INTRODUCTION

BY HIS GRACE THE MOST REV. DR. FENNELLY,
LORD BISHOP OF CASHEL AND EMLY.

After much patient labour, and careful perusal of long-hidden documents, the Editor of these interesting lists is to be congratulated on at last placing them before the public. He has made a valuable contribution to the history of our county, for which so little has hitherto been done.

The lists will be found interesting and instructive from many points of view. They are interesting inasmuch as they give the names of those who inhabited the County Tipperary two hundred and forty-five years ago; and they are instructive in this—that they bear testimony to a remarkable historical fact, illustrating the tenacity with which the Irish people clung to the soil of their native land, in spite of the repeated efforts of the Invader to alienate them from it.

These lists were drawn up less than twenty years after the slaughter connected with the Cromwellian war, and the clearances effected by the Cromwellian Settlement, and the wonder is that any Irish names appear on them. But, singular to relate, the vast majority of the names are those of the native Irish. In the Cromwellian Settlement the Irish inhabitants, except a few of the labouring class, were ordered to depart to Connaught, where possessions were assigned to them in lieu of those from which they were expelled, and their former holdings were parcelled out amongst the Cromwellian soldiers and adventurers. In this way the whole of the County Tipperary was taken from its lawful owners, and carefully allotted to English and Scotch settlers, proportionately to the nature of the services rendered, or the money subscribed to the expenses of the war.

The names of the new occupiers are given at length in "Prendergast's Cromwellian Settlement," and, comparing them with these lists, it can be seen that the Cromwellian soldiers and adventurers had almost entirely disappeared in the brief interval, and the Tipperarymen were back again in the homes of their ancestors. The short tenure of these merciless plunderers can be attributed mainly to the following causes:—First, they were unused to farming, and therefore they had neither the skill nor the industry which are essential to the successful cultivation of the soil. Secondly, they were located on separate portions of land, and in that way they became an easy prey to those dashing spirits, who did not go to Connaught, but took to the mountains and the bogs, whence they made nightly incursions into the neighbouring farms, and abstracted from them cattle and corn and other portable goods. This annoyance was too much for the late comers, and to avoid it, they sold out their goods and departed. Thirdly, many of the Cromwellian landlords kept the native Irish as tenants, irrespective of the law of Transportation. To these may be added several minor causes, amongst them the protection of the Ormonde family, which regained its ascendancy after the stormy times had passed away. But, notwithstanding all explanation, it is very singular that a plot designed and executed with such systematic care should have completely failed in so short a period, and that the native Irish were back again on the soil that belonged to them by the Law of Nations and by immemorial Right.

The lists will be found interesting to the general public, as showing the parish or townland in which the different families were then located. Some will be surprised at not finding their names occurring in their present neighbourhood; but most of the existing population is well represented in them. It is to be regretted that in the intervening centuries, the names of several families, who deserve an honourable place in our annals, have almost entirely disappeared.

The book is worth being preserved in every Tipperary household, and I have great pleasure in heartily recommending it.

✠ THOMAS FENNELLY.

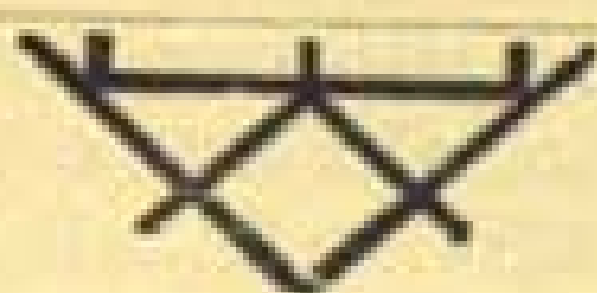

EDITOR'S PREFACE

THE following pages contain the muster roll of the inhabitants of Tipperary five years after the restoration of Charles II., and thirteen years after the surrender of the last organised Irish force. The Hearth Money Tax was introduced soon after the return of Charles II., as it afforded a convenient instrument for extracting the last farthing from a defeated race. When we consider the different values of money, then and now, it must have come with a crushing weight on the unhappy masses who hadn't got even time to raise their heads after the cruel defeats of an ill conducted war. From conversations I more than once had with the late Sir William Butler, I learned what his opinion was of the poor hand that was made by all, save O'Neil, of the Confederation fight. If he had lived, I believe he would have supplied one of the greatest of our national wants—an impartial and capable military history of the Confederation and Jacobite Wars. These Hearth Money Records are fairly complete for the two years, 1665-6 and 1666-7, which are necessarily the most important, if not the only important ones, since they comprise the lists of the first year that the tax was levied. They have been kept as carefully as they could be for a long series of years in the Record Office of Dublin. Tipperary is almost unique in having her roll complete, for those of most other counties are imperfect or non-existent. The small number of English names on this muster roll is a wonderful proof of the marvellous indestructibility of the Celtic race. Erroneous ideas have been propounded about the large Saxon plantation in Tipperary, but they must have melted away under the Irish atmosphere if they ever had an existence. It has, indeed, been suggested that these people changed their names, but where is the proof? They had a property in them. They procured for them the continued favour of the State, they were the title deeds of everything they had or could expect, they testified at once to their creed and their lineage, to their success in the past and their hopes in the future. No, no, there is no proof whatever of such a transformation and it is contrary to every motive and interest which actuate human nature. It must be borne in mind that the name of the head of the family alone appeared on those lists, so that minors found no place thereon, and we know that no immigrant's son could have been of age in 1665-6. In the case of the death of the head of the family the name of his widow would appear on the list. These Records have been twice gone over with the greatest care, once some years ago and again the other day, when I had the whole of them re-examined with the utmost exactness. Nor were these all. In the interval selected portions were gone over, through the courtesy of the Deputy Keeper, and his report to me was that they could not have been more accurately done by his own staff. They would have been printed long ago but that I could not induce the people of this county, whether at home or abroad, to supply adequate funds. The public spirit of Archbishop Fennelly, of Mr. Michael FitzLaffan, of the "New York Sun," of Mr. Thomas O'Connor, of London, and of the Hon. James Ryan, of Newfoundland, together with some few small subscriptions from others, have enabled them at long last to see the light. The reader is not to expect to find a novel on the surface of these pages, but deeper down many a potential epic lies enshrined, and if a Tipperary man, he will find therein the title deeds of his race and name.

Family names should be a property as well protected by law as any mere material property. The English may cast off their names with the same readiness that a man might cast off his coat, but to the poorest Irishman his family name is an integral part of his being, quite as dear to him as are his broad acres to the rich man. It is for this reason that we hope and trust that public opinion will ere long call for such action on the part of the law makers as will make it felony for any Board, Institution or individual to give to a child an existing surname or for anybody to appropriate such surname who has not in the male line a right to it. When the nation has time to bestow its thoughts on these matters, I am quite sure it will do so, and though the days of septs and clans be over, the restoration of some useful features belonging to them will receive an amount of attention which the nation cannot now afford to give them. In Father Woulfe's book the Irish equivalents of the names will be found, while in the little, but most important, work by Sir R. Matheson, "On the Synonyms of Irish Surnames," will be found the various renderings of each of the leading names. The original text has been scrupulously adhered to. The trifling differences in spelling here and there observable are in part accounted for by modern alterations in spelling. These will be seen at a glance by those acquainted with our surnames and place-names. In most instances, however, the errors may be traced to newcomers unacquainted with the strange names. The late Canon Cahill, of Tipperary, subscribed £3; the late Father Fogarty, of Toomavara, subscribed £1; Father E. Ryan, Kilcommon, £1; Dr. Corcoran, of Upperchurch, and a Tramore gentleman, 10s. each, and two others a like amount. I may add, in conclusion, that despite the utmost care, the writing has been reported to me by the two successive Examiners to be obviously fading here and there, so that 'twas a case of now or never.
