IN THE DAIL

Deputies Spent Day at "Dogs"!

"Irish Independent" Reporter

IF the Irish greyhound cannot yet claim to have attained quite the same status as the Irish horse, the main business of the day in the Dail yesterday indicated that the greyhound is forging ahead into a new place of importance and prestige.

Not everybody, perhaps may be interested in "the dogs," but for a good many years the greyhound has held a place of prime importance for his value in the export market as well as in the field of sport. In the boom period following the war, as Mr. Dillon recalled yesterday, exports of dogs averaged 8,500 a year up to 1949, their average annual value being over £800,000.

The market has declined since then, but that the greyhound is still a big national asset is shown by the latest figures for the present year.

For the ten months ended in October last, the number of animals exported—almost all of them to England — was 3,741 and their value was £397,163.

THE Greyhound Industry Bill, which has been promised for some time, held interest for deputies of all parties yesterday. Main purpose of the Bill is to put the industry generally on a better-regulated footing by the setting-up of a new seven-member Board. It also provides for the reorganisation of the Irish Coursing Club, which, subject to the general authority of the Board, will be recognised as the controlling body for greyhound breeding and coursing matters.

The House stood in silence at the commencement of business yesterday to honour the memory of a deputy who died tragically since the House last sat. In a tribute to the late Mr. John O'Connor, of Kerry, the Taoiseach said that sincerity, integrity and a deep love of his native country were his outstanding characteristics.

Little more than half of the 107 questions on the Order Paper could be dealt with in the hour allotted to them yesterday. The remainder will be taken to-day, the last day before the Christmas Recess.

The House will sit again, the Taoiseach announced, on February 8. Five new Bills, which had their Second Stages fixed for that date, included the Tea (Importation and Distribution) Bill.

DEALING with the Greyhound Industry Bill, Mr. Dillon said it was hoped it would give adequate powers to the industry itself, suitably re-organised, to develop on sound lines, commanding at once the confidence of the public and of the export market, without which the industry could not hope to survive. Defects in supervision which had been shown up in the past, he said, had made it clear that a greater degree of effective control was essential.

Abuses were also referred to by the former Minister, Mr. Walsh, who mentioned a general outcry that had arisen some years ago. Dealing with representation on the new Board, he urged the Minister to see that those who had failed to keep the sport clean in the past should not be made responsible for its administration in the future. On the question of the Board's personnel, on which Mr. Walsh intimated that he would table an amendment, Mr. Dillon explained that the four members to be appointed by the Minister would be selected from persons nominated by the Irish Coursing Club.

The possibility that bookmakers might go on strike, as it were, or boycott greyhound tracks was mentioned as "no idle threat" by Mr. O'Malley. Rather than that a levy should be imposed on the bookmakers, he thought it should be placed on the owners of the tracks. Mr. A. Barry advocated all possible steps to ensure that the foreign customer would get a reputable animal and come back for more.

IRELAND MEMBER

Unanimous Vote in Her favour

THE Security Council yesterday dramatically accepted a surprise Soviet proposal and recommended the admission of 16 new members, including Ireland, to the United Nations in a revised "package deal."

The Council met at the "urgent" request of Mr. Sobolev, permanent Soviet delegate, and heard him announce that he was withdrawing Tuesday's vetoes on membership applications of 13 non-Communist states, except for Japan. Russia had applied the vetoes because Nationalist China had vetoed Outer Mongolia.

Forty-one States—more than the required two-thirds majority—proposed in a joint resolution last night the admission to the United Nations membership, 16 countries whose applications were cleared by the Security Council earlier. Ireland became the second non-Communist country to gain admission. At the meeting voting was unanimous in her case, as well as in the case of Portugal.

After Mr. Sobolev's announcement, Mr. Cabot Lodge, U.S. delegate, proposed that Japan should be added to the Soviet list, but the Soviet delegate promptly vetoed this move.

Mr. Sobolev said Japan's membership should await a peace treaty with the Soviet Union. The Western Powers have already signed such a treaty with Japan.

When the other ten Council delegates had supported the inclusion of Japan, Mr. Sobolev said his veto of the U.S. amendment would only mean that the position of Japan was postponed to the next session of the Assembly.

Mr. Sobolev also excepted Outer Mongolia saying that it, too, should be put back to the next session.

The Council then began to vote separately on the remaining 16 applicants.

COMMUNIST STATES

The four Communist States admitted were Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania. The non-Communist countries accepted were Austria, Cambodia, Ceylon, Finland, Ireland, Italy, Jordan, Laos, Libya, Nepal, Portugal and Spain.

Albania was recommended by eight votes to none with three abstentions.

Jordan, Ireland and Portugal were recommended unanimously.

Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria were recommended by nine to none with two abstentions.

Italy and Austria, Finland, Ceylon, Nepal, Libya, Cambodia, and Laos were all recommended unanimously.

Spain was recommended by 10 to none with one abstention (Belgium).

LOUD APPLAUSE

When the final vote was announced the Chamber broke into loud applause.

Sir Leslie Knox Munro (New Zealand), the Council President, cried for silence. "The Security Council does not encourage such expression of opinion," he said, amid laughter. —Reuter and A.P.

Daylight Hold-up Attempt Foiled By Dublin Clerk

THE Garda were yesterday conducting a widespread search for two men and a woman who took part in an attempted hold-up of the cashier of Independent Newspapers, Ltd., outside the Hibernian Bank in O'Connell St., Dublin, yesterday morning. The hold-up was foiled by the quick thinking of a young accounts clerk from Independent Newspapers who was accompanying the cashier.

The thieves made their getaway in a large grey M.G. car, driven by the woman. The car, which had been stolen from Mr. G. Pollock, opthalmic optician, Grafton St., yesterday morning, was later found abandoned in Bella St., off Rutland St.

The cashier, Mr. B. A. Cullen, had left the bank at 10.45 a.m., carrying a leather satchel containing a large sum of money, when two tall, darkly-dressed, middle-aged men closed in on him from either side.

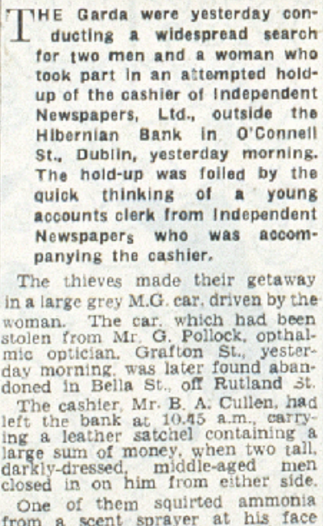
One of them squirted ammonia from a scent sprayer at his face while the second struck him a glancing blow with a length of lead pipe. They were on the point of grabbing the bag when Mr. Joseph Kavanagh, of the firm's accounts department, who had accompanied Mr. Cullen, emerged from the bank.

Rushing forward, Mr. Kavanagh seized the bag and ran back into the bank.

Deciding against further action the men ran to the car parked beside the pavement and drove off.

Garda A. Power, on traffic duty at O'Connell Bridge, endeavoured to stop the vehicle but the woman at the wheel drove against the line of traffic and turned down the quays in the direction of Amiens Street.

Meanwhile, in the bank, Mr. Kavanagh got one of the employes to phone the Gardai and a general alert went out to all patrol cars. Later the M.G. was spotted by a



Mr. Kavanagh

Garda at Coolock, but the car turned back towards the city.

HIT MAN'S THROAT

Mr. Cullen, who was later treated for slight ammonia burns, said that the man who squirted the ammonia at him was too close for it to be effective. "They then struck me with lead piping," he said. "I jammed my elbow into one of the men's throats as he tried to grab the bag. I think this momentarily put him off his balance until Mr. Kavanagh came to help me."

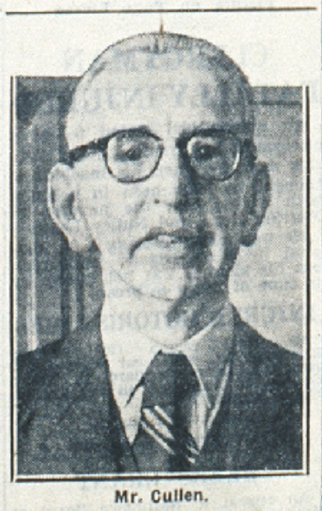
Mr. Kavanagh said that when he left the bank and saw what was happening his first thought was for the bag. "When I grabbed it I ran back into the bank for I knew that they would not follow me in."

In the brief time he had to survey the scene he thought the men were of middle-age and wore dark overcoats with the collars turned up to hide their features.

A workman outside the bank who saw the incident took the number of the car

MAN DETAINED

Last night detective officers led by Inspector J. F. Moran, arrested a man who had boarded the mail boat at Dun Laoghaire. He was detained in connection with the attempted robbery outside the Hibernian Bank and the smash-and-grab raid at Brereton's, Lower Mount St., last Thursday. He was stated to be an Englishman.



Mr. Cullen.

Followed Pattern Of Raid On Jeweller's

THERE is a similarity between yesterday's attempted hold-up and last Thursday's lunch-hour smash-and-grab raid at the premises of Mr. L. Brereton, pawnbroker and jeweller, Lower Mount St., Dublin.

On that occasion the two men who carried out the raid made their escape in a car driven by a woman. The car was later found to have been hired from a city hire service firm.

The Garda are still looking for Robert Francis Allum, 38-year-old Cockney, said to be in Ireland, who, they believe, may be of assistance to them in their investigation of the raid on Mr. Brereton's shop.

Woman Dies In Blazing Dublin Shop

A WOMAN lost her life in a fire at 22 Wood Quay, Dublin, yesterday, despite the efforts of a Garda and a number of men and of a 15-year-old boy to save her.

When the fire broke out in the shop premises of the City Smallware Wholesale Company on the ground floor, the woman, a customer, fled in panic upstairs, where she was trapped by the flames in a first floor room. Other people in the shop made their way safely to the street.

The woman was identified early this morning as Mrs. Mary Saunders (31), 371 Mourne Rd., Drimnagh. She was indentified by her husband.

She leaves four children, the eldest aged six and the youngest ten months.

The fire broke out at approximately 5 p.m. There were five people in the shop at the time: Mrs. Gertrude Scanlon, the owner, of 68 Kincora Road, Clontarf; her son, Desmond, who is the manager of the business; two assistants, Peter O'Connor (15), of 88 Mangerton Road, Drimnagh; another boy named John; and the woman who died.

RAN UPSTAIRS

Peter O'Connor gave an Irish Independent reporter a graphic account of the tragedy: "A woman standing near the counter touched rolls of film with her lighted cigarette and they immediately burst into flame and spread to bundles of candles and lighter fuel nearby," he said.

"Desmond tried to put out the flames but they spread too rapidly. Soon the area near the counter was all on fire.

"After further attempts to extinguish the flames, Desmond, Mrs. Scanlon and John ran out of the shop but the woman ran up the stairs. When I saw her going I ran after her and shouted: 'Don't go up there! Come after me!'"

"She did not do so and as the fire was spreading quickly I had to run out of the shop."

WINDOW BARRED

Meanwhile three men had seen the blaze. One of them, Francis Taafe, 34b St. Michan's House, saw the woman at the window of the first floor of the blazing building.

"She was shouting 'Get me out of here, for God's sake'" he said. "I got a ladder and put it up against the window. I climbed up and caught the woman by the arm. She shouted 'I am too fat. I can't get out through the window'".

Mr. Taafe said that the window had steel bars across it with very little space between them.

Garda Michael Fahy, of Kevin St. Station had been on point duty nearby. Seeing that the woman could not get out through the bars he told a lorry driver to bring his lorry towards the building.

Garda Fahy climbed the ladder, fastened ropes around the bars and attached them to the lorry. The bars however, withstood the strain of the pull and could not be dislodged.

BODY REMOVED

The Fire Brigade arrived at about nine minutes past 5 o'clock. While four jets of water were played on the flames, firemen wearing oxygen breathing apparatus forced their way into the blazing building. By this time the woman had died of suffocation.

Within half-an-hour the fire was under control. A fireman equipped with acetylene equipment climbed up to the window and succeeded in cutting away the bars.

Very Rev. J. Redmond, P.P., SS. Michael and John's, climbed the ladder to administer Extreme Unction to the woman. Her body, which showed no signs of burning, was removed by ambulance to Jervis St. Hospital.

BURNED RAPIDLY

An official of the Fire Brigade said that five sections of the Brigade arrived within minutes of receiving the call but by that time the fire had gained a firm hold on the whole building. He said that there were only six or eight inches between the bars on the steel framed window where the woman was trapped.

David Steinberg, 98 Kenilworth Park, a traveller, said he was going into the shop when he saw the flames and met the people running out. The shop was packed with a large quantity of Christmas novelty goods. Most of the stock was stored on the first floor where the woman lost her life.

Joseph McDermott, 27 St. Anne's Square, Portmarnock, and Charles Stedman, 329 D. Block New Bride St., assisted Garda Fahy in his rescue attempt.

Bag Snatcher Sentenced

Thomas Mohan (17½), native of Northern Ireland, who pleaded guilty to snatching a handbag from Miss Eileen Hackett, Dexter Terrace, Ranelagh, containing £7 in cash, was sentenced to six months' hard labour in the Dublin District Court.

Lorry Driver Fined

Liam Dowling (20), lorry driver, of Paulstown, Co. Kilkenny, was fined £10 at Naas for dangerous driving of a lorry at Naas, on Sept. 15. The lorry was in collision with a car driven by Mr. Denis Moriarty, Rathfarnham Park, Dublin.

Gaitskell Succeeds Attlee

Mr. Hugh Gaitskell

MR. HUGH GAITSKELL, 49-years-old economist and former University don, was last night elected Leader of the British Labour Party with a majority of 47 over the combined votes of his opponents, Mr. Aneurin Bevan and Mr. Herbert Morrison.

The ballot by Labour M.P.s resulted: Mr. Gaitskell, 157; Mr. Bevan, 70; and Mr. Morrison, 40.

The result was announced to Labour M.P.s at a specially called meeting of the Parliamentary Labour Party at the House of Commons. Mr. Morrison presided at the outset and after handing over to Mr. Gaitskell, tendered his resignation as Deputy Leader.

Mr. Gaitskell said that his election was not only a great honour but a great responsibility as well. One could not find oneself in such a position without a feeling of humility, both because of the immensity of the job and because of the people who had held this office.

Regretting Mr. Morrison's decision to resign, Mr. Gaitskell said he had been in many ways the main architect of the Party's policy in home affairs and had played a major part in building up the Party organisation.

Mr. Gaitskell now becomes the official Leader of the Opposition with the statutory salary of £2,000 a year which that post carries.

There are several surprising things about the result, the Press Association Lobby Correspondent writes. One is the comparatively high vote—70—of Mr. Bevan, who had been wrongly supposed by some to be losing ground a little. He got 20 more votes than some usually good judges expected he would get. Another surprise is the poor vote—40—of Mr. Morrison. This will be regretted by many older members who have felt strongly that Mr. Morrison's life of service to the Party had earned him at least a period as Leader.

MAY BECOME PREMIER

Mr. Gaitskell may be a future Prime Minister of Britain, the Irish Independent London correspondent writes. Wrangling over the party leadership, it is believed, will now be ended for a long period. Son of an Indian civil servant, Mr. Gaitskell was educated at Winchester College and New College, Oxford, where his friends included Frank (now Lord) Pakenham, and where he won a First in philosophy, politics and economics. From Oxford he became a lecturer for the Workers' Education Society and wrote some study booklets for the organisation.

Later he became head of the Department of Political Economy at London University. With the war he became Private Secretary to Hugh Dalton at the Ministry of Economic Warfare and later was his personal assistant at the Board of Trade.

With the end of the war and his election as M.P. for South Leeds, Mr. Gaitskell's career of rapid advancement began. Within a year of election he was appointed a Junior Minister as Parliamentary Secretary at the Ministry of Fuel and Power and in another year he was Minister, which office he held for three years. Then on the death of Sir Stafford Cripps he became Chancellor of the Exchequer. It was a meteoric rise from back bencher to Senior Cabinet Minister in the space of five years.

Fianna Fail Win West Limerick

Total Register, 33,318; Total Valid Poll, 26,843; Spoiled Votes, 186; Quota, 13,422.

First Preferences: M. Colbert (F.F.), 15,088 (elected); D. Jones (F.G.), 9,406; P. Aherne (Lab.), 2,349.

FIANNA FAIL won the West Limerick by-election yesterday, when their candidate, Mr. Michael Colbert, 55-year-old company director, was returned with a majority of 3,333 over his Fine Gael and Labour opponents. The result represents a gain by Fianna Fail from Fine Gael.

The by-election was caused by the death of Mr. D. J. Madden, who represented the constituency in the Fine Gael interest since it was formed in 1948 by the division of the old Limerick constituency in two.

The election of Mr. Colbert leaves the state of the Parties in the Dail as follows: F.F., 66; F.G., 49; Lab., 19; C. na T., 5; C. na P., 2; Indepts., 5.

Fianna Fail hopes of a landslide result, writes an Irish Independent reporter, were not realised despite an all-out campaign which, it was hoped, would bring such a decisive victory that the Government might be forced to consider a general election.

LITTLE CHANGE

The final figures in the by-election show little change from the General Election result, with Fianna Fail increasing their majority over the Inter-Party group by 883 votes. The Fine Gael and Fianna Fail votes show only a slight change, with Fianna Fail increasing their votes by 153 while the Fine Gael vote is reduced by 10.

The Fianna Fail candidates in the General Election secured a total of 14,935, which was increased to 15,088 in this by-election, while the Fine Gael candidates in the General Election received 9,416 votes compared with the Party's total of 9,406 this time.

The Labour Party vote, however, has dropped from 3,249 in the General Election to 2,349 and their candidate, Mr. Aherne, has lost his deposit.

The total valid poll decreased from 27,000 in the General Election to 26,843 in the by-election.

The successful Fianna Fail candidate, Mr. Colbert, goes back to Leinster House for the third time, having been elected for the old Limerick constituency for the first time in 1937. He was defeated the following year. He was a member of the Seanad until 1944, when he was re-elected to the Dail, but he did not seek re-election in 1948 following the division of the constituency.

Fianna Fail deputies now occupy all the three seats in West Limerick and it is the only constituency in the Dail in which all seats are filled by the representatives of one party.

The only previous instance of one-party representation in a constituency was in South Galway, where Fianna Fail at one time also held all three seats.

12½-HOUR COUNT

The result was announced at 9.30 p.m., just 12½ hours after the count commenced in the Rathkeale Courthouse. The proceedings were conducted in a quiet atmosphere, as the Fianna Fail victory seemed assured almost from the start, particularly when it was evident that the Labour candidate had not fared well.

It was noticeable that the majority of Fine Gael supporters gave their No 2 preferences to the Labour candidate, but his supporters in many cases voted No. 2 for the Fianna Fail candidate.

When the count was concluded a small crowd which had gathered outside the courthouse cheered the announcement that Mr. Colbert had been elected, and later carried him shoulder high through the streets to his hotel.

Fine Gael officials said that they were satisfied with vote secured by their candidate, although disappointed in not retaining the seat. They said there could be no doubt that they would regain it at the next general election.

NATIVE OF ATHEA

Mr. Colbert was O.C., West Limerick Brigade, I.R.A. Flying Column, during the War of Independence and is a cousin of Con Colbert, the executed 1916 leader, and brother of Mr. J. P. Colbert, former Chairman of the Industrial Credit Co. A native of Athea, Co. Limerick, the new deputy has lived in Dublin for some years and is Chairman of the Shamrock Machine Turf Co., Edenderry.

Mr. Colbert, proposing a vote of thanks to the Returning Officer, Mr. N. P. Shee, said that the result had been a clear and decisive verdict in favour of Fianna Fail. The people of West Limerick had expressed themselves in no uncertain terms and it could be taken as an order issued by them to the Government either to do its duty by the people or else quit office.

The campaign, he said, had been fought very cleanly with the exception of a few regrettable lapses at Ministerial level.

Mr. Jones, Fine Gael candidate, thanked his supporters for their staunch and generous support of the Inter-Party Government and his candidature. He also congratulated Mr. Colbert.

Mr. Aherne, the Labour candidate, joined in the vote of thanks to the Returning Officer and his staff.

LEADERS' VIEWS ON THE RESULT

The Political Correspondent of the Irish Independent writes that the Government were satisfied with the West Limerick result.

All in all, the news was taken quietly at Leinster House. Fianna Fail appeared to think that they should have done a little better, and Fine Gael were pleased that their supporters showed such solidarity.

Mr. de Valera, asked to comment on the result, said:

"The result speaks for itself. West Limerick has once more given Fianna Fail an over-all majority and a majority substantially increased. Fianna Fail are grateful and I believe the country has also reason to be grateful to West Limerick.

"We congratulate the electors and all those who worked for the Fianna Fail victory and are most happy to welcome our new member."

NEXT ELECTION

Gen. Mulcahy, Minister for Education and President of the Fine Gael organisation, said: "West Limerick is now represented in the Dail by three Fianna Fail Deputies. That situation is bound to be radically changed at the next General Election.

"The voting position in the constituency is unaltered since last year. The Fine Gael position is strongly maintained. Its organisation is well fitted to continue to serve the interests of the constituency and to uphold the spirit of Inter-Party co-operation which is essential for the economic progress and political strength of the country."

The Labour Party made no official statement but members of the Party at Leinster House said that the result was not unexpected. The candidate, they said, had a late start and might have lost votes on that account.

In any case, they added, the smaller political parties always were at a disadvantage with the big parties in a by-election.

INVESTIGATION OF DR. JOHN

The former Bonn intelligence chief, Dr. Otto John, knew he would have to face accusations of treason when he returned from Communist East Germany, a West German Government spokesman said yesterday.

The investigation continued behind locked doors, but an Interior Ministry spokesman said that no formal charges have yet been preferred against Dr. John and that he would probably be questioned for "several more days." He added that if the questioning revealed concrete evidence that Dr. John had committed treason he would be charged.

The 46-years-old Dr. John was chief of the West German counter-espionage bureau for four years when he suddenly fled to Communist East Germany on July 20, 1954. After 16 months in the Soviet Zone he dramatically returned to West Germany on Monday.
