium Ab-batia nuneupatum loci de Namona sancti Benedicti, vel alterius ordinis, Corrag' Dioc'. certo modo vacaverit, & vacet ad præsens, licet quidam Larcus schismaticus authoritate pretensæ Reginae Angliæ, jam à multis annis citra Monasterium illiusque fractus redditus, & proventus usurpaverit, & in suos damnabiles usus converterit, & adhuc & con-vertit: Nos volentes tam eidem Monasterio, de gubernatore utili, & idoneo perquem circumspectè regi, & salubriter dirigi valeat, quum dilecto filio Eugenio Mac Egan dictæ Dioc' Bacchalaureo in theologia, et magistro in artibus apud nos de literarum scientia, vitæ ac morum honestate alijsq probitalis, ac virtutum meritis multipliciter commendato, ut commodius sustentari valeat de alicuius subventionis auxilio providere ipsumque Eugenum præmissorum suorum meritorum intuitu favore prosequi gratioso, & à quibusvis excommunicationis suspensionib' & interdictis; alijsque Ecclesiasticis sententijs censuris à jure, vel ab homine quavis occasione vel causa latis, si quibus quomodolibet accomodatus existat ad effectum præsentium duntaxat consequendum harum seriò absolventes, & absolutum fore consentes, nec non verum & ultimum dicti Monasterij vacationis modum, etsi illo quævis reservatio generalis, & in corpore juris clausa resultet, præsentibus pro expresso habentes fraternitati tuæ per Apostolica scripta mandamus ostendantus, si per diligentem examinationem dictam Eugeniique idoneam repereris ad ipsum Monasterium in commendam obtinendum, super quo conscientiam tuam oneramus, Monasterium prædict' quæ cura & conventu curet, ac cujus & illi forsan annexorum fructuum redditus, & proventus centum & quinquaginta marcharum sterlingorum, secundum communem estimationem valorem annuu, ut dictus Eugenius asserit non excedunt quovismodo, & excujuscunque persona seu per liberam cessionem cujusvis de illius regimine & administratione in Romana curia, vel extra eam, & coram notario publico et testibus fide dignis sponte factam vacat, et si illius provisio ad sedem eandem specialiter vel generaliter pertineat, et super eodem regimine administratione inter aliquos his habita, cujus statum etiam præsentibus haberi volumus pro expresso penderit indecisa Domini de tempore dat', presentium eidem Monasterio de Abbate prouisum, aut illud alteri commendatum canonicè non existat, cum annexis hujusmodi ac omnibus juribus, & pertinentijs suis eidem Eugenio quatenus illud commendari consueuerit per eum quoad vinerit, tenendum, regendum, gubernandum, ita quòd liceat eidem Eugenio debitis & consuetis ipsius Monasterij supportatis oneribus, ac tertia parte illius fructuum reddituum & proventuum restaurationem ipsius fabricæ, seu ornamentorum emptionem, vel fulcimentum, aut pauperum alimoniam, prout major suaserit aut exegerit necessitas omnibus alijs deductis annis singulis impertita; de residuis illius fructibus, redditibus, & proventibus disponere & ordinare, sicuti ipsius Monasterij Abbates qui pro tempore fuerant, de illis disponere & ordinare potuerunt, seu & debuerunt, alienatione tamen quorumcung honorum immobilium, & preciosorum mobilium dicti monasterij sibi pænitus interdicta auctoritate nostra commendes curam ipsius Monasterij, ac hujusmodi regimen & administratione eidem Eugenio in spiritualibus & in temporalibus plenariè committendo. Ac illi in adipiscenda possessione, seu quasi regimini & administratione, bonorum Monasterij hujusmodi assistendo facias sibi à dilectis filijs, vassalis, & alijs subditis ejusdem monasterij consueta servitia, & jura sibi ab eis debita, integrè exhiberi contradictores auctoritatis nostræ predicta appellatione postposita compescendo: Non obstantibus fœlicis recordationis Bonifacij, P. 8. predecessoris nostri & alijs apostolicis constitutionibus, ac monasterij & ordinis prædict' etiam juramento confirmatione apostolica, vel quavis firmitate alia roboratis statutis & consuetudinibus contrarijs quibuscung. Aut si vassalis & alijs subditis prefatis, vel quibusvis alijs communiter, vel divisim ab eadem sit sede indultum quod interdici, suspendi & excommunicari non possint per literas apostolicas, non facientes plenam & expressam, ac de verbo in verbum de indubitato huiusmodi mentione. Volumus autem quod propter commendam monasterij huiusmodi monasterium predictum in spiritualibus, non lædatur & in temporalibus detrimenta non sustineat, sed illius congruè supportentur onera consueta, utque postquam dictus Eugenius repertus fuerit idoneus, & antequam dictum monasterium ei commendetur fidem Catholicam iuxta articulos pridem a dicta sede propositos, in manibus tuis iuxta unam profiteri omnino teneatur, alioquin presens gratia, & omnia que inde sequentur nulla sint, tuque aliter commendans a collatione beneficiorum suspensus sis eo ipso, sicque suspensus remaneas donec relaxationem suspensionis huiusmodi à sede predicta merueris obtinere, ac quod antequam dictus Eugenius regimini, & administrationi predictis se in aliquo misceat in eisdem manibus tuis nostro & Romanæ Ecclesiæ nomine fidelitatis debitæ solitum prestat iuramentum iuxta altera formis presentibus adnotatur, ac professionis quam idem Eugenius faciet, et iuramenti quod prestabit formas huiusmodi; nobis de verbo ad verbum per eius patentes literas suo sigillo immunitas per proprium munitium quantociùs destinare procures. Et insuper si dictus Eugenius ad hoc repertus idoneus fuerit, ut prefertur, ei nunc perinde irritum decernimus, & mane si serius super his à quoquam quavis authoritate, scienter vel ignoranter attentari contigerit, ac si die dat' presentium eidem Eugenio ad id reperto idoneo monasterium predictum cum interpositione decreti huiusmodi mandavimus commendari: Forma autem iuramenti hec est. Ego Eugenius Abbas Monasterij, Abbatiae nuncupati loci de Namona sancti Benedicti, vel alterius ordinis Corragen' dioc' ab hac hora ni antea fidelis ero obediens beato Petro sanctaeque Apostolicae Romanae Ecclesiae, & Domino nostro Domino Clementi Papae octavo eiusque successoribus canonice intrantibus: Non ero in consilio aut consensu vel facto ut vitam perdant aut membrum, seu capiantur aut in eos violenter manus quomodolibet ingerantur vel iniuriae aliquae inferatur quovis quesito colore; consilium verò quod mihi credituri sunt per se aut Nuntios seu literas ad eorum damnum me sciente nemini pendam. Papatum Romanum & regale sancti Petri adjutor eis ero ad retinendum & defendendum contra omnium hominum legatum Apostolice sedis in eundo & redeundo, honorifice tractabo & in suis necessitatibus adiuvabo. Iura, honores, privilegia & authoritatem Romanae ecclesiae Domini nostri Pape et successorum suorum conservare et defendere, augere et promovere curabo. Nec ero in consilio vel facto seu in tractatu in quibus contra ipsum dominum nostrum vel eandem Romanam Ecclesiam aliqua sinistra seu prejudicialia personarum nostri honoris status et potestatis eorum machinentur, et si talia à quibuscung tractari novero, vel procurari impediam, hoc pro posse et quanto citus potero comode significabo eidem domino nostro vel alteri per quem ad ipsius notitiam possit per venire Regulus sanctorum patrum decreta, ordinationes, sententias, provisiones, reservationes, et mandata apostolica totis viribus observabo, et faciam ab alijs observari. Hereticos, Schismaticos, et rebelles domino nostro, vel successoribus predictis pro posse persequar, et impugnabo, vocatus ad Synodum veniam nisi propeditus fuero Canonica præpeditio; possessiones vero ad mensam meam pertinentes, non vendam, neg donabo, neg impignorabo, neg de nouo infeudabo, vel aliquo modo alienabo, & cum consensu conventus Monasterii mei inconsulto Romano Pontifice, sic me Deus adiuvet & hæc sancta Dei evangelia. Forma vero professionis fidei talis est. Ego Eugenius firma fide credo & profiteor omnia, & singula quæ continentur in Symbolo fidei, qua sancta Romana Ecclesia utitur, viz.

Credo in unum Deum Patrem Omnipotentem factorem Cæli & terræ visibilium omnium et in visibilium, et in unum Dominum Iesum Christum filium Dei unigenitum, et ex Patre natu ante omnia, secula, Deum de Deo, Lumen de lumine, deum verum de Deo vero genitum non factum, consubstantialem Patri, per quem omnia facta sunt, qui propter nos homines, et propter nostram salutem descendit de cælis, et incarnatus est de spiritu sancto ex Maria Virgine, et homo factus est, crucifixus etiam pro nobis sub Pontio Pilato, passus et sepultus est, et resurrexit tertio die

secundum Scripturas, et ascendit in Cœlum, sedet ad dextram Patris, et iterum venturus est cum gloria judicare viuos et mortuos, uius regni non erit finis; et in spiritum sanctum dominum & vnificantem, qui ex patre, filioq; procedit, qui cum patre & filio simul adoratur, et conglorificatur, qui locutus est per Prophetas, et unam sancta Catholicam et Apostolicam ecclesiam; Confiteor unum Baptisma in remissionem peccatorum, et expecto resurrectionem mortuorum, et vitam venturi sæculi, Amen; Apostolicas et Ecclesiasticas Traditiones reliquasq; ejusdem Ecclesiæ observationes et constitutiones firmissime admitto et complector. Ite sacram Scripturam iuxta eum sensum quem tenuit et tenet sancta Mater Ecclesia, cuius est judicare de vero sensu et interpretatione sacrarum Scripturarum admitto, nec eam unqua nisi juxta unanime consensum patrum accipiam et interpretabor; profiteor quog vere et propriè septem esse Sacramenta novæ Legis à Iesu Christo Domino nostro instituta, atque ad salutem humani generis licet non omnia singulis necessaria, viz. Baptismum, Confirmationem, Eucharistiam, Pœnitentiam, extremam Vnctionem, Ordinem & Matrimonium; illag gratiam conferre, ex his Baptismum, Confirmationem & Ordinem sine sacrilegio reiterari non posse. Receptos quoque & approbatos Ecclesiæ Catholicæ Ritus in supradictorum omnium Sacramentorum solemni administratione recipio, & admitto omnia & singula quæ de peccato originali, et de Iustificatione in sacro sancta Tridantina Synodo definita, et declarata fuerunt amplector, et recipio ; profiteor pariter in Missa offerri Deo verum proprium & propitiatorium Sacrificium pro vivis & defunctis, atque in Sanctissimo Eucharistiæ Sacramento esse verè realiter & substantialiter Corpus & Sanguinem una cum Anima & Divinitate Domini nostri Iesu Christi fierique conversionem totius sub-stantiæ Panis et Corporis et totius substantiæ Vini in sanguinem, quam conversionem Catholica Ecclesia Transubstantiationem appellat. Fateor ut sub altera tantum specie totum atque integrum Christum verumq Sacramentum sumi constanter teneo purgatorium esse animasq ibi detentas fidelium suffragijs iuvare, similiter et sanctos unà cum Christo regnantes venerandos atq invocandos esse eosq orationes Deo pro nobis offerre, atq eoru reliquias esse venerandos ; firmissimè assero imagines Christi et Deiparæ semper Virginis, nec non aliorum Sanctoru habendas et retinendas esse ac eis debitum honorem & venerationem esse impartendum, Indulgentiarum etiam potestatem Christo in Ecclesia relictam fuisse, illarumq usum Christiano populo unanimes salutarem esse affirmo sanctam Catholicam et Apostolicam Romanam Ecclesiam omnium Eccle-siarum Matrem et magnam agnosco ; Romano Pontifici beati Petri Apostolorum principis successori ac Iesu Christi Vicario veram obedientiam spondeo ac Iuro. Cætera item omnia à sacris Canonibus & Oecumenicis Consilijs, ac præcipuè a Sacrosanctâ Tridentina Synodo tradita, definita, & declarata indubitanter recipio ; profiteor simulque contraria omnia atque Hæreses quascung ab Ecclesia damnatas

& anathematizatas, ego pariter damno rejicio & anathematizo. Hanc veram Catholicam Fidem extra quam nemo salvus esse potest, quam in præsentī sponte profiteor, & veraciter teneo eandem integram et inviolatam, usq; ad extremum vitæ spiritum constantissimè Deo adjutante retinere, & confiteri atq; à meis subditis, vel illis quorum cura in munere meo spectabit, teneri, doceri, & prædicari quantum in me erit curaturum. Ego idem Eugenius spondeo, voueo, et juro, sic me Deus adjuvet, et hæc sancta Dei Evangelia. Dat' Romæ apud Sanctum Petrum Anno Incarnationis Domini, 1595. Pridie Calend. Novemb' pontificatus nostri Anno quarto.

Let the understanding Reader now surcease to marvell, that the Bishop of Rome doth striue and struggle to depose Princes, and to animate and incourage Subjects to heathenish and inhumane murders, and rebellions, since hee dareth (like the ancient Gyants) to attempt and assault Heaven it selfe, and to displant and displace from the Throne of his Majestie Christ Iesus himselfe, who is God to be blessed for evermore: what is it else, but to make the Precepts and Traditions of men, equivalent with the doctrine and Commandements of God? what is it else but to usurpe an absolute and universall power and authoritie over the flocke of Christ, (as his Lieutenant and Vicar) for the warrant whereof hee hath no Commission, nor was hee called thereunto as Aron was? Lastly, what is it else but to remooue and pull downe the Son of God from his triumphant glory, where he sitteth at the right hand of his Father, (and where he must abide, the holy Apostle bearing witnesse) till all his enemies be subdued under his feet and to bring backe his glorified body, and Deified soule, at the becke and word of every hedge Priest, into their sacrilegious Sacrament of the Altar; Surely a man need go no farther for testimony, seeing the Antichristian lowing of this prophane Bull, doth lively delineate, and plainly demonstrate that purple Harlot, which hath made all nations drunke with the dregs of her fornication, having seated her selfe upon the seven hils of Rome: I should be over troublesome to the Reader, to shake up all the turmpery, and rake in all the durt convayed in his Bulls belly: yet one thing more I cannot passe over in silence, namely for as much as the Pope perceiveth that his kingdome cannot long stand, but that Babell must fall, and Antichrist must be consumed with the breath of the Lords mouth; therefore with prudent care, and politicke circumspection, hee suffereth none to bee initiated into his holy Sacrament of orders, nor preferred to any Ecclesiasticall promotion, but hee is first bound by his hand, word, and corporall oath, to maintaine and defend the pompe, honour, priviledges, prerogatiues, and doctrines of the Sea of Rome, especially and namely such as are contradictorily repugnant to the written word of God: And that they shall persecute and impugne allthose (whether Prince or people) that shall bee adjudged Hretikes or Schismatikes in the Popes consistory: Consider therefore I beseech the gentle Reader, whether any Priest that taketh this oath (for they all take it) can be accounted a good Subject to the Crowne of England, but to proceed.

Many of the Traytors being put to the Sword, the Strangers banished, and the Provincials protected, as you haue heard; there were still remayning in action in Mounster (left for example to perdition) Fits Maurice the Lord of Lixnaw, Iohn fits Thomas, the brother of Iames, the late titular Earle, the Knight of the Glynn, and Thomas Oge a Geraldine, all which with their forces joyned in one, were not able to make two hundred men, lurking about the Mountaine of Slewlugher, and in the Fastnesse of Clanmorris.

---

CHAP. XIX.

False rumours divulged of the State of Mounster. The Lord President sent one thousand foote munitioned and victualled to the Lord Deputy. A Letter from her Majesty to the Lord President concerning the Earle of Clanricard. A Letter from Iohn Burke to the Lord President. A Letter from Iohn Burke to Sir George Thornton. A Certificate from a Popish Bishop in the behalfe of Iohn Burke.

THE President therefore, aswell to debarre these straglers from releefe, as to prevent all meanes of succours to Osulevan, if hee should returne with new forces, caused all the county of Kerry and Desmond, Beare, Bantry, and Carbery, to be left absolutely

Parte of the Barrony of Inchiquyn and within Inchiquyn wasted, constraining all the Inhabitants thereof, to withdraw their Cattle into the East and Northern parts of the county of Corke; these things thus effected, his Lordship signified by his Letters to the Lords of her Majesties privie Councell in England; that although the hearts of the Irish were no lesse corrupt then heretofore, and that nothing but the sword held over their heads could containe them in subjection: yet would hee undertake (God assisting) that no rebellion should arise in the Province, except the Townes (who grew daily into more deeper discontentments, by reason of the new Standard) should peradventure revolt, which in his judgement was unlikely. About this time it was vulgarly reported in England by some who had their tongues poynted with slaunder, and their hearts stuffed with malice, that Mounster was newly burning with fresh flames of rebellion, that the Vicount Roch, the Lord of Cahyr, and Cormock Mac Dermond had entered into open hostility, and that Tirrell was come againe into the Province, and had taken the prey of Moyallo from the Garrison at noone day; although the world may bee satisfied concerning these slaunderous reports, by that which hath beene already delivered, yet to giue more particular satisfaction to all, or to any that should make question hereof. First the Lord Roch he was never touched with the least spot of disloyaltie against her Majesty, yea such loyall constancie did hee alwayes embrace and practise, that in the vniuersall inundation of treasons, when all the Province in generall, and his father in particular, did combine against their anoynted Soveraigne, at that time, and ever since did hee continue himselfe within the lists of an obedient Subject, so that his Lordship herein was much wronged. Then for my Lord of Cahir; although it bee true indeed, that at the first hee did run the common fortune of the rest, and peradventure would doe so againe if the like occasion were offered, yet that hee did ever relapse since the Presidents government, is meerely false and untrue; yea such outward obedience hath hee professed, that hee hath brought to execution some notorious Traytors. And as for Cormock Mac Dermond, since his submission, hee was himselfe in person with Sir Charles Wilmot, at the late service in Glangarue, and lost thirty of his best men in her Majesties service in Carbry with Captaine Taffe. Lastly for the burning of Moyallo, there was no Rebelle that ever durst attempt any thing against that Towne, or any part of the Cattle thereunto belonging, since the Presidents first comming into the Province, and to demonstrate the feare that the Rebels ever lived in since the siege of Kinsale; I can assure the Reader upon certaine knowledge, that all the spoyles that the Traytors haue taken from the Subjects Conjunctim or Divisim, doe not amount to three hundred Cowes, but haue lived in their strength, spending upon the Spanish wines, and their owne victuals.

The Lord Deputy having occasion to employ more forces into Connaght, hee with the Councell of estate upon the eighteenth of Ianuary, wrote unto the President, to pray and require him to spare out of his List of Mounster (if hee might conveniently doe it) one Regiment of one thousand foote, with a competent proportion of victuals, which not many dayes after was acomplished. Also about this time, the President received a Letter from her Majestie; which although it doth concerne the Earle of Clanricard in his particular, yet that the Reader may informe himselfe, how much that noble gentleman was esteemed (and that worthily) of his Soveraigne Mistris, I doe thinke it meet to be related.

A Letter from her Majesty to the Lord President concerning the Earle of Clanrickard.

Your most assured constantly affected Soveraigne, E. R.

RIGHT trusty and well beloved, Wee greete you well, wee need not use many arguments to you, when wee resolute to recommend either man or matter, seeing you haue made so good demonstration of your obedience, and entire affection to performe our will and pleasure, much lesse then the person or causes of this noble man (our cosen Clanriccard) whose carriage here doth challenge our extraordinary good opinion, as his merite there procured your owne plentiful testimony of the same; even when all trees did shew

what fruits they bare : His comming over was to doe his duty to us, where hee was desirous (as other Noble-men haue done) to haue stayed some time, unlesse some occasion for our seruice should necessarily require his returne : Of which kind, because the one hath presented it selfe, by the going of our Deputy into that Province, where his possessions lye, and that the weake estate of his mother likewise falleth out to bee such, as (if Almighty God should call her before the same were better settled) many inconveniences might fall to the house by his absence, hee is now returned backe, with as much expedition as hee can : And therefore wee doe (as to one of our principall Councillors in that state) recommend him to you to be furthered and assisted in all his occasions, wherein as we know that publicke triall which hee hath made of himselfe (to the honour of the Nobility of that kingdome) whereof so many scandalous rumours haue beene spread, onely to invite our Enemies under that opinion of their ill affection, both hath, and will invite you to loue him, so wee doe thinke that wee haue missed our markes in George, if hee shall not haue the best fruits, which either your publike credit, or private friendship may afford, whosoever wee shall recommend as now wee doe this Noble-man (besides his publike desert) for many other constant professions of his humble and reverent affections towards our selfe : Let this therefore suffice for him, and for your selfe, of whom wee can say no more, then heretofore wee haue done, either of our good opinion of you, or of our gracious thankes, for all your great and honest services : Given under our Signet at our Pallace of Westminster the seventeenth of December, 1602, in the fiue and fourtieth yeare of our Raigne.

Now although the present estate of this Province, did promise a present reduction and future quiet, yet to make it appeare, that the false hearts of the superstitious Irish were no way addicted and inclined thereunto, omitting many instances that I might remember; I will recite onely certaine particulars concerning Iohn Burke, a gentleman of the county of Limerick, of whom wee haue spoken before in the beginning of the first booke, who much grieved (as it should seeme) that their expectations had beene frustrated concerning Spanish hopes ; this last Summer would therefore take a Iourney to the Court of Spaine, as a generall Agent to sollicit the King for supplyes against the next spring : And therefore suddenly leaving his wife (which was one of Sir George Thorntons daughters) and family, about the middest of December last fled to the rebels Campe, not doubting but from them to bee furnished with all necessaries for this his employment : at his departure hee left certaine Letters with his wife to bee delivered to the President, and Sir George Thornton his Father in law, declaring his intention for a Iourney into Spaine, but to disguise his treasons hee made Religion a maske, by pretending a pilgrimage to Saint-Iames, of Compostella and Rome ; but because his dissembling may the better appeare,

I will set downe the words of his own Letters written to the Lord President and Sir George.

*A Letter from Iohn Burke to the
Lord President.*

IF you remember Right Honourable (and my very good Lord) the first time I met your honour, how desirous I was to forsake the world, and to follow the service of God, from which determination I was (through the weaknesse of my spirit) restrayned by the simple perswasions of certaine of my friends; sithence which time I haue beene so inamoured with the world, that I did not spare to walke in all the wayes where hee lead me either of envie, malice, deceit, flatterie or falshood (as I doubt not but your Lordship in some degree noted, when through envie and hatred I haue (for to procure their deaths) accused the Lord Burke and others of certaine Articles of treason, and now being bound to satisfaction, I acknowledge mine error in speaking euill of my Neighbours, I haue as I said by all meanes to curry fauour with the world; so that by seeking to make my selfe a friend vnto the world, I was thereby made an enemy vnto God, but being now called to repentance by the especiall grace of God, I haue vowed to goe to the pilgrimage of Rome and Saint Iames; and doe assure unto your Lordship, that I will carry alwayes as faithful a disposition to the State of England (to whom I wish all honour, dignity, and prosperity) as any other of my calling, and doe desire your Lordship not to beleue any thing which should be said to the contrary: I haue left the little Lands and goods which I had with my wife, and doe desire your Lordship to mainetaine her in the same untill my comming: I would neuer come amongst these fellowes, but for fear my friends would perswade your Lordship not to grant mee your Passeport for to goe: But now seeing it that pleased your Lordship to grant mee her Majesties protection, I will remoue from this company, desiring your Lordship to send mee your Passeport for to goe to this pilgrimage, the which I will expect neere Corke. And now taking my leaue with your Lordship, I rest.

Your Lordship's loving Friend
John Burke.

A Letter from John Burke to Sir George Thornton

Right Worshipfull, and my very loving Father, for that I know you would bee much troubled in mind to thinke, what should moue me to depart thus from my wife, friends and lands, I thought good to tell you the very truth, which I desire you without any scruple to beleue; I haue taken upon me to be a Pilgrim for the space of two yeares. First I must visit Saint Iago in Spaine, and from thence to Rome: I haue sought the Letters of favour from certaine Priests in this Countrey, to their fellowes beyond the Seas: You nor my Lord President may not thinke that I goe to procure any mischief to the English State, to whom I should be more willing to doe good, than able to doe harme; I do not now speake unto you in the spirit of flattery or feare, falsehood, or deceit, or for any wordly pollicie; I speake before God, (and God knoweth that I speake the truth;) I doe not goe with any intent to harme any person, but onely to doe judgement upon myselfe, for a satisfaction unto God for my sinnes; the little living I haue, I doe leaue with my wife, the which and herselfe doe leaue to your fatherly care: And so I rest

Your Sonne

Iohn Burke.

Some man peradventure giving credit to these colourable protestations, would perswade himselfe that this professed Pilgrimage was the true and onely end of this his journey, and so should I, were not these vizards dismasked, and these frauds detected, by certaine Letters from sundry Priests, and Popish Clergiemen, found and conuaied to the President. I will not trouble the Reader with needlesse transcripts of these severall Letters, I will onely relate one or two, which may apparently convince his deepe dissembling, written from a Popish Bishop.

A Certificate from a Popish Bishop in the behalfe of John Burke.

NOs Mallachias Dei et Apostolicæ Sedis gratia Duacensis in Hibernia Episcopus, notum facimus Catholico ac invictissimo Hispaniarum Regi Phillipi, Domino Matheo de Oviedo, Archiepiscopo Dublinensi, et Metropolitano Hiberniæ: Omnibus Christi fidelibus, tam spiritualibus, sive regularibus, quam secularibus personis ac si proprio nomine nominara Horum Latorem Iohannem Burk, Nobile præstant virtutis virum propugnatore Hæreticæ pravitatis acerrimu, refugium, ac defensor' religiosarum personarum esse, & ob id versari inter Anglos veræ fidei desertores, in maximo vitæ, & bonorum que hereditario jure non sine multorum præcertim Catholicorum commendo, & utilitate adhuc possidet, terras petere alienas eo animi decreto vt aliquando in propriam reversus patriam, et patriæ miles et decus esse possit.

Proinde vos omnes pietatis et veræ religionis amatores, Catholicum Regem Philippum, Dominum Matheum supra dictos cæterosq cujuscung nationu conditionisue sitis, quos vna fides vnum baptisma, vnus spiritus adjunxit. Oramus, obsecramus, & obet est amur in Christi visceribus, vt cum prædictum Iohannem Burke, omni fide, omni auxilio, omni favoure, dignissimum Catholicum, de repub' optime meritum, accipiatis, benigneque tractetis. In cujus rei fidem & testimonium, Sigillum ac Chirographium apposui, &c.

Malachias Duac' Episcopus.

Another that calleth himselfe Fryer Simon de S. S<sup>to</sup>, hath these words, writing to the said supposed Archbishop of Dublin.

A Certificate from a Popish Priest in the behalfe of Iohn Burke.

*N*otum tibi facio, vt hoc invictissimo Regi notum facere cures harum Latorem Iohannem Burke, relictis bonis paternis te adire, quo illi ad Regem aditum præbeas sui temporis opportunitatem, ad peragenda negotia maximi ponderis & momenti, quæ vnanimis hujus regionis saluti conducunt, &c.

If then as in a former Letter hee tooke upon him this Iourney, to make himselfe an expert Souldier, whereby he might proue in time a Champion, and ornament to his Countrey, or if the allegation of the latter may bee credited, namely, that he hath business with the King of Spaine, about affaires of great moment and consequence, for the good of this nation, then are his owne pretexts of religion, vowes and pilgrimages, devised onely for a blinder to conceale his trayterous complots: To prevent therefore such mischiefs as might grow unto the State, from his sollicitations in Spaine; the President was content that Sir George Thornton should send a messenger unto him (being then in the Rebels Campe) to revoke and recall him if it were possible, from this irreligious expedition, which at last was effected by the perswasions, which his mother, wife and friends vsed unto him.

CHAPTER XX.

The Lord Deputie sent to the Lord President for men and munition, and himselfe to repaire unto him. The List of her Majesties forces in Mounster. Sir Edward Wingfield sent by the Lord Prisent with fve hundred foote into Connaght. The Lord of Lixnaw defeated by Captaine Boys. The Castle of Kilco taken by Captaine Flower. The Castle of Berengarry taken by Sir Charles Wilmot. Sir Charles Wilmot and Sir George Thornton left by the Lord President Ioynt Commissioners for the government of Mounster. A Letter sent by the Lord President from the Lord Deputy to the Lords of the Councill.

THE Lord Deputie understanding now in what state the Province of Mounster stood, directed his Letters to the President, requiring of him, that if necessary occasions of present service did not forbid, he would send to Athlone (for the warre of Connaght) certaine foote Companies and a proportion of victuals from Limerick, so much as forth of her Majesties store, there might conveniently be spared, and withall to repaire himselfe unto Dublin, from whence he was to take his Iourney into England: The list of Mounster consisting at that time of Horse and Foote as followeth.

The List of Mounster as it stood.

Of Horse.

Lord President ,	100.	} 200.
Earle of Thomond ,	50.
Captaine William Taffe ,	50.

Of Foote.

Lord President ,	200.	} 1900.
Earle of Thomond ,	200.
Lord Audley ,	150.
Sir Charles Wilmot ,	150.
Sir Richard Percy ,	150.
Sir Francis Barkeley ,	150.
Sir George Thornton ,	100.
Captaine Francis Kingsmill ,	100.
Captaine George Kingsmill ,	100.
Captaine George Flower ,	100.
Captaine Charles Coote ,	100.
Captaine Gawen Harvie ,	100.
Captaine Thomas Boyce ,	100.
Captaine Francis Slingsby ,	100.
Captaine William Stafford ,	100.

Although there was never weary Marriner in a violent and tempestuous storme, more desired to arrive into his wished Harbour, nor a virgin Bride, after a lingering and desperate love, more longing for the celebration of her nuptiall, then the Lord President was to goe for England, yet was hee content to deferre his private affections, in regard of the publike charge committed unto him; and therefore first hee sent for Sir Charles Wilmot out of Kerry, acquainting onely him with that Iourney, because his purpose was, having before hand had good experience of his suffi-ciencie, to leaue him in speciall trust with the government in his absence. Then hee tooke order for the satisfying of the Lord Deputie his demands, and therefore appointed Sir Edward Wingfield with five hundred foote, the three and twentieth of February to take his Journey into Connaght: And lastly, having taken order, how the other forces should be disposed, he tooke his Journey from Corke towards Dublin; about the beginning of February being newly come to Dublin, hee received Letters from Sir Charles Wilmot, that the Lord of Lixnaw having assembled some two hundred foote and twenty horse, in his Fastnesse neere Listall, Captaine Thomas Bois left by Sir Charles to command the Garrisons in Kerry, drew upon his quarter in the night, killed eighty of his men, tooke all his substance of Cowes, Hacknies, Garrans, and all his provisions of Wheate, Oatemell, and Butter; so that although his Company, was not all slaine, yet were they for ever after unable to assemble together in any number: about the same time also Captaine George Flower tooke in the Castle of Kilcow, being a place of great strength, and the onely Castle in Carbery that held out in rebellion; presently after this defeate, Captaine Bois was advertised that the Lord of Lixnaw his brother, Garret Roe Stack, and some other Provinciall rebels were in the Castle of Berengary; whereupon that night hee blocked up the Castle with a sufficient guard of men, that none should issue forth, untill the Governour his Collonell might be acquainted therewith: Sir

Charles receiving intelligence hereof, being then holding the Sessions at Limerick, instantly left the Citie, and taking with him by Sea two small Peeces of Ordnance, presented himselfe before the said Castle; the Warders and the rest within, perceiving no possible meanes to escape, yeelded themselues to her Majesties mercy: But the advertisement concerning the Lord of Lixnaw, himselfe failed, the remainder were all taken, the principals presently executed, and the rest were pardoned by the Lord Lieutenant at his coming to Corke: The Lord President having thus left Mounster, reestablished in a firme and vniuersall peace, by the assent of the Lord Deputy, having appointed Sir Charles Wilmot, and Sir George Thornton (Ioynt Commissioners) for governing the Province, prepared himselfe for England; but before his departure, hee made an ample relation to the Lord Deputy and Councell, in what estate he had left his Province, and the Lord Deputy and Councell having likewise declared unto him, the present estate of the whole kingdome, and also they gaue him large instructions, to negotiate with her Majesty and the Lords touching the affaires of Ireland, which done, the Lord Deputy upon the sixe and twentieth day of February, tooke his Iourney towards Drogheda, to parley with Tyrone, and to receiue his submission as hee promised, and performed, and at his taking of his leaue with the President, hee delivered unto him this Letter directed to the Lords of the Councell.

A Letter sent by the Lord President from the Lord Deputy to the Lords of the Councell in England.

MAY it please your Lordships; Although I am unwilling to informe you often of the present estate of this kingdome, or of any particular accidents or services, because the one is subject to so much alteration, and the other lightly delivered unto all that are not present, with such uncertaintie, and that I am loath to make any project unto your Lordships, either of my requests to you, or my owne resolutions heere, since so many things fall suddenly out, which may alter the grounds of either; yet since I doe write now by one that can so sufficiently supply the defects of a Letter, I haue presumed at this time to impart unto your Lordships that I thinke fit to bee remembered, or doe determine on: most humbly desiring your Lordships, that if I erre in the one, or hereafter alter the other, you will not impute it to my want of sinceritie, or constancie, but to the nature of the subject whereof I must treat, or of the matter whereon I worke: And first to present unto your Lordships the outward face of the foure Provinces, and after to guesse (as neere as I can) at their dispositions. Mounster by the good government and industry of the Lord President, is cleare of any force in rebellion, except some few unable to make any forcible head. In Leinster, there is not one declared Rebell: In Connaught there is none but in Orwurks Countrey: In Vlster none but Tyrone, and Bryan Mac Art, who was never Lord of any countrey, and now doth with a Body of loose men, and some Creaghts continue in Glancomkynes, or neere the Borders thereof. Cononoght Macguyre sometimes Lord of Fermannagh, is banished out of the country, who liues with Orwrke, and at this time Connor Roe Macguire is possessed of it by the Queene, and holds it for her. I beleeeue, that generally the Lords of the Countreyes that are reclaimed, desire a peace, though they will be wavering, till their Lands and Estates are assured unto them from her Majestie, and as long as they see a partie in rebellion to subsist, that is of a power to ruine them if they continue Subjects, or otherwise shall be doubtful of our defence. All that are out, doe seeke for mercy, except Orwrke and Osulevan, who is now with Orwrke; and these are obstinate only because they will not bee safe in any forgiuenesse. The loose men, and such as are onely Captaines of Bonnaghts, as Tirrell, and Brian Mac Art, will nourish the warre as long as they see any possibilitie to subsist, and like ill humours, haue recourse to any part that is unsound. The Nobilitie, Townes, and English Irish, are for the most part as weary of the warre as any, but unwilling to haue it ended, generally for feare that upon a peace will ensue a severe reformation of Religion; and in particular, many bordering Gentlemen that were made poore by their owne faults, or by Rebels incursions, continue their spleene to them now they are become subjects; and having used to helpe themselves by stealths, did never more use them, nor better prevailed in them, then now that these Submittees haue layed aside their owne defence, and betaken themselues to the protection and justice of the State; and many of them haue tasted so much sweet in Entertainments, that they rather desire a warre to continue them, then a quiet Harvest that might arise out of their owne honest labour: so that I doe finde none more pernicious Instruments of a new warre, then some of these. In the meane time, Tyrone while hee shall liue, will blow every sparke of discontent, or new hopes that shall lye hid in a corner of the Kingdome, and before hee shall be utterly extinguished, make many blazes, and sometimes set on fire, or consume the next subjects unto him. I am perswaded that his combination is already broken, and it is apparant, that his meanes to subsist in any power, is overthrowne: but how long hee may liue as a woodkerne, and what new accidents may fall out while he doth live I know not. If it bee imputed to my fault, that notwithstanding her Majesties great Forces, hee doth still liue, I beseech your Lordships to remember how securely the Banditoes of Italy doe liue, betweene the power of the King of Spaine and the Pope. How many men of all Countreyes of severall times, haue in such sort preserved themselues long from the great power of Princes, but especially in this Countrey where there are so many difficulties to carry an Armie, in most places so many unaccessable strengths for them to flye unto; and then to bee pleased to consider the great worke that first I had to breake this maine Rebellion, to defend the Kingdome from a dangerous Invasion of a mightie forraine Prince, with so strong a partie in the Countrey, and now the difficultie to root out scattered Troopes, that had so many unaccessable Dennes to lurke in, which as they are by Nature of extreame strength and perill to bee attempted: so it is impossible for any people Naturally and by Art to make greater use of them; And though with infinite dangers wee doe beat them out of one, yet is there no possibilitie for us to follow them with such agilitie, as they will flye to another; And it is most sure, that never Traytor knew better how to keepe his owne head, then this; nor any Subjects haue a more dreadfull awe, to lay violent hands on their sacred Prince, then these people haue to touch the person of their Oneales, and hee that hath as pestilent a judgement, as ever any had to nourish and to spread his owne infection, hath the ancient swelling, and desire of liberty in a conquered Nation to worke upon, their feare to bee rooted out, or to haue their old faults punished upon all particular discontents, and generally over all the kingdome, the feare of a persecution for religion, the debasing of the Coyne (which is grievous unto all sorts) and a dearth and famine which is already begun, and must of necessity grow shortly to extremity; the least of which alone, haue beene many times iufficient motiues, to driue the best and most quiet estates into suddaine confusion: These will keepe all spirits from setling, breed new combinations, and (I feare) even stirre the

Townes themselves to solicit forraine aid with promise to cast themselves into their protection: And although it bee true, that if it had pleased her Majesty to haue longer continued her Army in greater strength, I should the better haue provided for what these clouds doe threaten, and sooner and more easily, either haue made this Countrey a rased Table, wherein shee might haue written her owne Lawes, or haue tyed the ill disposed and rebellious hands, till I had surely planted such a Government, as would haue overgrowne and killed any weeds that should haue risen under it: Yet since the necessitie of the State doeth so urge a diminution of this great expence, I will not despayre to goe on with this worke, through all these difficulties, if wee be not interrupted by forraine Forces, although perchance wee may be encountered with some new irruptions, and (by often adventuring) with some disasters, and it may bee your Lordships shall sometimes heare of some spoiles done upon the Subjects, from the which it is impossible to preserue them in all places with farre greater forces then ever yet were kept in this Kingdome: And although it hath beene seldome heard, that an Armie hath beene carried on with so continuall Action, and enduring without any intermission of Winter breathings, and that the difficulties at this time to keepe any Forces in the place where wee must make the Warre, (but especially our Horse) are almost beyond any hope to prevent, yet with the favour of God, and her Majesties Fortune, I doe determine my selfe to drawe into the Field, assoone as I haue received her Majesties Commaundements by the Commissioners, who it hath pleased her to send over, and in the meane time I hope by mine owne presence or Directions, to set every partie on worke, that doth adjoyne, or may bee drawne against any force that now doth remaine in rebellion. In which Iourney the successe must bee in the hands of GOD; but I will confidently promise to omit nothing that is possible by us to bee done, to giue the last blow unto the Rebellion. But as all paine and anguish impatient of the present, doeth use change for a remedie: so will it bee impossible for us to settle the minds of these people unto a Peace, or reduce them unto Order, while they feelee the smart of these sensible griefes, and apparant feares which I haue remembred to your Lordships, without some hope of redresse or securitie. Therefore I will presume, (how unworthie soever I haue been) since it concernes the Province her majestie hath given mee, with all humblenesse to lay before your graue Iudgements, some few things which I thinke necessary to bee considered of.

And first, whereas the alteration of the Coyne, and taking away of the exchange in such measure as it was first promised, hath bred a generall grievance unto men of all qualities, and so many incommodities to all sorts, that it is beyond the Iudgement of any that I can heare, to prevent a confusion in this Estate, by the continuance thereof, that (at the least) it would please your Lordships to put this people in some certaine hope, that upon the end of the warre, this newe Standard shall bee abolished or eased; And that in the meane time the Armie may bee favourably dealt with in the Exchange, since by the last Proclamation your Lordships sent over, they doe conceiue their case will bee more hard then any others: for if they haue allowed them nothing but indefinitely as much as they shall meerely gaine out of their Entertainments, that will prooue nothing to the greater part: For the onely possibilitie to make them to liue upon their Entertainment, will bee to allowe them Exchange for the greatest part thereof, since now they doe not onely pay excessiue prizes for all things, but can hardly get any thing for this Money; And although wee haue presumed to alter (in shew though not in effect) the Proclamation in that poynt, by retayning a power in our selues to proportion their allowance for Exchange: yet was it with a minde to conforme our proceedings therein according to your Lordships next directions, and therefore doe humbly desire to know your pleasures therein. For our opinions of the last project it pleased your Lordships to send us, I doe humbly leaue it to our generall Letters: Only as for my selfe I made overture to the Councell in the other you sent directly onely to my selfe; and because I found them generally to concurre, that it would prooue as dangerous as the first, I did not thinke it fit any otherwise to declare your Lordships pleasure therein. And whereas it pleased your Lordships in your last Letters to command us to deale moderately in the great matter of Religion, I had before the receipt of your Lorships Letters presumed to advise such as dealt in it, for a time to hold a more restraynt hand therein, and wee were both thinking our selues what course to take in the Revocation of what was already done, with least incouragement to them and others, since the feare that this course begun in Dublin would fall upon the rest, was apprehended over all the Kingdome: So that I thinke your Lordships Direction was to great purpose, and the other course might haue overthrowne the meanes to our owne end of Reformation of Religion: Not that I thinke too great precisenesse can bee used in the reforming of our selues, the abuses of our owne Clergie, Church-livings, or Discipline; nor that the trueth of the Gospell can with too great vehemencie or industrie bee set forward in all places, and by all ordinarie meanes most proper unto it selfe, that was first set foorth and spread in meeknesse; not that I thinke any corporall prosecution or punishment can bee too severe for such as shall bee found seditious Instruments of forraine, or inward practises, not that I thinke it fit, that any principall Magistrates should bee chosen without taking the Oath of obedience, nor tollerated in absenting themselves from publique Divine Service, but that wee may bee advised how wee doe punish in their bodies or goods, any such onely for Religion, as doe professe to bee faithfull Subjects to her Majestie, and against whom the contrary cannot bee proved. And since, if the Irish were utterly rooted out, there was much lesse likelihood that this Countrey could bee thereby in any time planted by the English, since they are so farre from inhabiting well any part of that they haue already; & that more than is likely to be inhabited, may be easily chosen out and reserved in such places by the sea side, or upon great Rivers, as may bee planted to great purpose, for a future absolute reducement of this Countrey, I thinke it would as much avayle the speedy setling of this Countrey as any thing; that it would please her Majestie to deale liberally with the Irish Lords of Countreyes, or such as are now of great reputation amongst them, in the distribution of such Lands as they haue formerly possessed, or the state heere can make little use of for her Majestie; If they continue as they ought to doe and yeeld the Queene as much commoditie as shee may otherwise expect, shee hath made a good purchase of such Subjects for such Land. If any of them heereafter be disobedient to her Lawes, or breake foorth in Rebellion, shee may when they shall bee more divided, ruine them more easily for example unto others, and (if it be thought fit) may plant English or other Irish in their Countreyes: For although there ever haue beene, and hereafter may bee small eruptions in some places, which at the first may easily bee suppressed, yet the suffering them to grow to that generall head and combination, did questionlesse proceed from great error in the judgement heere, and may be easily (as I thinke) prevented hereafter,

And further, it may please her Majestie to ground her resolution for the time and numbers of the next abatement of the List of her Armie somewhat upon our poore advise from hence, and to beleue, that wee will not so farre corrupt our Iudgements with any private respects, and without necessitie, to continue her Charge, seeing wee doe thoroughly conceiue how grievous it is unto her Estate, and that wee may not bee precisely tyed to an Establishment that shall conclude the payments of the Treasure, since it hath ever been thought fit to bee otherwise, till the coming over of the Earle of Essex; and some such extraordinarie Occasions may fall out, that it will bee dangerous to attend your Lordships Resolutions, and when it will bee safe to diminish the Armie heere, that there may bee some other course thought of by some other employment, to disburden this Countrey of the idle Sword-men, in whom I finde an inclination apt enough to bee carried elsewhere, either by some of this Countrey of best repvtation among them, or in Companies as now they stand under English Captaines who may be reinforced with the greatest part of the Irish; That it may bee left to our discretion to make Passages and Bridges into Countreyes, otherwise unaccessable, and to build little Pyles of stone in such Garrisons as shall bee thought fittest, to bee continuall Bridles upon the people, by the commoditie of which wee may at any time drawe the greatest part of the Armie together, to make a Head against any part that shall first breake out, and yet reserue the places

onely with a Ward to put in greater Forces as occasion shall require, which I am perswaded will prooue great Pledges upon this Countrey, that upon any urgent cause the Queene may safely draw the greatest part of her Armie heere out of the Kingdome, to bee employed for a time elsewhere, wherein I beseech your Lordships to consider, what a strength so many experienced Captaines and Souldiers would bee, to any Armie of new men erected in England, against an Invasion, or sent abroad in any offensive warre: But untill these places bee built, I cannot conceiue how her Majestie (with any safetie) can make any great diminution of her Armie, Lastly, I doe humbly desire your Lordships to receiue the further explanation of my meaning, and confirmation of my reasons that doe induce mee unto these propositions: for the Lord President of Mounster, who as he hath been a very worthy Actor in the reducement and defence of this Kingdome, so doe I thinke him to be the best able to giue you through account of the present Estate, and future providence for the preservation thereof; wherein it may please your Lordships to require his opinion of the hazzard this Kingdome is like to runne in, if it should by any mightie Power be invaded, and how hard it will bee for us in any measure to provide for the present defence, if any such bee intended, and withall to goe on with the suppression of these that are left in rebellion, so that wee must either adventure the kindling of this fire that is almost extinguished or intending onely that, leaue the other to exceeding perill. And thus having remembred to your Lordships the most material poynts (as I conceiue) that are fittest for the present to bee considered of, I doe humbly recommend my selfe and them to your Lordships favour. From her Majesties Castle of Dublin the sixe and twentieth of February, 1602.

After the Lord Deputie departed, by reason of Easterly winds the President was stayed aboue three weekes in Dublin, during which time, every day Posts were employed betweene them, untill the twentieth of March, which was the day the Lord President set saile for England; the day following hee arrived at Bewmarris: at his coming to Chester, hee met with the lamentable newes of the decease of his good and gracious Mistresse Queene Elizabeth, for whom, (as he had good cause) he extreamely mourned: But two dayes following (being at Lichfield) he assisted the Major in the proclaiming of King James, which gaue him new life, whom I beseech God long to preserue and continue his Posteritie for ever, over his triumphant Monarchy of Great Brittain and Ireland.

Although my Worke bee finished, yet according to the course I haue held in the end of the two former Bookes, I may not omit to recount to the Reader the most memorable Services, and accidents which happened in this yeere 1602. In the Catalogue whereof I must first begin with the forces sent into Carbery with the Earle of Thomond; The sending of Sir Charles

Wilmot with his Regiment into Kerry: The Lord Presidents departure from Corke, with the Armie towards Donboy: His long abode at Carew Castle, expecting Munition and Victuals: The difficulty he had in his approaching towards Donboy: The defeat given to the Rebels: The arrivall of a Spanish Caravell in Beare, with Letters of Comfort, Money, and Munition from Spaine: The siege of Donboy, the winning and rasing of it: The Presidents returne to Corke, and Sir Charles Wilmots into Kerry: The flight of Iames Archer the Iesuite, and Conner Odrischall, into Spaine: The relapse of Sir Owen Mac Carties Sonnes: The Spanish Hostages returned into Spaine: The restraint of Cormock Lord of Muskery: His escape and reduction: The winning of the Castle of Mocrumpe: The defeat of Tirrell and his Bonoghs in Muskery: The sending of Sir Samuell Bagnall with fiftene hundred men to the Lord Deputie: The Service done upon the Knight of Kerry: The flight of Tirrell with his Bonoghs out of the Province: The defeat of the Rebels in Glangarne: The flight of William Burke with his Bonoghs, Osulevan Beare, and Connor Kerry out of Mounster: The overthrow of the Cartyes in Carbery, And the killing of the Popes Apostolique Vicar, Owen Mac Egan: The sending of a Regiment with Munition and Victualls for the service in Connaght: The defeat of the Lord of Lixnaw: The finall reduction of Mounster: The appointing of Sir Charles Wilmot, and Sir George

Thornton joynt Commisioners
for the Government of Mounster: And the departure of the Lord President
into ENGLAND.

* *
*

A Fair Simile of the Originall

The Kingdome of IRELAND
Devided into Fower PROVINCES
Lemster, Munster, Vlster & Connagh.

A TABLE ALPHABETICALL.

A

LORD Audley.	Fol. 151
Ardart Castle taken.	142
Sir Anthonie Cooke.	55
Articles betweene the Queene and Sir George Carie Treasurer of Ireland.	272
Allen Appesley,	444
Advertisements of the Spanyard arrival.	347
Armie encamped before Kinsale.	531
Articles of Composition betweene Don Iuan de Aguila, and the Lord Deputy and Councell.	438
Ardea Castle rendered.	695
Archer the Iesuite flies into Spaine	584
Army lodged before Donboy.	560

B.

Tege o Bryen slaine.	223
Ballitrarsnie Castle taken.	85
Balliragget.	48
Battel of Kinsale.	414
Berengary Castle taken.	693
Lord Barry joynes with Sir Charles Wilmot.	378
Lord Barry commands the Rising out of the Countrey.	650
Captaine Iohn Barry.	531
Captaine Tho. Button his service.	363
Tege o Brien makes an escape.	231
Iohn Burke makes his submission.	85
Walter Burke slaine.	223
Sir Thomas Burke.	658
William Burke flies out of the Pro- vince.	657
Ballihow Castle taken.	534
Sir Iohn Barkley his services,	223, 224
Sir Francis Barkely sent into Con- nacht	280, 354, & 416,

Brough burnt by Piers Lacie.	69
Beare and Bantry spoyled.	659
Sir Samuel Bagnall commaunded to stay with his Regiment in Moun- ster.	593
His service against Tirrell in Mus- kerry,	640
Baltimore described.	589
Bearehaven described.	595

C.

Cabrie O Conner	52
Cahir Castle rendred.	140
Carigfoyle taken by Iohn O Conner, rendered by him,	401, 120
Castle ni Parke rendered by the Spaniards.	386
Castles delivered by the Irish into the Spanyards hands.	400
Certificate of Don Iuan de Aguila into Spaine after his landing.	341
Commission to Roger Harvey for the government of Carbry.	447
Carties of Carbry submit themselves.	662
Clanwilliam spoyled by the army.	83
O Conner Kerry flies out of the Pro- vince.	658
Cloghan Castle rendred.	647
Castle-haven described.	587
Carriknesse castle rendred.	660
Cape Cleere castle guarded by Cap- tain Harvey.	421
Lord of Cahir.	612
Cormock Mac Dermond serues against the Spanyards,	362
Accused of sundry Treasons,	600
Committed to prison,	599
Plotted his escape,	603
Makes an escape,	633
Makes his submission,	637
His service.	662

A Table Alphabetically

Campe entrenched, & approaches made before Donboy.	562	Downings castle in Carbry taken.	578
Sir Charles Wilmot commands the forces in the Lo. Presidents absence.	653	Donmanus castle in Carbry taken.	546
Sir Charles Wilmot sent into Kerry	582	Dillon a Captaine.	149
Clement VIII. Pope his Bull for spirituall livings to Owen mac Egan.	670	Dorsies Island taken.	563
His Letter or Breve to Tirone and the Irish Rebellion.	664	Conner O Drischal flies into Spaine.	584
His Indulgence to the Irish in Rebellion.	667
D.		E.
Dermond Moyle mac Carty slaine.	540	Walter Ednie goeth into Spaine.	624
Dermond O Conner murdered by Theobald ne long Burke.	185	Edward Gough knighted.	503
Discourse betweene Capt. Roger Harvy, and Pedro Lopez de Soto.	494	Sir Edward Wingfield sent with five hundred foot into Connaght.	693
Lord Deputie raised his siege, and came to Corke.	446
Sickned in his journey to Dublin.	506
Sends for the Lord President with men, &c.	603
Doctors of Salamanca allow the warre of Ireland to be lawfull.	511	F.
Donghe Irish an Island.	548	Florence Mac Cartie made by Tyrone Mac Cartie More.	35
Dingle Castle rendred.	178	Fights with her Majesties forces.	53
Sir Henry Danvers.	354	Makes a submission to the Lord President.	62
Downings, a Lieutenant at Dorsies.	563	His demands.	ibid.
Downings.	656	Perswaded to goe into England.
Donogh Mac Cormock Cartie slaine.	226	Makes another submission.	170
Doneshed, and Donelong Castles rendred by the Spaniards.	480	His jugling.	167
Dodington a Captaine shott at Donboy.	574	Francis Slingsby.	148
Donboy taken from the Spanyards by Osulevan Beare.	482	False rumours of the state of Mounster.	681
Donboy fortified by the Rebels.	520	Forces sent into Thomond.	101
Viewed by the Lo. President.	558	Forts to be erected in Mounster	452
Besieged,	560
Battered.	568
O Donnels hastie march.	377	G.
loved with the Spaniards.	399	George Flower, Captaine.	352
Shipped for Spaine with others.	424	Sir George Bourcheir sent to Kilkenny.	49
His landing & reception in Spain.		Sir George Bouchier comes to Corke	354
Dyed in Spaine.	478	Sir George Thornton joynes with the Lord Barry.	651
Donnegall Castle in Carbry taken	584	George Kingsmill maymed at Donboy.	563
		Glancoyne castle surprized by Sir Francis Barkley.	153
		Glin castle besieged and taken.	117
		Gregory Castle taken.	535
		Geoffrey Galway Major of Limricke fined, imprisoned,	198
		And a new Major elected.	id. ib

A Table Alphabeticall.

H.		K.
Henrie Skipwith Captaine.	568	Kinsale summoned, and Don Iuans
Henry Malbie slaine.	659	Answered.	391
Sir Henry Folliot.	416	Kinsale Burgesses desire their Charter.	452
Husseyes Report of the Rebellion in Mounster.	258	Kinsale receiues their Ensignes of Magistracie.	648
Hopton dyed of a hurt.	383	Kilcow castle taken by Captain Flower.	603
Hostages delivered by Don Iuan , and their Names.	443	Knight of Kerry protected.	539
Hugh Mostian.	226	Defeated by Sir Charles Wilmot.	652
Sir Henrie Power.	56	Makes his submission.	ibidem.
I.		Kilcrey Castle and Abbey rendered.	602
James Fits Thomas apprehended by Dermond O Conner.	97	Kirton , a Lieutenant hurt at Donboy.	574
Iohn Power.	100	L.
Iohn Bostocke.	53	Loughguyrrre taken by the Rebels, and recovered againe from them.	82
Instructions for the Lord President of Mounster.	10	Listoel Castle besieged and taken.	175
James Archer , Iesuite.	44	List of the Captaines of the Spanish armie.	339
Instructions to the Earle of Thomond.	517	List of the Army in Mounster.	522, 691
Instructions for Captain George Blunt.	460	Lixnaw castle taken by composition.	533
James fits Thomas the titulary Earle taken prisoner.	239	Leam-con castle taken.	579
His Examination.	308	Lettertinesse castle taken & burnt.	ibid.
His Relation to the Lord President.	239	Laghlin O Dollie.	651
James fits Thomas &amp; Dermond mac Gragh make a narrow escape.	190	Lord of Lixnaw defeated by Captaine Boys.	693
Don Iuan de Aguila , his Declaration at Kinsale.	357	Letters Patents for Sir George Carew , to be Lord President of Mounster.	5
His Request to the Lord Deputie for shipping.	451	A Letter from the Lord President and the Earle of Thomond , to the Lords of the Councell.	42
Intelligence of the Spanish Invasion.	335	A Letter from James Galde Butler to the Lord President.	76
Irish in Mounster revolted to the Spaniards.	400	A Letter from James fits Thomas to Florence Mac Cartie.	72
Irish fled into Spaine , with their Names.	424	A Letter from the Mounster Rebels to O Donnell.	105
James Gold , second Iustice of Mounster.	11	A Letter from James fits Thomas to Florence Mac Cartie.	112
Iohn fits Thomas his practice to deceiue the Lord President.	592	A Letter from James fits Thomas to Florence Mac Cartie.	127
James fits Thomas the young Earle of Desmond commeth into Ireland.	155	A Letter from James fits Thomas to Florence Mac Cartie.	86
Returneth into England.	218
James Grace.	388

A Table Alphabetically.

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| Two Letters from William Burke ,and Moroghe ni Moe O Flartie tothe Lord President. 110,111                          | A Letter from Donnell O SulevanBeare to the King of Spaine. 408                          |
| A Letter from her Majestie to theLo: President. 155   | A Letter from the Duke of Lerma tothe Archbishop of Dublin . 467                         |
| A Letter from Redmond Burke to theLord President. 172  | A Letter from the Duke of Lerma toDon Iuan de Aguila . 470                               |
| A Letter from James fits Thomas toFlorence Mac Cartie . 145   | A Letter from the Secretary Ybarrato Don Iuan de Aguila . 468                            |
| Letters Patents for James fits Geraldto be Earle of Desmond . 159   | A Letter from the Secretary Franquesato Don Iuan de Aguila . 470                         |
| A Letter from Cormock Mac Dermondvnto Tyrone . 179  | A Letter from the Duke of Lerma toDon Iuan de Aguila . ibid.                      |
| A Letter from the Earle of Clanrickardto Theobald ne long Burke . 186   | A Letter from the King of Spaine toDon Iuan de Aguila . 472                                     |
| A Letter from the Spanish Arch-bishop of Dublin , to James fitsThomas . 200                                  | A Letter from the Lord Deputy andCouncell, to the Lords in Eng-land. 474                           |
| A Letter from her Majestie to theLord Deputie. 207  | A Letter from O Sulevan Beare to theKing of Spaine. 485   |
| A Letter from the Lord President tothe Lord Deputie. 211  | A Letter from Owen Mac Eggan toRichard Mac Goghagan . 553                                |
| A Letter from Redmond Burke to theL. President, with his Answers. 227  | A Letter from Iohn Anias to theLord of Lixnaw . 557                                      |
| A Letter from Tyrone to FlorenceMac Cartie . 233   | A Letter from Iohn Anias to Domi-nicke Collins . 556                              |
| A Letter from the Lords of the Coun-cell to the Lord President. 234   | A Letter from James Archer to Do-minicke Collins . 554                            |
| A Letter from the Lord President toher Majestie. 249  | A Letter from Donnell O SulevanBeare to the Earle of Carazena . 487               |
| Two Letters from James fits Thomasthe titular Earle to the King ofSpaine. 252  | A Letter from Donnell O SulevanBeare to Don Pedro Zubiaur . 490                   |
| A Letter from her Majestie to theLord President, touching baseMonies. 260   | A Letter from the Lo. President tothe Spanish Cannoniers in Don-boy . 529            |
| A Letter from Thomas Shelton toFlorence Mac Cartie . 299  | A Letter from Don Iuan de Aguila ,to Captaine Iuan de Albornos YAndrada . 407 |
| A Letter from the Spanish Arch-bishop of Dublin to Florence MacCartie . 300                                  | A Letter from her Majestie to theLo. President. 373  |
| A Letter from Tirone , James fitsThomas , Florence Mac Cartie , andMac Donogh to the Pope. 309 | A Letter from her Majestie to theLord President. 611   |
| A Letter from Mr. Secretary Cecill tothe Lord President, with SpanishIntelligence. 322                                     | A Letter from Don Iuan de Aguilato Tirone and O Donnell . 405                     |
| A Letter from the Lord Deputie tothe Lord President. 328  | A Letter from the Lord President toher Majestie. 453   |
| A Letter from the Lord Deputiesatisfactory to the Lord Presi-dent. 331  | A Letter from the Lord President toDon Iuan de Aguila . 622                                     |
|   | A Letter from Tege Mac CormockCartie to the Lord President. 595                          |
|   | A Letter from the Lords of theCouncell in England , to the LordPresident. 605               |

A Table Alphabeticall.

A Letter from her Majestie to the Lord President.	611
A Letter from the Lord President to her Majestie.	ibid.
A Letter from Captaine Roger Harvie to Pedro Lopez de Soto .	613
A Letter from Don Iuan de Aguila to the Lord President.	621
A Letter from the Lord President to Don Iuan de Aguila .	622
A Letter from O Donnell to O Conner Kerry .	621
A Letter from her Majestie to the Lord President concerning the Earle of Clanrikard .	683
A Letter from Iohn Burke to the Lord President.	686
A Letter from Iohn Burke to Sir George Thornton .	687
A Letter from the Lord Deputie to the Lords in England.	695

M.

Maurice Stack sent into Kerry ,	121
Treacherously murdered.	143
O Mulrians Countrey spoyled.	85
Mac Awley spoyled by Sir Francis Barkley .	193
Mocrumpe Castle besieged.	602
Taken.	634
Muskrey-quirke , and Arloghe spoyled by the armie.	189
Mounster , in what state after the Siedge of Kinsale .	509
Malachias the Popish Bishop of Kilmakow .	689

N.

Names of the Councillors of Mounster .	34
Sir Nicholas Walsh .	354

O.

Earle of Ormond taken prisoner.	42
O Sulevan repaires with Tirrell into Muskrey ,	634
Remaines in Beare .	319
O Sulevan More sent by the Lord Deputie to the Lord President.	152

Prisoner by the practice of Florence Mac Cartie .	88
Olerie slaine.	171
Owen Mac Eggan , the Popes Viccar slaine.	662
His qualitie and condition.	663

P.

Lord Presidents Letters Patents.	5
His letter to Iames fits Thomas .	93
Sent against O Donnell .	375
Surprised with a Feaver.	506
His opinion of a defensiuue Warre in Ireland .	628
Sends 1000 foot to the Lord Deputie.	682
Meets the Earle of Ormond at Clonmell .	188
Proclamation for publishing the new Money for Ireland .	272
Principall men in Tyrones and O Donnells armie.	378
Propositions made by Don Iuan .	423
Patrick fits Morris L. of Lixnaw died.	129
Preyes taken from the enemy.	527

R.

Roger Harvey .	52
Sir Richard Masterson .	ibid
Sir Robert Gardiner .	347
Sir Richard Levison his service at Castle haven .	402
Sir Richard Greame .	415
Roger Harvey died of sorrow.	462
Richard Power .	78
Regiment sent by the L. President into Connaght .	61
Reply of Don Iuan to the propositions of the Lo. Deputie.	142
Reasons mooving the Lo. Deputie and Councill to a Composition.	436
Sir Richard Percie .	70
His Service.	199
Robert Tent .	54
Rincorran Castle battered by the Lord President.	366
Yeelded, and the Spanyards received to mercie.	371
Lo. Roche comended for his loyalty.	681

A Table Alphabetically.

Andrew Roche.	255
Richard Ailward knighted.	503
Rancoliskey Castle taken.	583
Rathmore Castle rendred.	123
Rahane taken.	535
Ratho Abbey burnt by Sir Charles Wilmot.	179
Redmond Burke defeated by O Dwyre.	59
Richard Owen comes to Corke with a Message from Tyrone.	455
Sir Richard Wingfield.	347

S.

Spanish Fleet discovered at sea by Captaine Loue.	335
Spaniards land at Kinsale.	341
Spaniards make severall sallies.	411
Spaniards make a great sally.	395
Spaniards beate out of their trenches.	392
Spaniards landed at Castlehaven.	399
Spaniards how many transported out of Ireland.	444
Spaniards imbarqued at Kinsale.	482
Spanish letters intercepted.	464
Spanish Hostages licensed to depart.	588
Spaniards make three sallies	422
Spaniards defeated at Kinsale in the time of Richard the second.	649
Spanish ship arrived neere Ardea.	551
Spanish money distributed amongst the Rebels.	ibid.
Sessions held at Limerick, Cashell, and Clonmell.	188
Selby a Lieutenant,	656
Supplies of 1000 foot from England.	582

T.

Tirlogh Roe Mac Swiny.	574
Tyrone comes into Mounster.	35
Tyrone writes to the Lord Barry.	36
Comes with supplies to the camp.	75
Returns into Vlster.	40
Sir Thomas Norris.	3
Townes of Mounster required to send Companies of foot to the campe.	355
Earle of Thomond commands the Garison at Askeiton.	136
Marches with an army into Carbery.	516
Returned to Corke.	521
Thomond spoyled by O Donnell.	101
Sir George Thoruton left a Commissioner of Mounster.	694
Turrell desires a Parley with the Earle of Thomond, and fayles.	543
His men executed at Donboy.	577
Flies out of the Province.	654
Tho. Taylor hanged in chaines at Cork.	579
Tho. Oge makes his Submission.	652
Williaw Tasse Captain.	52
His Service against the Rebels in Carbery.	662

V.

Victuals delivered to Don Iuan.	444
Victuals &amp; money arrived at Corke.	210

W.

Warrant for the L. Presidents Patent.	5
Sir Warham Saint Leger slaine by Mac Gwyre.	39
William Saxey Chief Justice of Mounster.	11
William Power Captaine, his Service at Donboy.	574

A Catalogue of the severall MAPPES contained in this HISTORIE.

In the first Booke.

- |  |                                  |
|--|----------------------------------|
| 1 A Map of Mounster .   | Page 1.                          |
| 2 A Map of the Earle of Ormond taken prisoner, betweene pa. 42 &amp; 43. |                                  |
| 3 A Map of Cahir Castle ,.....  | betweene page 76, and 77. |
| 4 A Map of Askeiton Castle ,.....   | page 94, and 95.          |
| 5 A Map of Glin Castle ,.....   | page 112, and 113.        |
| 6 A Map of Carigfoyle Castle ,—.....  | page 120, and 121.        |
| 7 A Map of Castle Mange ,.....  | page 172, and 173.        |
| 8 A Map of Limerick Castle ,.....   | page 194, and 195.        |

In the second Booke.

- |  |                                    |
|--|------------------------------------|
| 9 A Map of the Siege of Kinsale ,.....    | betweene page 334, and 335. |
| 10 A Map of the Fort of Hallibolyn ,..... | page 425, and 453.          |

In the third Booke.

- |  |                                   |
|--|-----------------------------------|
| 11 A Map of the Army in Beare ,.....                                | betweene page 526 and 527. |
| 12 A Map of the Siege of Dunboy ,.....                              | page 558, and 559.         |
| 13 A Map of Muskrey ,.....  | page 600, and 601.         |
| 14 A Map of Castle-nigh-parke ,.....                                | page 638, and 639.         |
| 15 A Map of Limerick ,.....   | page 652, and 653.         |
| 16 A Map of Yough-hall ,.....                                       | page 680, and 681.         |
| 17 A Map of Corke ,.....  | page 691, and 692.         |
| 18. A Map of the Kingdom of Ireland , divided into foure Provinces. |                                   |

